SeTech Board Votes 7-4 To Acquire Pershing Campus

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

On a 7-4 vote, the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College area board Tuesday authorized staff negotiations to acquire Pershing College "by purchase, gift or lease."

The resolution said if SeTech acquires the defunct Beatrice campus, offered by the University of Nebraska Foundation, then SeTech's Fairbury campus programs will be "phased out and/or closed" and moved to Pershing.

The negotiating terms and conditions allowed to Area President Robert S. Eicher, limited to a payout of about $35,800 and prohibiting any requirement of matching state or local funds, will still be subject to later board approval.

Closed since 1971, Pershing — with its 70 acres, five buildings and contents worth an estimated $2.5 million — was given free last December to the foundation. Its board offered the campus free to SeTech, except for an estimated $35,800 reimbursement to recover costs incurred since then.

Board members voting for the resolution offered by Lincolnite Don Nielsen included Chairman Robert Wekesser, Lincoln; Vice Chairman G. Alan Dunlap, Milford; Loretta Draper, Plattsmouth; Gary Carstens, Beatrice; Katherine Brauer, Lincoln; Earl Kraft, Lincoln, and Nielsen.

Those voting no included Ted Doyle, Fairbury; Marge Haessler, Wahoo; Betty Schlaphoff, Waverly, and Lloyd Wright, Reynolds.

Renovation Costs Revised

Approved after an executive session in which acquisition strategy was discussed, the resolution notes that estimated expenses to renovate Pershing are $185,000. That indicates part of Eicher's and consultants' earlier estimates of $220,000 would be delayed.

While the resolution states the board deems necessary a campus offering vocational - technical - educational programs in the southern part of the area, it contines:

"The Fairbury campus is not fully and adequately serving the needs of the students and citizens" in the 15-county area "because of costs, both capital and operational, required for its maintenance in view of the declining enrollment and projected decline in student-age population" in the Fairbury area.

The resolution said SeTech's "terms and conditions required for acquiring the Pershing campus will aid in carrying out the Southeast Community College programs" and thus benefit the area.

Sen. Richard Maresh of Milligan, one of six persons who testified prior to the board action, said, "I don't think it was the intent of the Legislature to give this much power, to change campuses" to the technical community college areas in a 1975 reorganization law.

Local Control 'Changed'

The college areas' local control "will be changed if this action (to acquire Pershing) is taken," Maresh said, declaring their governance "could go back to state control, if the Legislature feels you have overstepped your bounds."

SeTech Board attorney Doug Curry later explained that the law, LB344, permits the college to purchase land and accept gifts if no matching funds are required and if programs aren't duplicated; thus, accepting Pershing would require closing the nearby Fairbury campus.

Maresh and two Fairburians — a minister and faculty member who cited strong local support — urged improving the "deteriorating" campus by spending the money on it that moving to Pershing would require.

Three Beatrice residents, including a Chamber of Commerce officer, cited the growth opportunity Pershing allows SeTech and a larger number of area residents. Use of additional community facilities was offered for program expansion.

Board member Doyle drew applause after a long appeal to reject the Pershing offer and continue operating Fairbury. He based his statements on his own interviews with numerous individuals throughout the area. Doyle said the move to Pershing would be costly, promises insufficient building uses and would antagonize area residents and the Legislature, possibly resulting in reduced state aid.

Kraft said 90% of his Lincoln constituents favored the Pershing acquisition. Nielsen, citing a reaction to opportunity and challenge for change, said the decision should Satisfy southeast Nebraskans, not just Fairbury residents.

Greater Potential

Nielsen said debt-free Pershing would offer SeTech a bigger population base, central location and potential for expanded educational services, all with better use of limited resources.

Dunlap and Wekesser expressed concern about sinking money into the debt-ridden Fairbury dorm — interest bringing the $575,000 bond obligation ultimately to more than $1 million — instead of programs.

It was estimated it could take up to two months to complete negotiations, for a final board decision on Pershing.

After the meeting, Fairbury Journal-News publisher William C. Nuckolls told reporters the board decision Tuesday doesn't end the issue and promised to take it to the Legislature and the courts if necessary.

Protection To Be Revised

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Secret Service is drawing up new protective procedures for President Ford, who insisted Tuesday he will not become a hostage of his office because of would-be assassins.

"At least partial recommendations" will be submitted to the President before he embarks on his next trip out of Washington on Sept. 30, said presidential counsel Philip Buchen. On Monday, a woman in San Francisco allegedly fired a shot at the President.

Buchen said the recommendations probably would not be made public.

The assassination attempt prompted congressional leaders and the Treasury Department to move up by three months the date at which qualified presidential candidates receive bodyguards — to Oct. 1.

Treasury Secretary William E. Simon, in whose jurisdiction the Secret Service falls, said "an outside evaluation of protective intelligence procedures has been redirected" to two recent attempts on Ford's life.

In San Francisco, meanwhile, police said the Secret Service had been warned that the woman accused of trying to shoot the President had threatened to "test the system."

Charles Barca, chief of inspectors, said the protective agency was asked if it wanted the woman, Sara Jane Moore, held and that the reply was: "It won't be necessary, we'll go talk to her."

Mrs. Moore was arrested outside the St. Francis Hotel on Monday after she allegedly fired a .38-caliber pistol at the President. The gun was deflected and Ford was unhurt.

The Secret Service would not comment on Barca's statement. Nor was there any confirmation for the claim by Sen. Joseph Montoya, D-N.M., that Mrs. Moore had pleaded to be arrested on the day before Ford's San Francisco appearance.

"I have no knowledge of such conversation between Mrs. Moore and the police department" said San Francisco police Capt. Bill O'Connor.

Inspector Jack O'Shea said Mrs. Moore, 45, called him Saturday. "She said she might go down to Stanford and test the system," he added. "She never clarified or explained it."

Ford spoke at Stanford, on the peninsula south of San Francisco, on Saturday and the sheriff's department was told to look out for her. But by then she had been arrested in San Francisco on a misdemeanor charge of carrying a .44-caliber pistol, which was seized.

CIA Director William E. Colby said Tuesday that there are "no indications of any international aspect" to the assassination attempt. He spoke with reporters following a closed-door appearance before the Senate Armed Services Committee.

The Democratic and Republican congressional leaders who serve on a committtee which makes recommendations about protection of candidates, held an urgent meeting and decided on the Oct. 1 date.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield and his Republican counterpart, Hugh Scott, said all candidates certified by the Federal Election Commission as eligible for matching grants for their campaigns, will be offered protection. Candidates would not have to accept.

Sen. Montoya had said it was Mrs. Moore's request to be placed in protective custody that prompted the Secret Service to interview her Sunday night. The service said it found "she was not of sufficient protective interest to warrant surveillance during the President's visit."

"The fact is that they did not follow up," said Montoya, head of the committee that handles Secret Service funds. He announced his panel will begin hearings next Tuesday or Wednesday

Although official Treasury spokesmen declined to expand on Simon's statement, other sources said the departmental evaluation is focusing on the Secret Service system for determining in advance who might be a threat to the President or other officials.

The evaluation, which will be conducted by consultants from outside the federal government, will go into how the Secret Service collects information on potential threats and what criteria it uses to weed out people who don't seem like serious threats.

Ford is tentatively scheduled to speak in Chicago and Evanston, Ill., on Tuesday.

Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Monday's incident, in front of the St. Francis Hotel in San Francisco, has not changed the President's belief that he should continue travel.

The alternative, Nessen said, would be "putting the President in the Oval Office and keeping him hostage there for four years."

Public Schools Budget Questioned By Auditor

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

A $587,000 "understatement" by the Lincoln Public Schools of state funding is being investigated by State Auditor Ray A. C. Johnson.

Johnson said Tuesday that a routine examination of budget documents by his staff revealed the school district failed to reflect an unanticipated jump in income from state school lands this past school year.

A Lincoln Public Schools fiscal officer, however, said state auditors have misinterpreted the budget document and no discrepancy exists at all.

"Any inference that we didn't report everything is wrong," Robert Den Hartog, Lincoln Public Schools' finance administrator, replied.

Budget Statement

The disagreement arises from a budget statement containing the present and past two years' budgets. The form, prepared some time after the Lincoln Board of Education adopted its 1975-76 budget in July, lists income from certain state funds at $780,000 for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1975. The column containing the figure is headed "actual and estimated."

However, the school district received a $1.3 million check, dated March 19, 1975, to cover the district's share of school land funds.

Conceivably, such an understatement, if it actually is one, could force the school district's 1975-76 property tax higher than necessary.

Clarification Asked

Johnson said he has written Lincoln Public Schools officials a letter seeking a clarification.

If it turns out that the $587,000 understatement is real, Johnson said there is little he can do other than call it to the public's attention or ask the district to correct their budgeting process.

A taxpayer could initiate a lawsuit, he said; however, that would take too long to get any adjustment in the mill levy.

"That's why I supported a bill two years ago for administrative hearings when such things occur," he said. "When a taxpayer goes to a budget hearing, he only gets this (budget) sheet."

Suit Only Recourse

If that information proves to be wrong later, the taxpayers' only recouse is a court suit, Johnson said.

Den Hartog had not seen a copy of the document in question when interviewed. At first, he attributed the discrepancy to a "transfer error."

He said the figures listed for 1974-75 school year were only estimates, since the school year did not end until Aug. 31.

Although the column containing the figures was headed "actual and estimated," Den Hartog said the data given were only estimates and were not intended to reflect actual revenue.

"Those figures have nothing to do with actual expenses," he said.

'Timing Misjudged'

"The auditor who believes he's found something has misjudged the timing. I don't see where the issue is."

Although the district experienced an increase in educational lands income, Den Hartog said the district did not receive some special education funds from the state that it had expected. That would offset any increase in educational lands income, he said.

Patty Says SLA Drove Her Insane

UPI

HEIRESS . . . on way to hearing.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst swore Tuesday that she was driven to insanity by Symbionese Liberation Army kidnapers who tortured her mentally and physically.

Miss Hearst, in a startling written affidavit, said she did not willingly join the SLA and had returned to the San Francisco area to discover whether her parents still loved her. She said the radical band locked her in a closet for several weeks, then forced her to help rob a bank on threat of instant execution if she disobeyed.

The written testimony did not seek to explain Patty's apparent show of radical ardor since her arrest — clenched first salutes, greetings to radical comrades, a self-description as urban guerrilla on a prison form. Instead, the document said she still may be insane.

"Her recollection of everything that transpired from shortly after the bank incident up to the time that she was arrestd, has been as though she lived in a fog . . . in a perpetual state of terror," the affidavit said.

Her parents suggested she be hospitalized for mental treatment and be examined by a psychiatrist familiar with prisoner-of-war brainwashing.

Miss Hearst, 21, captured by the FBI last Thursday, a year and a half after her kidnaping, appeared in court Monday to seek reduction in her bail.

A federal court judge on Friday revoked bail, but said he would consider arguments that she be allowed to go free on bond.

U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter delayed consideration of that question pending the examination by court-appointed psychiatrists and ordered a progress report by next Tuesday.

The slender red-haired heiress sat mute beside her attorneys, her face frozen in the same stony expression she has maintained in court since her arrest. Asked by Judge Carter whether she wished to comment, she shook her head no, but did not speak.

Miss Hearst's affidavit detailed only the three-month period after her Feb. 4, 1974, kidnaping The narrative ended after the April 1974 robbery of the Hibernia Bank in San Francisco during which she was photographed wielding an automatic rifle.

After that, the statement said, her mind is blank.

It was in succeeding months that the SLA sent tapes from Miss Hearst announcing she had joined the SLA, calling her family "pigs" and declaring she was now "Tania," a revolutionary.

"She has attempted to reconstruct the events which intervened between the bank episode and her present situation," the affidavit said, "but the very prospect of going back over so painful and terrible

Beef Prices Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retail beef prices dropped 3.4% last month, the first decline since March, but pork set another record at supermarket counters, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

The department said beef averaged less than $1.56 per pound on an all-cut basis in retail stores last month, down from a record of $1.61 in July.

But pork rose 4.5% to another peak of more than $1.50 a pound at retail counters, up from less than $1.44 in July. Compared with a year earlier, beef prices were up 8.4%, and pork 38.2%.

Preliminary surveys showed the trends continued this month, with beef declining further and pork continuing to rise. By Sept. 6, according to USDA experts, retail beef was less than $1.53 a pound while pork was more than $1.53.

Man Sought For Questioning Not Murder Suspect

By GORDON WINTERS
Star Staff Writer

Although police are searching for a man wanted for questioning in the Surber-Simpson case, the man is not a murder suspect, Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners said Tuesday.

Lahners said the man is being sought because he was seen in the area of the railroad tracks south of the State Fairgrounds on several days between Aug. 30, when the two boys disappeared, and Sept. 8, when Jon Simpson's body was found.

Because authorities have no evidence making him a suspect, Lahners did not release the man's name.

Few other developments in the case have been made since Jon Simpson's body, bearing several stab wounds that caused his death, was found Monday in a railroad hopper car, Lahners said Tuesday.

He said investigators are still pursuing leads which developed "in part" from the discovery of the 13-year-old Simpson boy two weeks after the body of his companion, Jacob Surber, 12, was found Sept. 8 in a dirt drainage ditch south of the fairgrounds.

Investigators, including a team from the Nebraska State Patrol's mobile crime laboratory, were searching the railroad siding at which the railroad hopper car was parked between Aug. 29 and Sept. 3.

Lahners said the searchers found nothing that could have been a weapon. Searchers did find blankets and a sleeping bag, but had no reason to link them with the crime, police said.

Lahners said he still has received no detailed information on what repairs were done on the rail hopper car in Council Bluffs, although he repeated that he believes it was welding on the outside of the car.

The car was moved from the siding near the fairgrounds to Council Bluffs on Sept. 3. Last week it was moved back to Lincoln, and over the weekend it was moved to a siding near Gooch's Mill, 540 South St., where the Simpson boy's body was found inside.

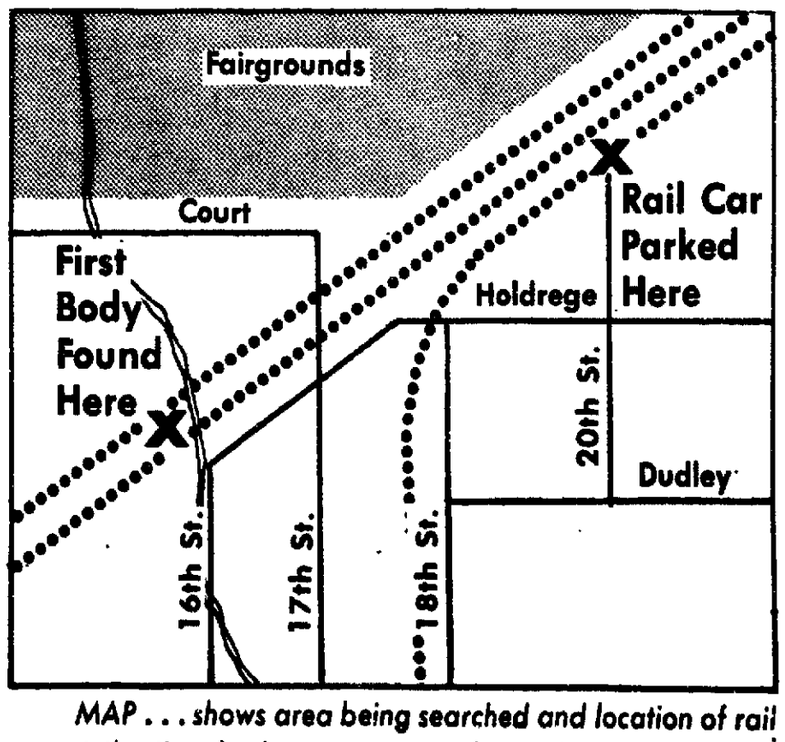

Police said the car has been standing in the downtown rail yards for several days. Lahners said investigators still have found nothing on or in the car that is useful in the piecing together of what happened.

Lincoln police say they have spent more than 1,500 man-hours on the case since the Surber boy's body was found. That includes three days of searching by 24 men.

Lahners said that five lie detector tests have been given in the case, but that police have no one he considers a suspect.

Police said Thursday that 12 girls and boys between the ages of 10 and 15 are currently missing from Lincoln. The earliest unsolved case was reported July 13, police said. That youth has been seen several times since then, however, police said.

Police said they have no reason to suspect foul play in any of those cases.

MAP . . . shows area being searched and location of rail car at the time body was apparently put in it.

SeTech Board Votes 7-4 To Acquire Pershing Campus

On a 7-4 vote, the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College area board Tuesday authorized staff negotiations to acquire Pershing College "by purchase, gift or lease."

Although police are searching for a man wanted for questioning in the Surber-Simpson case, the man is not a murder suspect, Lancaster County Atty. Ron Lahners said Tuesday.

Lahners said the man is being sought because he was seen in the area of the railroad tracks south of the State Fairgrounds on several days between Aug. 30, when the two boys disappeared, and Sept. 8, when Jon Simpson's body was found.

Because authorities have no evidence making him a suspect, Lahners did not release the man's name.

Few other developments in the case have been made since Jon Simpson's body, bearing several stab wounds that caused his death, was found Monday in a railroad hopper car, Lahners said Tuesday.

He said investigators are still pursuing leads which developed "in part" from the discovery of the 13-year-old Simpson boy two weeks after the body of his companion, Jacob Surber, 12, was found Sept. 8 in a dirt drainage ditch south of the fairgrounds.

Investigators, including a team from the Nebraska State Patrol's mobile crime laboratory, were searching the railroad siding at which the railroad hopper car was parked between Aug. 29 and Sept. 3.

Lahners said the searchers found nothing that could have been a weapon. Searchers did find blankets and a sleeping bag, but had no reason to link them with the crime, police said.

Lahners said he still has received no detailed information on what repairs were done on the rail hopper car in Council Bluffs, although he repeated that he believes it was welding on the outside of the car.

The car was moved from the siding near the fairgrounds to Council Bluffs on Sept. 3. Last week it was moved back to Lincoln, and over the weekend it was moved to a siding near Gooch's Mill, 540 South St., where the Simpson boy's body was found inside.

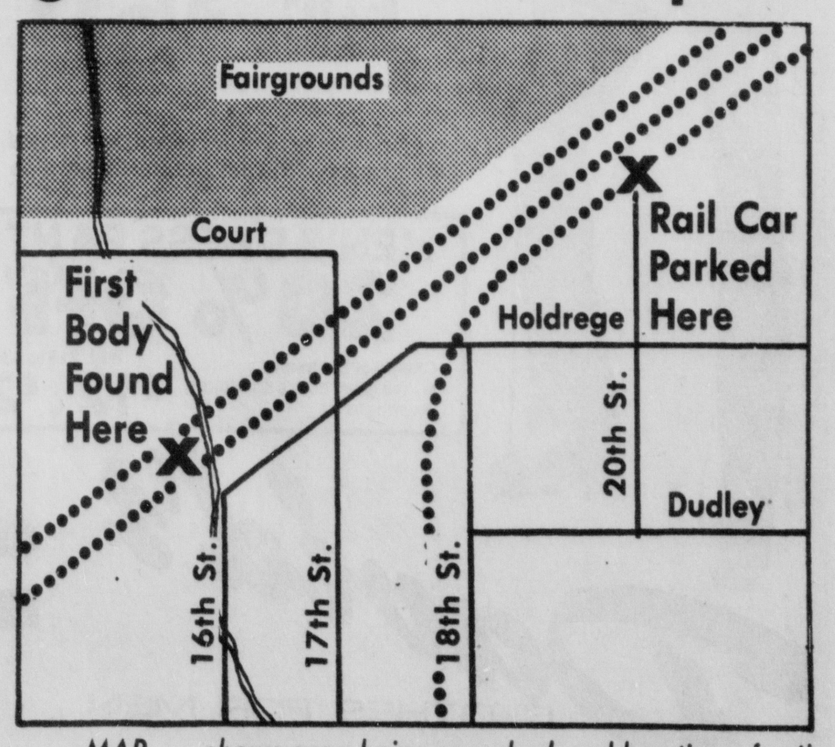

Police said the car has been standing in the downtown rail yards for several days. Lahners said investigators still have found nothing on or in the car that is useful in the piecing together of what happened.

Lincoln police say they have spent more than 1,500 man-hours on the case since the Surber boy's body was found. That includes three days of searching by 24 men.

Lahners said that five lie detector tests have been given in the case, but that police have no one he considers a suspect.

Police said Thursday that 12 girls and boys between the ages of 10 and 15 are currently missing from Lincoln. The earliest unsolved case was reported July 13, police said. That youth has been seen several times since then, however, police said.

Police said they have no reason to suspect foul play in any of those cases.

MAP . . . shows area being searched and location of rail car at the time body was apparently put in it.

Eloise Plows Path Of Destruction In Florida

PANAMA CITY BEACH HOUSE . . . lost foundation in hurricane.

FORT WALTON BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Hurricane Eloise, spawning tornadoes to accompany torrential rains and roaring winds, plowed a wide path of destruction almost 150 miles inland Tuesday after smacking the Florida Panhandle's coast with its hardest punch.

Damage estimates ran as high as $70 million, with Panama City Beach Mayor Dan Russell figuring damages at $50 million to that city and Fort Walton Beach Mayor H. Gene Smith estimating damages here at $20 million.

"You go down every street and you see buildings without roofs," Smith said.

The only reported death was that of Carlton Yackel, 57, who police said suffered a heart attack while huddled in a hurricane center.

Striking before dawn, the hurricane's 130 mile-an-hour winds carried slashing rains and frenzied surf as it landed along a 40-mile stretch between Fort Walton Beach and Panama City.

But once over land, Eloise weakened quickly. by 11 a.m. CDT, it was recalssified as a tropical storm. By 6 p.m., it had lost all of its tropical characteristics and was dumping heavy rains just southwest of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Earlier, the storm's collision with land flooded roads, shook buildings, ripped off roofs, uprooted mobile homes and shattered the windows of homes and businesses.

Tens of thousands of people temporarily took refuge frm the storm's fury in such shelters. The Salvation Army set up 10 emergency disaster canteens in Fort Walton, Panama City and Destin to feed hurricane victims.

As the storm sloshed farther away from the warm Gulf of Mexico waters which gave it strength, Alabama authorities reported several injuries in Geneva County where winds reached 85 m.p.h. Schools were ordered closed in a number of southwest Georgia communities where weather forecasters expected up to 10 inches of rain.

Alabama State Civil Defense authorities said they had confirmed reports of two injuries, both in a tornado at Samson near the Florida border. Neither victim was reportedly seriously hurt.

Civil Defense Director C.J. Sullivan said thousands of residents of southeast Alabama were left without electricity and that threatened a shortage of drinking water because water pumps cannot run without power.

Wind damage was described as extensive in the west Georgia cities of LaGrange, Bremen and Cartersville.

The first day of classes of Auburn University's fall term were postponed for one day as electric power was knocked out for several hours.

By midmorning, forecasters said the storm's rains and the danger of tornadoes far outweighed their concern for potential wind damage.

"The major threat now is tornadoes, heavy thunderstorms over Florida, Alabama and Georgia, and the flooding they can cause," Dr. Neil Frank, director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami, said at midday.

Three early morning twisters ripped through Fort Walton Beach. Others struck at Hartford, Ala., and near Jacksonville, Fla.

The hurricane's winds ripped through a Fort Walton Beach motel, demolishing 30 rooms.

N.Y. Times Summary

Peace Confab 'Appropriate'

United Nations — Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko told the United Nations General Assembly the Geneva peace conference was the "appropriate mechanism for dealing with Middle East problems." He mentioned neither the Egyptian-Israeli agreement for Sinai military disengagement nor Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's proposal for an informal meeting of key states on the Middle East. Alluding evidently to Kissinger's shuttle diplomacy, he said the area "must be free from an approach based on momentary considerations and publicity."

Ford Meets With Bankers

Washington — Three leading bankers met for more than an hour Tuesday with President Ford to offer their evaluation of the New York financial situation. The three were David Rockefeller, chairman of Chase Manhattan Bank; Walter Wriston, chairman of Citibank, and Elmore Patterson, chairman of Morgan Guaranty Trust. The meeting, also attended by Treasury Secretary William E. Simon and L. William Seidman, a senior fiscal adviser to the President, produced no change in the administration policy of nonintervention, Seidman said afterward.

Buckley Against Intervention

Washington — Sen. James L. Buckley of New York said Tuesday that he opposed direct federal intervention in New York City's fiscal crisis. To the consternation of members of the New York congressional delegation, who seek a united front, Buckley said he opposed direct federal action because, "based on historic experience, I am opposed to futher eroding our federal system, which is based on independent, self-governing bodies."

Gold, British Pound Plummet

London — Both gold and the British pound plummeted to new lows Tuesday while the dollar, a widely unpopular currency just a few months ago, emerged as one of the world's strongest investments.

Patty Swears Capture Started Clearing Up Her Mind

a path has prevented her from even attempting to do so."

The statement said she was forced to make early tape recordings while locked in a closet blindfolded, unable to eat or dispose of her bodily wastes.

It said SLA member "Cinque," since identified as convict Donald DeFreeze, forced her to make the first tapes with constant threats of death. He was the only person who spoke to her, she said.

She said Cinque and the others tormented her with reports that her family had abandoned her, that the Hearsts would not comply with ransom demands and "it was all right with them if she were put to death."

They also told her, she said, that she would be shot on sight by lawmen if she were captured.

Shortly before her arrest, Miss Hearst contended, she experienced "lucid intervals" in which she suspected her parents still cared for her. She came back to San Francisco to find out their feelings, the statement contended.

". . . She began to doubt that her parents were involved in any plan for her destruction and wished, by some contrivance, to learn what their feelings toward her were, and whether they would accept her back and give her some of the help which she so desperately needed," the affidavit said.

"For this purpose, she decided to return to San Francisco, to try to find some method of establishing communication with her parents, to discover whether or not she was to really be murdered on sight by officers of the law, or if these beliefs were delusions and hallucinations."

She said that when FBI agents came to her door Thursday she was still in a "distorted condition" and, "she thought that she would be instantly killed.

"When this did not happen," the affidavit said, "her mind began to clear up again . . ."

Miss Hearst's statement appeared to be a total repudiation of SLA members William and Emily Harris, arrested with her. The Harrises were early SLA members and believed to be among her captors.

Reportedly, there had been a split among the fugitives, with Miss Hearst gaining support from Wendy Yoshimura, 32, another fugitive being held on weapons charges unrelated to the SLA.

Federal firearms charges against the couple were dismissed Tuesday in Los Angeles because the charges duplicated more serious state charges arising from the same incident, a 1974 shootout at a sporting goods store.

Miss Hearst and Miss Yoshimura were captured at an apartment rented by a friend, Stephen Soliah, who is charged with harboring them. The Harrises were apprehended a few miles away.

In another development, Soliah, a 27-year-old housepainter, was described Tuesday as Patty Hearst's lover.

In a federal courtroom near the one where Miss Hearst was maneuvering for freedom, a prosecutor quoted her as saying of Soliah: "I lived with him. I finally saw him in jail. They let me kiss him."

The statement, at Soliah's bail hearing, was made by Asst. U.S. Atty. David Bancroft, who said authorities obtained a conversation between Miss Hearst and an old friend, Patricia Tobin, who visited her in jail Saturday.

Bancroft refused to say how it was obtained, but Soliah's attorney said, "I assume they got it illegally."

In her last known tape recording June 7, 1974, Miss Hearst declared that a slain SLA member, William Wolfe, called "Cujo," had been her lover. He and five other members of the terrorist band died in a fiery Los Angeles shootout May 17, 1974. Miss Hearst's tape said she watched it on TV and mourned the dead comrades.

The affidavit disavowing the SLA was initialed "P.H." on every page, with the final page signed "Patricia Hearst."

It followed closely the pattern of statements made by Patty's mother, Catherine, during her absence.

Mrs. Hearst repeatedly reminded the public that her daughter was a kidnap victim who had been thrown in the trunk of a car, held captive in a closet and perhaps brainwashed. She said she never believed her daughter was truly the revolutionary "Tania."

Soliah . . . Patty says she lived with him.

Patty's parents, Catherine and Randolph A. Hearst, president of the San Francisco Examiner, submitted sworn statements saying their daughter is mentally disturbed, needs professional care and should be released to their custody.

In his affadavit, Miss Hearst's father said that if released she would live in the family's fashionable Nob Hill apartment.

Miss Hearst's affidavit, described by one of her attorneys as "shocking," gave the first inside glimpse of her ordeal.

She recalled the kidnaping night when her fiance Steven Weed fought with kidnapers who carried her off. She said she was bound, blindfolded and thrown in a car trunk, then transferred to another car for the trip to a hideout.

Then, she said, she was locked blindfolded in the "hot and uncomfortable" closet where she remained for weeks.

"When the blindfold was removed, she felt as if she were on some LSD trip," the affidavit said.

She was threatened constantly, she said, by SLA members with guns.

"After a month of this sort of treatment, she was in such condition that she could stand for only 60 seconds or so, and would then fall to the ground."

Assassination Mania Dreadful

A second attempt this month on the life of President Ford is a dreadful thing for the nation. Additionally, police have managed to thwart at least two other possible attempts to kill the President.

At home in the White House following the latest assassination attempt, the President deplored the handful of people in the nation who are trying to tear this government apart. He is correct, of course, in his explanation that the attempts upon his life do not represent the real America.

Despite what some critics might say, this is not a nation of violent people. Rather, the vast majority of our people are considerate and helpful.

The real misfortune is that there is so little that can be done about those deranged individuals who seek to remake the world into an image of their liking. With the assassinations of the past decade, they have done irreparable harm to the country.

All of us share in the violence of that decade. Not that we have really contributed to it in any way but it has been a black mark on the country and, therefore, upon all citizens.

While there is no way of guaranteeing against such a thing as an attempt upon the President's life, some precautions would seem to be in order at this time. It is very likely that events of the past month have planted the seeds of assassination in the minds of a fair number of mental misfits and political malcontents.

President Ford ought to take this into consideration as he goes about the country. We are not suggesting that he hole up in the White House for the duration but he could take steps to avoid the large mixed crowds in the streets.

Making a planned appearance before a specified group is one thing but appearing before thousands in the streets is another. The kind of public hand-shaking in which President Ford has been engaged serves a dubious purpose when you consider the risks involved.

Getting "close to the people," as the President describes it, has merit but his personal safety is even of more merit. It would be far better that he stop the mingling in crowds than run the chance of losing his life.

Assassination of the President would be far more damaging to the nation than would his curtailment of public appearances in the streets and sidewalks. This feeling is especially strong at the moment, when such an act of violence has undoubtedly been encouraged in those with the potential for it.

We admire the President's refusal to knuckle under, so to speak, to the kooks, crackpots and weirdos but the office of president has far more and higher priorities than personal bravery. He need not isolate himself from the nation but he is in need of added caution at this time.

The Inevitable Boondoggle

The very first official action of the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission could not have been more typically bureaucratic than it was. The government agency has issued a set of requirements for swimming pool slides.

And politicians spend time trying to figure out what the American people want? One thing they want for sure is less of that kind of idiotic nonsense.

But that's not all. The new commission is working diligently on safety proposals for architectural glass, book matches, power mowers, television sets and playground equipment. Having contended for some time now with the new safety caps on aspirin bottles, it is with little pleasure that we anticipate the future work of the commission.

If we are going to be protected against all eventualities, our future is bleak, indeed. There are endless numbers of things that can be made safer, including every electrical gadget in the house.

But frankly, we had never felt very threatened by our TV set. Book matches have never given us a really big problem and the power mower, to date, has done nothing but cut the grass.

While all these things might be made safer, what will we have to pay for this, in terms of both initial investment and convenience? Make no mistake about it, life will not be made safe for you without a price.

If the new commission promulgates rules for the items mentioned here, think what else it can do. Think of the fun it can have with such things as furnaces and hot water heaters. It could have a field day with fire-places and such potentially dangerous items as knives and forks.

Hardly anything is completely foolproof. With a freak accident, anything from a safety pin to a hatchet can be dangerous.

We have the distinct feeling that we will end up wishing the new commission had never come into existence.

It Doesn't Quite Figure

CHICAGO — Joan Little, of ice-pick fame, has quickly developed the poise of an experienced media manipulator. She held a press conference in a Loop Church the other day and showed remarkable self-assurance while uttering some really silly statements.

Ms. Little was flanked at the conference table by spokesmen for the Black Panther party and several other organizations that will apparently share in her exploitation.

The performance began with what is now a routine gimmick — placing the media on the defensive.

Sweeping the reporters with a hard-eyed gaze, the Black Panther warned that no "dehumanizing" questions would be tolerated.

They must, he said, show Ms. Little the same kind of respect they would give a president of the United States.

It was clear he hadn't caught the press conferences of President Nixon or Ron Ziegler. If the reporters who turned out to meet Ms. Little had come on like the White House press corps, somebody would have had to call the riot squad.

But there was no need for concern. Ms. Little is now firmly entrenched as this year's most popular victim of injustice, and she was treated as if she were Pauline and had just been cut loose from the railroad tracks.

Ms. Little and her companions quickly got through the alleged reason for holding the press conference — a fund-raising pitch for a young man in a Southern jail. They say he is being framed for murder and rape.

But it was Ms. Little's views on social injustice and her own experience that had drawn the TV cameras and a couple of dozen newsmen. And in bits and pieces she delivered a lecture on the way things are in this imperfect country.

For instance, she revealed that there are about 1,000,000 innocent black persons in prison today.

"I was only one out of a million that was able to escape," she said.

MS. LITTLE
. . . 'no faith' in a system that set her free . . .

That could be the biggest news story in the field of penology in the past 25 years.

The federal government's statistics claim that the state and federal prisons in this country hold fewer than 250,000 inmates, including blacks, whites and other hues.

So, if what Ms. Little says is true — and she was coolly authoritative — then those 250,000 prisoners have been framed (at least those who are black), and another 750,000 innocents are locked up somewhere we don't even know about.

That raises an alarming question. If everybody in jail is innocent, including those mysterious 750,000 prisoners, then who in the hell is committing all those crimes out there? You would think that with 25,000 people being murdered each year, the cops could make just one legitimate homicide pinch.

When a reporter asked the one-in-a-million Ms. Little what she thought of the legal system, now that she had been set free, she said:

"I don't have any faith in the court system, at all."

She said it wasn't the court system that set her free, but rather some people from "off the streets," meaning the jury.

It wasn't clear whether Ms. Little thought that she had been given some kind of special, one-shot treatment by having a trial by jury, or was aware that a jury trial has been part of the system for quite some time.

She went on to explain that her trial wasn't typical because a large defense fund had been raised and she was able to get high-priced lawyers.

This only proved, she said, that rich people can get away with murder, while those who don't have big money are more likely to wind up in prison.

She's absolutely correct. The average multi-millionaire has always had a better chance of beating a murder rap. He can hire F. Lee Bailey or Melvin Belli or even Perry Mason.

And that would be a grave problem if the streets were filled with trigger-happy multi-millionaires. But they aren't. So the problem isn't homicidal Wall Street tycoons, but the less wealthy people who commit 25,000 murders and other scary stuff each year. And I'm not sure if we can provide each of them with a $200,000 defense fund.

Ms. Little didn't intend her criticism of the legal system to apply to her own case, but it could. Her version of the jailer's death struck many open-minded listeners as being almost laughable. It was just as easy to believe that she had set the old geezer up for a murder and escape as it was to believe that he forced her to defend herself.

In many other countries, including some admired by her new promoters, the accused is considered guilty until proven otherwise. Under those rules, rather than our imperfect system, Ms. Little would have been zapped but good.

But here, while the imperfect system was propelling President Sneaky into disgrace and near-exile and turning his once-powerful White House staff into a bunch of prison inmates, it was bringing in an innocent verdict for Ms. Little and sending her on to instant stardom.

If Ms. Little thinks that is a strange legal system, I'm sure she has a lot of company.

Rocky And Nursing Home Neglect

NEW YORK — It will be weeks before the Moreland Act Commission investigating New York's nursing home scandals makes its formal report, but a draft memorandum to be circulated among the members takes a harsh view of former Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. If the ultimate commission report echoes the memorandum, Rockefeller's campaign for renomination to the vice presidency would be seriously damaged.

The memorandum states that a transcript of the Rockefeller testimony to the commission "reveals that as early as 1965, he knew of the bad conditions of the state nursing homes." In 1970, the memorandum continues, Rockefeller "announced with trumpets blaring what was in effect a state ombudsman program to oversee the treatment of patients in nursing homes. He did nothing thereafter. No budget was established, no personnel named. Nothing was done.

"He might have claimed that the state lacked funds. However, 20 months later, the state was invited to participate in a federally funded ombudsman program which the State Health Department elected to do, but the idea was turned down in Rockefeller's executive chamber . . . Not one single home was closed for operational deficiencies in 15 years of his administration and not one fine was inflicted against any home . . ."

The memorandum contends, moreover, that millions of dollars were wasted during the Rockefeller administration by the formula he approved for Medicaid reimbursement to nursing homes.

"The cost incurred by a home in 1972, plus the inflation factor, became the basis for the rate established for the home in 1974," according to the memorandum. "No one could respect such a system unless it were audited, for otherwise fraud in 1972 became legitimated for 1974 and inefficiency in 1972 was built into the rate structure for 1974." Worse, the reimbursement formula had no relationship to the quality of care offered in various nursing homes.

Yet, the memorandum concludes, Rockefeller consistently refused to authorize the relatively few hundreds of thousands of dollars that would have provided adequate auditing for the system. This resulted in overcharges to the state estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

The memorandum also charges that as governor, Rockefeller made a "social disaster" out of a program to get chronic cases out of state mental hospitals, so the hospitals could become treatment centers. As it turned out, the memorandum states, "The state mental hospital population fell from 78,000 in 1968 to 44,000 in 1973. A substantial portion of those discharged were geriatric cases. Thousands of them had been admitted to the state mental hospitals during (the Rockefeller) administration. There were almost no preparations made for this forced exodus. No auxilliary housing, treatment centers, counseling, etc., was provided in scores of communities to which these persons were willy-nilly to be returned."

The memorandum is caustic about Rockefeller's claim to have known nothing of the activities of Bernard Bergman, the nursing home impresario now under indictment, citing what it calls the "extraordinary" dealings between Bergman and Norman Hurd, one of Rockefeller's closest associates.

But some of the memorandum's harshest words concern Rockefeller's so-called Article 28A program, through which non-profit and public institutions could borrow billions of dollars, raised by the sale of tax-exempt securities, for the construction of such facilities as new nursing homes. The governor claimed in 1967 that this program cost the taxpayers nothing, and the memorandum calls this claim — repeated in 1969 — "patently untrue."

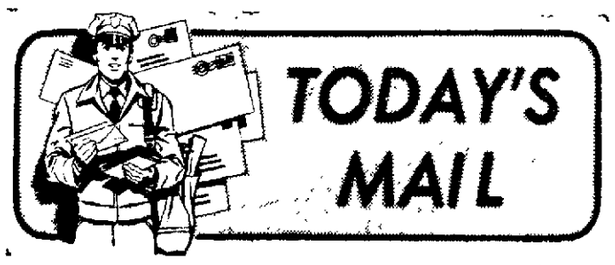

In fact, "the interest had to be paid and the bonds retired from revenues derived in the main from Medicaid reimbursement, and Medicaid is a hundred per cent publicly funded cost, 25% of which is paid by the locality, 25% by the state, and 50% by the federal government." Article 28A construction, moreover, proved more expensive than private construction, and the memorandum estimates that, over-all, the program placed "an excessive burden on the taxpayer of over half a billion dollars."

President Ford might do well to read that part of the memorandum if he is still deliberating Rockefeller's current proposal for a $100 billion semi-public corporation to help develop solutions for the energy crisis. That idea seems all too typical of the grandiosity that runs through the Rockefeller public career.

The Article 28A program, as pictured in the Moreland Act Commission memorandum, was typical, too. The Albany Mall no doubt is the worst example. But Ford might also take note of the Urban Development Corporation, just barely saved from bankruptcy, and all those drug addiction treatment centers now in disuse. Even the vast state university system created by Rockefeller is beginning to have to hunt for students. Let's beware of more billion-dollar ideas from this million-dollar source.

Springer Replacement

Lincoln, Neb.

Very unfortunately for Lincoln, the death of an able, dedicated public employe, Harold Springer, has created another vacancy in a key position in the city's table of organization.

Now, will the mayor and her star Chamber advisors pull another chief-of-police "quickie" and unload another fugutive from sunny California on Lincoln's citizens? Or is it at all possible that there is a faint chance she might discover there is a capable, deserving replacement right here in Lincoln?

I would remind the mayor of an old, old saying that rodeo performers know very well: "There ain't a hoss that can't be rode, or a man (mayor?) that can't be throwed!"

Instinct Not Always Right

Lincoln, Neb.

The high-speed auto chase of some petty thieves shows poor judgment on the part of the police officers involved. Chasing at 110 miles per hour is as dangerous to innocent bystanders as it would be to fire bullets at a fleeing suspect in a crowd.

Luckily, in this case the unfortunate bystander suffered only minor injury and loss of his car.

None of us wants to see criminals "get away with it" and perhaps it is instinctive to give chase when a criminal flees. But policemen should be trained to use their brains rather than instincts in such cases. As public safety officers, they should have known that their chase created a greater danger to the public than did the escape of their suspects.

If the officers had proper training but disregarded it, they should be disciplined. If they never had the training, the discipline should be for their superiors.

Favors Metric System

Lincoln, Neb.

It is estimated that the United States loses $20 billion a year to a cause that a little legislation would change. That is because the U.S. has not adopted the metric system used by every other industrial nation in the world. If we had that $20 billion in business, it would just about pay our oil import bill and would put a lot of people to work.

It would also cut down on consumer ripoffs. The metric system's measurements are all related and all are multiples of 10. This means that with metric measure, you can get an accurate idea of what you are getting for what you are paying. With our system of pounds, quarts, pecks, etc., it is hard to compare. For instance, can you figure how many inches in a mile in your head? Not many people can. Find the number of centimeters in a kilo meter? There are 100 centimeters in a meter and 1,000 meters in a kilometer, so you multiply 100 by 1,000 and get 100,000.

The sooner we go metric, the sooner the country gets its $20 billion and the sooner we all save every time we go through the supermarket checkout.

Inadequate Wage Level

Lincoln, Neb.

It's amazing what some places pay their help, regardless if union or not. Consider some of the theaters. Here are people working for a living. Ten hours per week — really! Who could possibly expect people to pay bills, buy food, etc. on those wages?

As much as it costs to see a movie, and they can't pay projectionists decent wages!

I didn't think theaters had it that rough. How would they like to support a family on such wages? I suggest the theater operators wake up. Times have changed. This is the 20th Century, not the 18th Century!

Until the theaters pay their personnel decent wages, I shall refuse to patronize them, and become —

One Seat For Vietnam

Lincoln, Neb.

Readers may be surprised when sometimes Vietnam is presented as one entity, and other times as North Vietnam and South Vietnam. The latest development is the effort to get two seats in the world forum, the United Nations.

As the older people will remember, this kind of deceit was known from earlier days when Soviet Russia, contrary to this country, received in the same body two additional seats for the Ukraine and Byelorussia. Why?

The U.S.A. should lift its veto only on the condition that free Korea, too, receive a seat, and likewise, that Vietnam receive one seat, not two.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Publicity Feeds Violence

WASHINGTON — As he was led away by police after having pumped five bullets into Gov. George Wallace, Andrew Bremer is said to have turned to one of the officers to ask, "How much do you think they will pay me for my story?"

Whether accurate or not, this illustrates the yearning for publicity of those who, like Bremer, see a way to instant fame and money in criminality directed at a prominent figure.

Paralyzed from the waist down with repeated operations since the attack, Wallace has shown extraordinary pluck and persistence in pushing his campaign for president.

The flood of public attention given Lynette Fromme after her unsuccessful attempt to shoot President Ford feeds this same appetite. That she should be on the cover of both the national news magazines will surely be an incentive to other sick, depraved minds to break through the anonymity barrier and prove that they, too, can vent their hatred on a president or a political candidate.

Fromme's roommate, Sandra Good, is interviewed as though she were a reputable citizen and she complies by giving out a "death list" with the names of corporate executives to be struck down because they have polluted the atmosphere. Time magazine ran a picture of the two women nude that apparently had been sent to members of the Manson "family" held in prison.

Charles Manson, the demon worshipped by these dehumanized minds, was interviewed in his prison cell by Stan Atkinson of the Oakland, Calif., Station KTUV. With this remarkable latitude in the accepted code of penal confinement for a convicted murderer, it is hardly surprising that the outcry grows for restoration of the death penalty.

In this atmosphere, with the sickness of criminality spreading like a plague, President Ford plunges into crowds in a half dozen states. The wisdom of starting to campaign so early with the nominating convention still nearly a year off to one side is questionable. The President owes it to the Secret Service and, more important, to all of us, to take reasonable precautions in the aftermath of two assassination attempts.

To do less may prove he is a courageous fatalist willing to accept the chances of death, but that is a kind of bravery we can ill afford.

Another form the sickness takes is the attempt to reopen the court judgments and the commission findings in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and his brother Robert. Some who press these inquiries may be genuinely concerned that justice was not done. But the strong suspicion is that the same yearning for publicity has a lot to do with the clamor to rake over the assassinations that were so tragic a part of the '60s.

At the far-out extreme is the charge, getting a headline or two, that the CIA was behind the murder of the Kennedys. This is apparently based on the theory that since the agency is accused of just about every other crime, they must have had a hand in that one, too.

It was disturbing to hear that the FBI had suppressed a record of a threatening letter from Lee Harvey Oswald. Whether this was withheld from the commission investigating the President's assassination is presently the subject of an inquiry within the FBI.

The commission, headed by the Chief Justice Earl Warren, spent months in a comprehensive examination of all the evidence and came out with the conclusion that there was no plot and that Oswald fired the shots that killed the President and seriously wounded then-Gov. John Connally. The threatening letter could, in retrospect, have meant little.

One can only hope that this is a fever which will pass. But exploiting the sensationalism of the outlaws who boast of their outlawry does not contribute to a return to stability and a moderation of the violence so prevalent.

Television and the movies have a sizeable share of responsibility. Try looking at the ad page for current films. Hardly a one but shows a smoking gun. The defenders say that this violence is an outlet for pent-up hostilities and therefore beneficial. The growing proportion of crimes committed by persons under 21 seems to give that the lie.

Life is intolerable on the narrow edge of fear. That is one consequence of the epidemic, and it is hardly less than that, of crime today.

Ms. Little didn't intend her criticism of the legal system to apply to her own case, but it could. Her version of the jailer's death struck many open-minded listeners as being almost laughable. It was just as easy to believe that she had set the old geezer up for a murder and escape as it was to believe that he forced her to defend herself.

In many other countries, including some admired by her new promoters, the accused is considered guilty until proven otherwise. Under those rules, rather than our imperfect system, Ms. Little would have been zapped but good.

But here, while the imperfect system was propelling President Sneaky into disgrace and near-exile and turning his once-powerful White House staff into a bunch of prison inmates, it was bringing in an innocent verdict for Ms. Little and sending her on to instant stardom.

If Ms. Little thinks that is a strange legal system, I'm sure she has a lot of company.

Rocky And Nursing Home Neglect

NEW YORK — It will be weeks before the Moreland Act Commission investigating New York's nursing home scandals makes its formal report, but a draft memorandum to be circulated among the members takes a harsh view of former Gov. Nelson Rockefeller. If the ultimate commission report echoes the memorandum, Rockefeller's campaign for renomination to the vice presidency would be seriously damaged.

The memorandum states that a transcript of the Rockefeller testimony to the commission "reveals that as early as 1965, he knew of the bad conditions of the state nursing homes." In 1970, the memorandum continues, Rockefeller "announced with trumpets blaring what was in effect a state ombudsman program to oversee the treatment of patients in nursing homes. He did nothing thereafter. No budget was established, no personnel named. Nothing was done.

"He might have claimed that the state lacked funds. However, 20 months later, the state was invited to participate in a federally funded ombudsman program which the State Health Department elected to do, but the idea was turned down in Rockefeller's executive chamber . . . Not one single home was closed for operational deficiencies in 15 years of his administration and not one fine was inflicted against any home . . ."

The memorandum contends, moreover, that millions of dollars were wasted during the Rockefeller administration by the formula he approved for Medicaid reimbursement to nursing homes.

"The cost incurred by a home in 1972, plus the inflation factor, became the basis for the rate established for the home in 1974," according to the memorandum. "No one could respect such a system unless it were audited, for otherwise fraud in 1972 became legitimated for 1974 and inefficiency in 1972 was built into the rate structure for 1974." Worse, the reimbursement formula had no relationship to the quality of care offered in various nursing homes.

Yet, the memorandum concludes, Rockefeller consistently refused to authorize the relatively few hundreds of thousands of dollars that would have provided adequate auditing for the system. This resulted in overcharges to the state estimated in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

The memorandum also charges that as governor, Rockefeller made a "social disaster" out of a program to get chronic cases out of state mental hospitals, so the hospitals could become treatment centers. As it turned out, the memorandum states, "The state mental hospital population fell from 78,000 in 1968 to 44,000 in 1973. A substantial portion of those discharged were geriatric cases. Thousands of them had been admitted to the state mental hospitals during (the Rockefeller) administration. There were almost no preparations made for this forced exodus. No auxilliary housing, treatment centers, counseling, etc., was provided in scores of communities to which these persons were willy-nilly to be returned."

The memorandum is caustic about Rockefeller's claim to have known nothing of the activities of Bernard Bergman, the nursing home impresario now under indictment, citing what it calls the "extraordinary" dealings between Bergman and Norman Hurd, one of Rockefeller's closest associates.

But some of the memorandum's harshest words concern Rockefeller's so-called Article 28A program, through which non-profit and public institutions could borrow billions of dollars, raised by the sale of tax-exempt securities, for the construction of such facilities as new nursing homes. The governor claimed in 1967 that this program cost the taxpayers nothing, and the memorandum calls this claim — repeated in 1969 — "patently untrue."

In fact, "the interest had to be paid and the bonds retired from revenues derived in the main from Medicaid reimbursement, and Medicaid is a hundred per cent publicly funded cost, 25% of which is paid by the locality, 25% by the state, and 50% by the federal government." Article 28A construction, moreover, proved more expensive than private construction, and the memorandum estimates that, over-all, the program placed "an excessive burden on the taxpayer of over half a billion dollars."

President Ford might do well to read that part of the memorandum if he is still deliberating Rockefeller's current proposal for a $100 billion semi-public corporation to help develop solutions for the energy crisis. That idea seems all too typical of the grandiosity that runs through the Rockefeller public career.

The Article 28A program, as pictured in the Moreland Act Commission memorandum, was typical, too. The Albany Mall no doubt is the worst example. But Ford might also take note of the Urban Development Corporation, just barely saved from bankruptcy, and all those drug addiction treatment centers now in disuse. Even the vast state university system created by Rockefeller is beginning to have to hunt for students. Let's beware of more billion-dollar ideas from this million-dollar source.

Springer Replacement

Lincoln, Neb.

Very unfortunately for Lincoln, the death of an able, dedicated public employe, Harold Springer, has created another vacancy in a key position in the city's table of organization.

Now, will the mayor and her star Chamber advisors pull another chief-of-police "quickie" and unload another fugutive from sunny California on Lincoln's citizens? Or is it at all possible that there is a faint chance she might discover there is a capable, deserving replacement right here in Lincoln?

I would remind the mayor of an old, old saying that rodeo performers know very well: "There ain't a hoss that can't be rode, or a man (mayor?) that can't be throwed!"

Instinct Not Always Right

Lincoln, Neb.

The high-speed auto chase of some petty thieves shows poor judgment on the part of the police officers involved. Chasing at 110 miles per hour is as dangerous to innocent bystanders as it would be to fire bullets at a fleeing suspect in a crowd.

Luckily, in this case the unfortunate bystander suffered only minor injury and loss of his car.

None of us wants to see criminals "get away with it" and perhaps it is instinctive to give chase when a criminal flees. But policemen should be trained to use their brains rather than instincts in such cases. As public safety officers, they should have known that their chase created a greater danger to the public than did the escape of their suspects.

If the officers had proper training but disregarded it, they should be disciplined. If they never had the training, the discipline should be for their superiors.

Favors Metric System

Lincoln, Neb.

It is estimated that the United States loses $20 billion a year to a cause that a little legislation would change. That is because the U.S. has not adopted the metric system used by every other industrial nation in the world. If we had that $20 billion in business, it would just about pay our oil import bill and would put a lot of people to work.

It would also cut down on consumer ripoffs. The metric system's measurements are all related and all are multiples of 10. This means that with metric measure, you can get an accurate idea of what you are getting for what you are paying. With our system of pounds, quarts, pecks, etc., it is hard to compare. For instance, can you figure how many inches in a mile in your head? Not many people can. Find the number of centimeters in a kilo meter? There are 100 centimeters in a meter and 1,000 meters in a kilometer, so you multiply 100 by 1,000 and get 100,000.

The sooner we go metric, the sooner the country gets its $20 billion and the sooner we all save every time we go through the supermarket checkout.

Inadequate Wage Level

Lincoln, Neb.

It's amazing what some places pay their help, regardless if union or not. Consider some of the theaters. Here are people working for a living. Ten hours per week — really! Who could possibly expect people to pay bills, buy food, etc. on those wages?

As much as it costs to see a movie, and they can't pay projectionists decent wages!

I didn't think theaters had it that rough. How would they like to support a family on such wages? I suggest the theater operators wake up. Times have changed. This is the 20th Century, not the 18th Century!

Until the theaters pay their personnel decent wages, I shall refuse to patronize them, and become —

One Seat For Vietnam

Lincoln, Neb.

Readers may be surprised when sometimes Vietnam is presented as one entity, and other times as North Vietnam and South Vietnam. The latest development is the effort to get two seats in the world forum, the United Nations.

As the older people will remember, this kind of deceit was known from earlier days when Soviet Russia, contrary to this country, received in the same body two additional seats for the Ukraine and Byelorussia. Why?

The U.S.A. should lift its veto only on the condition that free Korea, too, receive a seat, and likewise, that Vietnam receive one seat, not two.

MARQUIS CHILDS

Publicity Feeds Violence

WASHINGTON — As he was led away by police after having pumped five bullets into Gov. George Wallace, Andrew Bremer is said to have turned to one of the officers to ask, "How much do you think they will pay me for my story?"

Whether accurate or not, this illustrates the yearning for publicity of those who, like Bremer, see a way to instant fame and money in criminality directed at a prominent figure.

Paralyzed from the waist down with repeated operations since the attack, Wallace has shown extraordinary pluck and persistence in pushing his campaign for president.

The flood of public attention given Lynette Fromme after her unsuccessful attempt to shoot President Ford feeds this same appetite. That she should be on the cover of both the national news magazines will surely be an incentive to other sick, depraved minds to break through the anonymity barrier and prove that they, too, can vent their hatred on a president or a political candidate.

Fromme's roommate, Sandra Good, is interviewed as though she were a reputable citizen and she complies by giving out a "death list" with the names of corporate executives to be struck down because they have polluted the atmosphere. Time magazine ran a picture of the two women nude that apparently had been sent to members of the Manson "family" held in prison.

Charles Manson, the demon worshipped by these dehumanized minds, was interviewed in his prison cell by Stan Atkinson of the Oakland, Calif., Station KTUV. With this remarkable latitude in the accepted code of penal confinement for a convicted murderer, it is hardly surprising that the outcry grows for restoration of the death penalty.

In this atmosphere, with the sickness of criminality spreading like a plague, President Ford plunges into crowds in a half dozen states. The wisdom of starting to campaign so early with the nominating convention still nearly a year off to one side is questionable. The President owes it to the Secret Service and, more important, to all of us, to take reasonable precautions in the aftermath of two assassination attempts.

To do less may prove he is a courageous fatalist willing to accept the chances of death, but that is a kind of bravery we can ill afford.

Another form the sickness takes is the attempt to reopen the court judgments and the commission findings in the assassination of President John F. Kennedy and his brother Robert. Some who press these inquiries may be genuinely concerned that justice was not done. But the strong suspicion is that the same yearning for publicity has a lot to do with the clamor to rake over the assassinations that were so tragic a part of the '60s.

At the far-out extreme is the charge, getting a headline or two, that the CIA was behind the murder of the Kennedys. This is apparently based on the theory that since the agency is accused of just about every other crime, they must have had a hand in that one, too.

It was disturbing to hear that the FBI had suppressed a record of a threatening letter from Lee Harvey Oswald. Whether this was withheld from the commission investigating the President's assassination is presently the subject of an inquiry within the FBI.

The commission, headed by the Chief Justice Earl Warren, spent months in a comprehensive examination of all the evidence and came out with the conclusion that there was no plot and that Oswald fired the shots that killed the President and seriously wounded then-Gov. John Connally. The threatening letter could, in retrospect, have meant little.

One can only hope that this is a fever which will pass. But exploiting the sensationalism of the outlaws who boast of their outlawry does not contribute to a return to stability and a moderation of the violence so prevalent.

Television and the movies have a sizeable share of responsibility. Try looking at the ad page for current films. Hardly a one but shows a smoking gun. The defenders say that this violence is an outlet for pent-up hostilities and therefore beneficial. The growing proportion of crimes committed by persons under 21 seems to give that the lie.

Life is intolerable on the narrow edge of fear. That is one consequence of the epidemic, and it is hardly less than that, of crime today.

Bus Move Added To Energy Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House barely tacked a tough antibusing amendment onto the already controversial energy bill Tuesday, then sent the entire measure to a conference committee which will try to work out differences with the Senate.

The legislation, in any event, is likely to draw a veto from President Ford because it would reestablish strict price controls on domestic crude oil.

The vote to pass the bill was 255 to 148.

"The bill has no prospect of becoming law with the President's signature," declared Rep. Clarence J. Brown of Ohio, ranking Republican member of the enery and power subcommittee.

The House, by a narrow vote of 204 to 201, approved a provision that would prohibit busing of school children beyond the nearest school on the ground that public transportation solely to achieve racial balance is a waste of fuel.

"I've worked nine years for this, and I've finally got it," exulted Rep. James Collins, R-Tex., who sponsored the bus fuel ban.

The bill would restore the $5.25 per barrel cap on "old" oil — petroleum from wells in production before 1973 — which accounts for two-thirds of U.S. production.

Moreover, it would immediately roll back the price of most uncontrolled oil, now selling at world market prices ranging between $12 and $13.50, to $7.50 a barrel. However, that price would be allowed to rise slowly in the year after enactment.

The House's energy bill goes to a joint conference with the Senate to resolve differences between the separate bills passed by each. The conferees will also look toward getting out a bill that Ford won't veto.

Collins' amendment was not debated in the House chamber. He stood up just briefly to explain his measure. Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the energy and power subcommittee and floor manager of the entire energy bill, voted to support Collins' antibusing provision.

That amendment stipulated: "In order to achieve more energy conservation, no vehicle using gasoline or diesel fuel may be used to transport any public school student to a school farther than the public school which is closest to his home offering educational courses for the grade level and course of study of the student and which is within the boundaries of the school attendance district wherein the student resides."

It also prohibits anybody from selling gasoline or diesel fuel for a vehicle which may be used to transport public school students away from the closest school.

But the Collins amendment exempts a parent using gasoline or diesel fuel to transport his own child to a public school, or anyone using the fuel to transport students to schools to participate in athletic, social or other similar extracurricular activities.

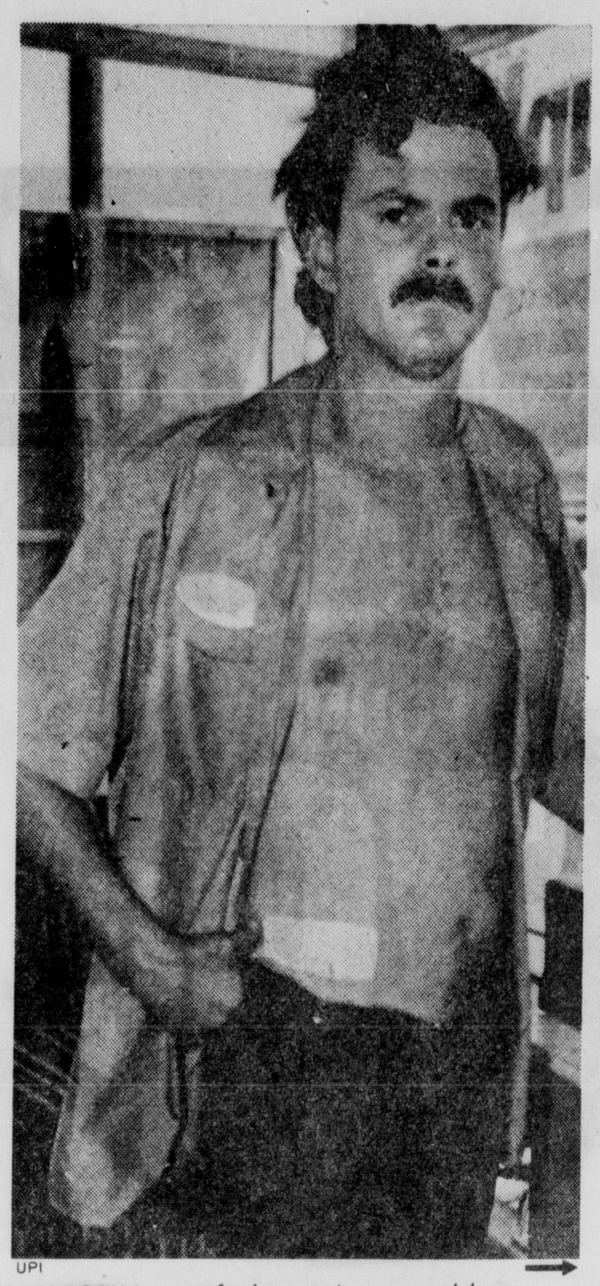

State Congressmen Vote To Bar Busing

Washington (UPI) — Reps. Charles Thone, Virginia Smith and John McCollister, all Nebraska Republicans, Tuesday voted for an amendment barring the busing of school children beyond their neighborhood schools.

Senate Refuses To Stop Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Tuesday refused to choke-off a filibuster spearheaded by proponents of an amendment to curtail busing to achieve racial balance in the nation's schools.

The vote was 48-46 to continue the filibuster. Opponents fell 14 votes short of the 60 votes needed to end debate. Another effort to silence the filibuster was planned for Wednesday, but the chances appeared slim it would pass.

UPI

VICTIM . . . of electronic-age robbery.

Dart Gun Toter 'Zaps' Attendent

Miami (AP) — The young blonde in a pink sweater walked into the gas station and zapped the attendant, William Lawson, with a 50,000-volt electric gun. Then she and a male accomplice robbed the station and fled.

"I'd rather it had been somebody else," said Lawson, 27. Police said he was the first known victim of the electronic-age dart gun, which immobilizes its victims.

Lawson told police the young woman entered the station and asked to use the phone. The attendant said as he showed her to the phone, she turned toward him and, "calm and smiling," shot him.

"It was like sticking your finger in a wall socket," he said. He is still shaken and sore from the robbery Wednesday. "I fell on the floor and couldn't move.

"It was the worst pain I ever felt," he said. "My whole right side was jumping. I couldn't control my muscles."

Lawson said the woman was joined by a man who leaned over and pulled the wires from the darts in his belly, then helped the woman clean out the cash register of an undetermined amount. One of the darts was left in his flesh.

Police said eight of the weapons, called the "Taser Public Defender," were stolen from an office in Miami Shores.

The Taser, which Lawson said reminded him of a gray flashlight, launches two small darts attached to batteries by 18-foot wires. The darts can penetrate 1½ inches of clothing and the 50,000-volt charge is described as incapacitating and very painful.

The weapon's makers, Taser System Inc. of Los Angeles, describe it as a nonlethal crime prevention device for stopping attackers in their tracks. Literature that comes with it states that in early testing, a blast from the gun using only 30,000 volts flattened a 250-pound bull.

Lawson, who weighs 140 pounds, was knocked senseless, his hearing and vision blurred. Doctors at Miami International Hospital said an inch-long dart was removed from Lawson's right side, just above his waist.

Paintings On Display

London (UPI) — Visitors to Hampton Court, the red brick renaissance palace built for King Henry VIII beside the Thames, can now view a collection of restored paintings collectively titled "The Triumph of Caesar." The eight canvasses painted in the 15th century by Andrea De Mantegna are on display in the lower orangery. Visitors can reach the palace by pleasure boats from Westminster Pier, close to the houses of Parliament.

The House's energy bill goes to a joint conference with the Senate to resolve differences between the separate bills passed by each. The conferees will also look toward getting out a bill that Ford won't veto.

Collins' amendment was not debated in the House chamber. He stood up just briefly to explain his measure. Rep. John D. Dingell, D-Mich., chairman of the energy and power subcommittee and floor manager of the entire energy bill, voted to support Collins' antibusing provision.

That amendment stipulated: "In order to achieve more energy conservation, no vehicle using gasoline or diesel fuel may be used to transport any public school student to a school farther than the public school which is closest to his home offering educational courses for the grade level and course of study of the student and which is within the boundaries of the school attendance district wherein the student resides."

It also prohibits anybody from selling gasoline or diesel fuel for a vehicle which may be used to transport public school students away from the closest school.

But the Collins amendment exempts a parent using gasoline or diesel fuel to transport his own child to a public school, or anyone using the fuel to transport students to schools to participate in athletic, social or other similar extracurricular activities.

State Congressmen Vote To Bar Busing

Washington (UPI) — Reps. Charles Thone, Virginia Smith and John McCollister, all Nebraska Republicans, Tuesday voted for an amendment barring the busing of school children beyond their neighborhood schools.

Senate Refuses To Stop Debate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate on Tuesday refused to choke-off a filibuster spearheaded by proponents of an amendment to curtail busing to achieve racial balance in the nation's schools.

The vote was 48-46 to continue the filibuster. Opponents fell 14 votes short of the 60 votes needed to end debate. Another effort to silence the filibuster was planned for Wednesday, but the chances appeared slim it would pass.

VICTIM . . . of electronic-age robbery.

Dart Gun Toter 'Zaps' Attendent

Miami (AP) — The young blonde in a pink sweater walked into the gas station and zapped the attendant, William Lawson, with a 50,000-volt electric gun. Then she and a male accomplice robbed the station and fled.

"I'd rather it had been somebody else," said Lawson, 27. Police said he was the first known victim of the electronic-age dart gun, which immobilizes its victims.

Lawson told police the young woman entered the station and asked to use the phone. The attendant said as he showed her to the phone, she turned toward him and, "calm and smiling," shot him.

"It was like sticking your finger in a wall socket," he said. He is still shaken and sore from the robbery Wednesday. "I fell on the floor and couldn't move.

"It was the worst pain I ever felt," he said. "My whole right side was jumping. I couldn't control my muscles."

Lawson said the woman was joined by a man who leaned over and pulled the wires from the darts in his belly, then helped the woman clean out the cash register of an undetermined amount. One of the darts was left in his flesh.

Police said eight of the weapons, called the "Taser Public Defender," were stolen from an office in Miami Shores.

The Taser, which Lawson said reminded him of a gray flashlight, launches two small darts attached to batteries by 18-foot wires. The darts can penetrate 1½ inches of clothing and the 50,000-volt charge is described as incapacitating and very painful.

The weapon's makers, Taser System Inc. of Los Angeles, describe it as a nonlethal crime prevention device for stopping attackers in their tracks. Literature that comes with it states that in early testing, a blast from the gun using only 30,000 volts flattened a 250-pound bull.

Lawson, who weighs 140 pounds, was knocked senseless, his hearing and vision blurred. Doctors at Miami International Hospital said an inch-long dart was removed from Lawson's right side, just above his waist.

Paintings On Display

London (UPI) — Visitors to Hampton Court, the red brick renaissance palace built for King Henry VIII beside the Thames, can now view a collection of restored paintings collectively titled "The Triumph of Caesar." The eight canvasses painted in the 15th century by Andrea De Mantegna are on display in the lower orangery. Visitors can reach the palace by pleasure boats from Westminster Pier, close to the houses of Parliament.

San Francisco — Sunny Indian summer now. A couple of Boy Scouts are out on the swampy edge of the bay this morning. No doubt working on merit badges.

While working on my Scout 14-mile hike, I got completely lost for two days. I had never seen country towns without street signs. Finally — when the head count came up one short at the Scout camp — they sent a truck out and picked me up.

I was still walking in the wrong direction. Game to the end.

☆ ☆ ☆

This is the soft season of smoky twilights and nostalgia. A Boy Scout is polite to women — but that was before Women's Lib, man. In the great slick paper magazines, women were called "the weaker sex."

Don't know what they are preparing the be-prepared-scouts with these liberated days. Maybe not to lead with your left. I am completely lost with the social maps I learned my social roads on.

☆ ☆ ☆

"Even a God falling in love could be wise." That was said in year 50 B.C. by a fellow name of Publilius Syrus. Why Publilius said it I can't find out.

However, I have found that love is good for your health.

A scientist reports: "Girls without steady boy friends have more colds than those happily in love."

For men, the scientist found lovable chaps have better molars.

"Men without girls have more trouble with their teeth then those who are romantic types."

If my boyhood dentist had pushed me off on more chicks, it would have been better for me than dental floss.

How come science discovers all the good things so late?

☆ ☆ ☆

I expect Boy Scouts no longer stand up and give their seats to ladies. When I was clean, brave, thrifty and reverent I don't think I ever sat down. We rode street cars in that golden age. The seat of my pants never wore out.

I belonged to the Fox Patrol. Patrols were not lettered like army platoons — Able, Baker, Charlie, Dog, Easy, Fox.

When we said "Fox Patrol" we meant a real foxy fox. We barked at each other like foxes. "Arf, arf." It was a secret signal. To foil Indians or any other people who were not in the fraternity.

On such soft Indian summer nights as these, we barked out the window. And from up the block came the reassuring answer of our fellow Foxes: "Arf, arf."

Grandmother said: "What in tarnation's got into that boy?" She said it was enough to make a person's hair turn gray. And she took a sniff at her bottle of smelling salts.

☆ ☆ ☆

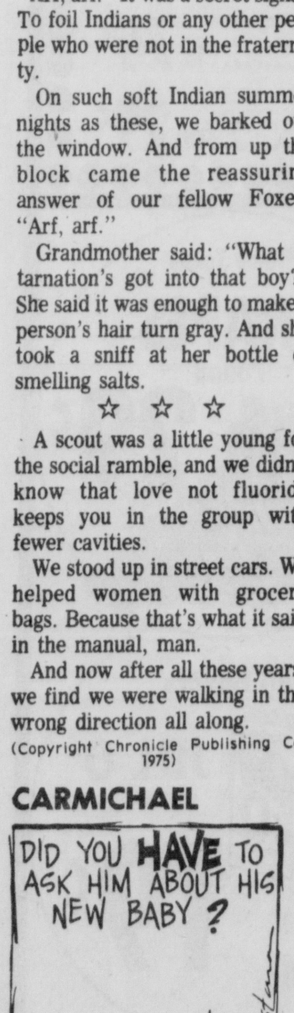

A scout was a little young for the social ramble, and we didn't know that love not fluoride keeps you in the group with fewer cavities.

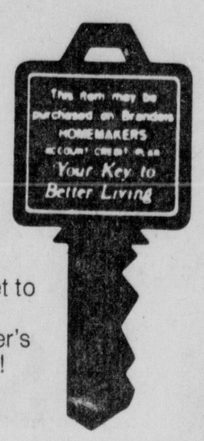

We stood up in street cars. We helped women with grocery bags. Because that's what it said in the manual, man.

And now after all these years, we find we were walking in the wrong direction all along.

Irving Job Bids Deadline Oct. 30

By WES ALBERS
Star Staff Writer

The Lincoln Board of Education Tuesday night set an Oct. 30 deadline for bids on construction of a recreation center-gymnasium addition to Irving Junior High with hopes that work may begin this fall.

Bob Dawson, of Lincoln architectural firm Hemphilll, Vierk and Dawson, told the board that contractors possibly could begin preparing the soil and laying foundations for the 37,748-square-foot addition this fall.

Completion of th eestimated $1.1 million building would then come about Sept. 1, 1976, he said.

The addition is a joint project in which the city will pay about $300, for the recreation center section, which will be used by the Parks and Recreation Department. The school district will pay the remaining $700,000.

The bid deadline must now be approved by the Parks and Recreation Deptartment, Supt. John Prasch said. A construction contract will be awarded by the school district with the city's approval.

Prasch told the board that his recommendation for a new building use fee schedule will be delayed until further talks with organizations that use school buildings for their meetings.

"We want to cover our costs and make proper allowance for increased costs," he said. "But also we don't want to do somethng which will overburden the groups."

The new Title IX requirements may cause problems for groups which have conducted programs for a specific sex "because when they rent a (school) facility, they are obliged to comply with Title IX (which prohibits sex discrimination)," he said.

Prasch also told the board local Cablevision organizers have approached him about school district use of a closed circuit cable-TV channel.

"We like the idea of going on a closed channel," he said. "Some of the things we'd like to do (such as broadcasting an individual student's class project), we'd like to limit the audience on."

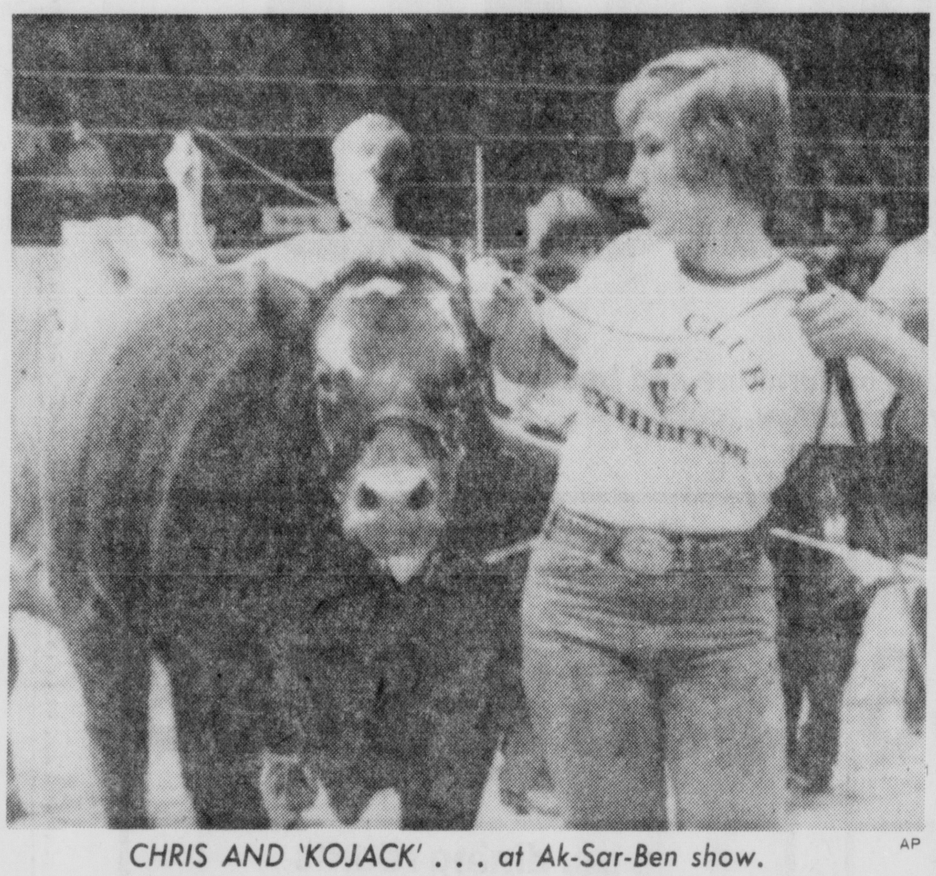

Prasch said the channel would carry educational programs which would not be available to home viewers without a special adapter. The school district would have to pay the cost of equipping its receivers with the adapters, he said.

The board also heard a report on a pilot program assessing the writing skills of 4th- and 7th-graders.

Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction, said he was "not entirely satisfied with the way this group of pilot students performed."

Results of the tests, which were given in four elementary and three junior high schools last spring, showed that many students have trouble spelling and writing complete, well-formed sentences.

During second semester of the 19757-76 school year, the program will assess the writing of 4th-, 7th- and 10th-graders district-wide. The tests will be repeated three to five years from now to measure improvement, Brandt said.

Iowan Shows Second Champion

Omaha (AP) — Chris Maier, of Eagle Grove, Iowa, took crossbred grand championship honors with her steer "Kojack" in the 1975 Ak-Sar-Ben Livestock Show here Tuesday.

The 1,220-pound Limousin-Hereford-Angus, chosen from among 846 steers, gave Chris her second consecutive grand champion crossbred steer. Last year, her grand champion netted her $14,650 in the Ak-Sar-Ben premium action.

With the win Chris, the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. And Mrs. Richard Maier, became the third 4-H exhibitor in Ak-Sar-Ben's history to have shown back-to-back grand champion steers.

The calf, born in August, 1974, was purchased from Fred Hartman and Sons of Wood River, and posted a 2.58 pound weight per day of age.

The reserve champion crossbred was a 1,160-pound Limousin-Red Angus, shown by J.D. Anderson, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Anderson of Arapahoe, "Charlie" had a 3.07 pound weight per day of age and originated at the B&W Farms, Hendley.

A Gelbvieh-Charolais-Angus shown by Iowa 4-H'er Sara Stile was chosen champion performance steer. The 1,370-pound animal, born April 25, 1974, had a weight per day of age of 2.67 pounds.

Sara, the 13-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Stille of Storm Lake, Iowa, last year has shown successfully at Ak-Sar-Ben twice.

In the reserve champion slot this year, was last year's winner in the perfomance class, Loren Tejkl Jr., 14, of Leigh. His entry, a 1,365 pound Chianina-Angus-Hereford, had a weight per day of age of 3.04, the highest among 25 performance steers of all breeds.

UP To Pay Back Taxes

Billings (AP) — The Union Pacific Corp. and tax officials from three states have signed an agreement which settles disputes over taxes owed by the firm in Montana, Nebraska and Idaho.

The agreement was signed Monday during a meeting of the Western States Association of Tax Administrators.

The agreement provides that Union Pacific will pay $1,013,941 in taxes for the years from 1968-74.

Montana is to receive $45,134, Nebraska $162,142, and Idaho $806,665.

Local Lawmen Get Their Day On Campus

Thursday is Law Enforcement Day on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus.

Members of the Lincoln Police Department, the State Patrol and the sheriff's office will be available for informal talks with students and the public at the Nebraska Union from 10 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

In addition, the LPD will register bicycles on the union mall, and campus police will be explaining the identification program — designed to protect valuable property.

Food Shortage Will Be Topic Of Five Forums

Practical alternatives to the worldwide food shortage will be the subject of five Sunday afternoon forums to be held throughout Nebraska Sept. 28 to Oct. 26.

The forums are sponsored by the Nebraska Lutheran Rural Ministries and Legislative Caucus through a special grant from the Lutheran Church's World Hunger Appeal.

The first forum will be held at Lincoln's American Lutheran Church on Sept. 28. Prasch said the channel would carry educational programs which would not be available to home viewers without a special adapter The school district would have to pay the cost of equipping its receivers with the adapters he said

The board also heard a report on a pilot program assessing the writing skills of 4th- and 7th-graders

Ron Brandt, associate superintendent for instruction, said he was "not entirely satisfied with the way this group of pilot students performed "

Results of the tests, which were given in four elementary and three junior high schools last spring, showed that many students have trouble spelling and writing complete, well-formed sentences.

During second semester of the 19757-76 school year, the program will assess the writing of 4th-, 7th- and 10th-graders district-wide The tests will be repeated three to five years from now to measure improvement, Brandt said

Debate Possible On Growth Plans

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

The Goals and Policies Committee may have struck the spark Tuesday night which will rekindle a community debate on the direction Lincoln should grow in the future.

The citizens group set the stage for a major confrontation at a meeting next month over whether city government should restrict all new growth to the east until radial growth is achieved.

A basic component of the new Comprehensive Plan is radial growth around the downtown core. The existing Goals and Policies document, as adopted by the City Council and County Board, endorses the concept of radial growth.

Dennis Proposal

However, a proposal to permit only new subdivisions, "which would expand the city to the north and west," was presented by Mike Dennis. Discussion of his proposal was delayed until October, as was discussion on several other proposals involving the growth issue.

Dennis and several others contended that concentric growth to the north and west would conserve energy and forestall traffic congestion problems in the eastern sector of the city.

Tuesday night's discussion was supposed to center on proposed energy and transportation policies worked up by the City Council, County Board and Planning Commission last week.

Instead, it appeared that the committee is leaning toward making major revisions in the Goals and Policies document. That report originally was adopted in 1972. It was then revised by the Planning Commission and elected officials.

A group of about 50 people, a small turnout for the citizens committee which has attracted several hundred people on occasion, tentatively agreed to some policy changes and some minor rewordings. A final vote on those proposals and a discussion of transportation policies will be taken at the October meeting.

'No Growth' Debate

The group signaled its intent to reopen the "no growth" controversy at that time, also.

The original Goals and Policies document called for zero population growth to be obtained within 50 years. The elected officials modified that statement, encouraging the federal government to set up programs encouraging the gradual reduction in the national growth rate.

Although the elected officials and Planning Commission adopted a new set of transportation policies last week at a two-day energy workshop, several Goal and Policies Committee agree with some of those policies.

Dan Schlitt contended that the officials' proposals "involve rather extensive changes."

On potential difference of opinion between the two groups centers on the widening of streets through residential neighborhoods.

The elected officials endorsed a policy which places constraints on such street widenings. However, the officials left open the possibility that such improvements may be approved if they were "absolutely necessary to accomplish transportation objectives."

Arterial Changes

Additionally, the officials agreed that a system of one-way, paired streets or the spacing of arterials on a one-half mile basis instead of a mile basis could be considered in some cases.

The Goals and Policies Committee reaffirmed its position that major traffic carriers shouldn't penetrate neighborhhods. They also agreed that residential streets in new subdivisions should be designed to discourage through traffic.

The elected officials acknowledged that the new policies on transporttion would conflict with some existing policies. More discussion on the street widening issue also is expected next month.

U.S. Car One Of Top Gas-Misers

Detroit (AP)—Federal figures for 1976 model cars should help dispel "the erroneous impression" that only foreign makes get good fuel economy, U.S. auto executives said Tuesday.

For the first time since the government began testing cars for fuel economy, at least one American-built auto ranks alongside imports with the best gasoline mileage.

And for the first time in three years of testing, the worst gas-guzzlers are imports, not American land cruisers.

According to 1976-model fuel mileage ratings released by the Environmental Protection Agency on Monday, two versions of the new minicar Chevrolet Chevette are among the top five gasoline-misers.

Of the top 50, 23 models are U.S.-built. And 93 American models are among the 160 averaging 20 miles per gallon of gasoline or better in combined city and highway driving tests.

"Purely in terms of public perception, it's going to help us," A General Motors Corp. spokesman said.

Auto engineers point out there is no magic to good fuel economy. Smaller cars with less weight to be propelled use the least gasoline.

The U.S. companies have argued their 1975 cars got better fuel economy than imports when vehicles of the same weight class were compared. Government statistics confirm that contention.

Until this year, however, only foreign manufacturers had cars in the lowest weight group tested by the EPA.

But now GM's Chevette — America's first minicar — is comparable in size and weight to the small imports. Predictably, the car got the best fuel mileage of any U.S.-built model.

One version of the Chevette tied for first on the mileage chart with the Datsun B-210 and Subaru at a combined city-highway rating of 33 m.p.g.

A year ago, the top-rated domestic car, the Chevrolet Vega, finished 13th on the list. The Vega also was the most fuel-efficient U.S. car in 1974, finishing fifth on the list.

$6.68 Million Budget OKd For Tech School

The Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College Area Board gave tentative approval Tuesday to a $6.68 million budget in 1976-77.

The total proposed for new programs, workload adjustments and an 8.2% increase in the 1975-76 continuation budget represents a 17.8% overall boost in requests for the Fairbury, Lincoln and Milford campuses and area office operations.

The $6,684,944 package compares to the current-year budget of $5,675,782.

Faculty salaries would be increased about 8% overall. The Lincoln campus would boost its current budget by about $500,000, a 23.7% overall increase to $2,603,527.

New Lincoln campus Director David L. Buettner said growth opportunities to serve local students and adults who wish programs is almost frightening. His budget would apply "some surgery to where band-aids have been last year."

Fairbury campus Director Eugene Marcy appealed for a "developmental program" in reading, writing and arithmetic for students who aren't yet capable of post-high school study.

Marcy defended preserving the academic transfer program, saying it complements occupational training and community service programs.

In other business, the board:

— Authorized a $48,000, 21-month lease of the old Gottfredson building, 47th and Prescott, for Lincoln campus automotive and motorcycle repair programs, and to house the SeTech area printing operations.

— Directed Milford campus Director Robert Klabenes to study how new housing may be provided for women students, and okayed roof repair in anticipation of building tax funds.

Aid Plan Revealed By Shah

©The New York Times

Teheran, Iran — Asserting that the least-developed nations were the only ones "really hurt" by the quintupling of oil prices in the last two years and by worldwide inflation, the Shah of Iran revealed a new plan Tuesday for a special aid fund by the oil-producing countries.

The shah's proposal is to be presented at an international meeting in Vienna Wednesday at which the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries is almost certain to raise the price of oil. The plan would lay an assessment on each barrel of oil for the next five years. The sum thus raised from the oil producers would go into a low-interest loan fund for specific projects in developing countries.

The shah's plan, which would involve OPEC members alone, irrespective of approval or participation by the major industrial countries, is a revised version of his proposal of last year for a joint development fund to be established by OPEC and the industrialized countries, which has never taken form.

Shah Mohammed Riza Pahlevi in an interview at his residence here, said that he would reduce the inflation rate in Iran to "minus zero" by the end of this year, from its recent level of 20% or more.

Purchase Power Lost

He reiterated, however, that because of continuing inflation in industrialized countries since an OPEC price freeze, "We have lost 35% of our purchasing power." A price increase decision at the Vienna meeting is therefore essential, he said.

In unusually strong language, he charged that for years before the recent oil-price increases, the West had "just been plundering our country." Conceding that Iran might be heading for a deficit in her balance of payments in the near future, the shah said he had every intention of borrowing money from private — presumably American — banks, "which is a very healthy thing to do."

While expressing confidence in his ability to cope with the strains of Iran's meteoric economic expansion and with accompanying social and political stresses, the shah said, — it is believed for the first time — he had decided to step down from the throne in about 12 years in favor of his son, who will then be in his late 20s.

The shah said that while he did not intend to disappear — he would be "in the wings" — he felt that by the end of the second five-year plan following the current one ending in 1978, his country would be on a par with "the best of Europe today," and he could at that point allow his son to succeed him.

"He would be older than I was when I came to the throne," observed the shah, who assumed power in 1941 at the age of 21.

But even then, 12 or 13 years hence, this ruler of one of the most autocratically governed countries in all the world did not think it would yet be time to permit the freedoms of speech, press, and politics characteristic of democratic societies.

Wait 20 Years

"I want to build this country first so that nothing can threaten it," he said. "I am not going to satisfy our critics by granting freedom of speech to the Communist subversives who are in jail and who want to destroy our country. Let's talk about that in 20 years' time."

Repeatedly asserting that the only real dissidents in this vast country of 35 million people and among the 40,000 students now outside it were Communist-oriented subersives, the shah contended that there was ample room for dissent to be expressed within the one new national party to which "everyone" now belongs. But he stated that criticism of the monarchy, the constitution and the principles of what is called the "Shah and People Revolution" could not be tolerated, either now or in the foreseeable future.

Decentralization

Insisting that what he was seeking was the "participation of all citizens in our material and political life," the shah pointed to a process of decentralization, now theoretically going on down to the village level, to the agricultural reform under which many peasants have become small landholders, to profit-sharing and stock-purchase plans for workers in industrial plants, to the nationalization of major sources of the country's wealth, including oil, steel, forests and ground water supply.

RECREATIONAL VEHICLES JAM INTO LOTS . . . not only on campus but in nearby parking areas as well.

COLUMBUS GROUP . . . heads for downtown and shopping.

Why Not Go To Game In Comfort?

By LINDA OLIG
Star Staff Writer

They come from near and far, pouring into Lincoln and Memorial Stadium on autumn Saturdays.

Many Big Red fans drive, bike or bus to the games.

But others bring all the conveniences of home along with them — easy chairs, televisions, bathrooms, kitchens, bars. They convert simple parking lots on and around the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus into mini camper cities each and every home game day.

Ultimate Car Pool

They're the folks who make the game scene ala recreational vehicle, packing as many as 20 to a camper for the trip to the game.

They begin pouring into Lincoln beginning about 10 o'clock Saturday mornings. By noon hundreds have secured spots near the stadium. Some come in simple, down-to-basics campers; for others, it's luxury all the way.

The campers eat, drink, relax and have fun before, during and after the game — all in the company of friends and fellow fans.

"It's more fun this way," observed Gilbert Arndt of Columbus.

He and his wife and four other couples regularly pile into the modest red and white camper about 8 a.m. on home football Saturdays.

Just For Games

Arndt said he and friend Denny Wallace bought the camper "about a month ago" with just the games in mind. The vehicle hasn't been christened yet — but "Corn Wagon" is the front runner.

The entourage chows down coffee and rolls during the 85-mile trip.

The Wallaces, Arndts and company have found the camper an economical way to travel to Cornhusker football games. "Everybody chips in for gas," Arndt said. "And they bring their own sandwiches and booze."

Many recreational vehicle drivers take special pains to park their vehicles well off UNL property where it is forbidden, by state law, to consume alcoholic beverages.

Drinking On Campus

Others do a little imbibing before and after the games in vehicles parked in university lots.

Capt. Gale Gade, head of the UNL campus police force, said he is "concerned" about violations of the law.

He said he has instructed his troops to watch for violators. "But we try to consider the fact" many fans are unaware that drinking on state and university property is unlawful.

Warnings Issued

Campus policemen, commissioned state deputy sheriffs, have been told to warn violators to discontinue the practice or face "some legal action."

Gade said he couldn't recall any such action being taken in the "last two or three months."

In the Touchdown Club parking lot north of the stadium, about a dozen campers had arrived by 10:30 a.m. The throngs grow to 100 plus by noon.

All the campus police who direct cars there know Dr. A. R. Plith, "the painless dentist" from Grand Island, and his riders, who've been going to the games seemingly forever, the jolly dentist quipped.

The entire lot is reserved for Touchdown Clubbers only. Members donate a minimum of $100 a year to support the team in exchange for certain "privileges," said an employe of the UNL Athletic Department ticket office. The 1,800 Touchdown Club members get parking spaces and have formerly had "ticket priority."

That's where Plith and his gang wile away the hours before game time. They regularly arrive early. By 10:30 a.m. they have hamburgers on the grill attached to the camper and Plith and friends as well as folks in adjacent campers are in good spirits . . . increased by the consumption of spirits and telling jokes a mile a minute.

While the sixsome was tending to the hamburgers to be shared with campus police, parking lot attendants and drop-in visitors, a virtual gourmet spread was being prepared in another camper.

Meal A Group Effort

A dozen Hastings residents pooled their resources for the feed in the plush camper driven by Dick Dykeman.

Shrimp dip, Italian meatballs, cold cuts and rye bread, Big Red pickles and other homemade sours, carrot and celery sticks, turnip squares and much more were all washed down with a drink here and there.

The leftovers would be consumed following the game while the Hastings group waited for the crowds to disappear before embarking on the 106-mile return trip, Dykeman said.

During the post-game smorgasbord they would discuss and "celebrate the victory," he said.

And, should the Cornhuskers lose . . . "We will fast for 30 to 40 seconds," the rotund Dykeman joked.

Bridge is not a lazy man's game — if you want to get the best results possible. You just can't sit there, make only mechanical bids and plays, and expect to do well. You have to spend lots of time trying to figure out what everybody has, and follow these thoughts through to a logical conclusion.

Here is a type of problem occasionally encountered. Assume you're in four spades and West leads a diamond. East takes the king with the ace and returns the five, which West wins with the ten. West continues with the queen, East discarding a club as you ruff.

Let's say you enter dummy with a club and play a spade to the queen, losing the finesse to the king. East later scores another trump trick and down you go.

The sad fact is that all this could happen in quite a few bridge games and nobody would pay any attention to it. The players would think South was unlucky to lose the trump finesse and attribute the outcome to bad luck.

It is actually not difficult to figure out that East cannot have the king of spades and that a finesse must be a losing proposition. Once East shows up with the ace of diamonds at trick one, it must be assumed that he cannot have the king of spades also. He would surely not pass one diamond with an ace and a king.

Declarer should therefore play the ace and a low spade, instead of finessing, in the hope of finding West with the doubleton king. It is the only real chance he has of making the contract, and the only straw he can sensibly grab at.

Spirit Of 1,776 Helps Out

Rubidoux, Calif. (AP) — It was the spirit of 1,776 that helped save Martha Whittaker's tiny diner.

A total of 1,776 customers stopped at her Western Grill over a recent weekend to take advantage of her "IRS Benefit Dinner."

The gaol was to raise enough money to make a preliminary installment on the $9,000 in back taxes Mrs. Whittaker owed after a series of business setbacks and personal difficulties.

All told, the grill served more than 600 chicken-and-dumpling dinners — its specialty — as well as "all the steaks we had on hand." Gross receipts for four days totalled almost $3,000. The diner usually does a $300-a-day business.

The result: a check for $2,500 delivered to the Internal Revenue Service — and a new lease on life for the restaurant and for Mrs. Whittaker.

"It's a dream come true," she said. "It restores my faith in people. There's no way to describe how I feel. I'm numb."

"It's wonderful how good people will stand behind somebody," said Mrs. Whittaker. "They said it was about time somebody decided not to be stepped on by the government and having their whole life ruined."

IRS officials worked out a plan for Mrs. Whittaker to pay back the remaining $6,500 she owes over the next year.

Bilingual Birthday

Saratoga School second-graders learned about birthdays in Vietnam when Classmate Mai Phuong turned 8 last week. Her friends, who think she's a "little dolly," helped her celebrate with a Yankee cake. (She's partial to Italian food.) Mai speaks little English, but her father Tran Phuong reads the class stories and translates for Mai — a fast learner, especially in math. A U.S. government employe seven years in Vietnam and also a French teacher, Phuong works as Madelyn Palmer's teacher aide. He tells the Saratoga youngsters about Vietnamese life, sings in his native tongue and the kids are eagerly trying out the new words. (Staff Photos by Willis Van Sickle)

The Old Stone House Guards Secrets Well

Today's "Write On" contribution comes from a Douglas farm wife and mother of 10, four of them University of Nebraska graduates and another a senior there. One son died while serving in the Navy. She says her writing experience consists of hobby writing and an occasional poem, "in other words, just doodling."

By MARY A. LINDELL

Old Stone House, what stories you could tell! You stand straight and tall like a mighty fortress on the hill. Your walls are nearly 24 inches thick, the stones laid lengthwise to the wall. Your stone was hauled by horse and man from a nearby quarry. How did they lift the heavy stones so high and what was used for mortar?

Chiselled in the stone above the door is the date, A. D. 1877. The ax marks still show where the door sill was hewn. Who chiselled the mysterious initials, S.R. and E.C.R. above the windows?

Your walls are said to have housed the students of the nearby Methodist Seminary. The student body could not have been large as there are only two bedrooms. Each room could have held two beds. The seminary has been gone for years but the dormitory still stands.

In winter the rooms are warm and in summer they are cool. When the snow covers the landscape, many birds find their way to the walls to pick at the shellfish embedded in the stone. One window ledge consists of tiny little shells, the size of a grain of wheat. They are fused together so well, it is still intact after 98 years.

School children come with their magnifying glasses to study the shellfish. They learn the meaning of the word "fossils" here. They reason that Nebraska must have been a sea long ago.

It is said that your foundation is just as deep as the walls are high. The basement wasn't part of the original house. The owner soon saw his mistake. He wished he had dug out the earth for a cellar. A neighbor wanted to buy a brood sow, so it was arranged that he could have his sow if he would dig out the cellar. He tunneled under the house and hauled the dirt away in a wheelbarrow. After the job was finished he declared it was the most expensive brood sow he ever owned.

Who is Jess Carpenter? He left his name carved in the windowwell of the basement. Pat Hesson left his name in the cement in the lawn fence. There are many initials carved in the corn crib.

Old Stone House, you have withstood nearly 100 years of wind and storms. Even a fire could not destroy you. In the winter of 1936, a fire started in the attic, and destroyed the upper story. It was bitter cold and the temperature hovered near zero. The fire hoses froze solid before the fire could be extinguished. The upstairs was rebuilt and you have been lived in since that time.

How many families have been housed here and how many children have lived here? How many babies have been born here? How many weddings have you witnessed, and how many deaths?

Little is known of the family that homesteaded this place. Their name was McKibben, and the mother-in-law lived with them. There were three daughters in the family. They were remembered for their elegant hats they wore to church. The family moved away when the daughters were in their teens.

The graves of Mr. and Mrs. McKibben and Mrs. Douglas will be found in the lonely cemetery west of town amid the tangles of woodbine, sumac, and poison ivy.

Tell me, Old Stone House, how many children know the meaning of A. D. 1877?

Molasses, Dirt Mixed To Make Bricks

Lewiston, Maine (UPI) — Last year, Ray Geiger was promoting bricks made out of cow manure.

This year he's beating the drum for bricks again — but this time they're made out of blackstrap molasses.

Geiger is the editor, owner and publisher of the Farmers' Almanac. This year's edition — the 159th — includes a story which claims bricks can be made from molasses and a little dirt.

The process is the brainstorm of engineer Robert Morse of New York City.

"Ken Connor, my associate editor, and I had Bob Morse come up from Bayside to demonstrate that this was a practical thing to do," Geiger said. "What we did was go out into the yard and dig the first dirt we came to, and mixed it with Plastic B, a bitumen which is a derivative of blackstrap molasses or wood molasses."

The molasses, he said, "is a substance which has been polluting the streams. The paper companies used to dump it into the Androscoggin River."

"That waste produce can be used to make this brick, and you don't have to fire it like you do with normal bricks, and you can use any dirt from your back yard," Geiger said.

He said the brick is a good weight bearer and can be used in building very effectively. It is also cheap.

"You could build a four-room house — exclusive of plumbing and that sort of thing — for about $1,000," Geiger said.

Geiger said th emolasses is dried and broken down into a powder, then mixed with a little oil. He said that conglomeration is then mixed with dirt to make the bricks.

"My interest is only to produce a story for the almanac which could lead to an ecologically sound process," he said. "It can be used principally in areas where people are a little poorer and need something cheaper to work with."

He said the molasses method of brick-making is better than the manure technique.

He Plans Upgrading At SeTech

By DICK HOLMAN
Star Staff Writer

As David L. Buettner carves out his new niche, he embraces the philosophy that education should work from the bottom up as well as from the top down.

That job is something akin to hopping on one foot while patting his stomach and simultaneously rubbing his head, Buettner laughed.

It was a light moment in Buettner's more typically thoughtful gauging of his aims as new director of the Southeast Nebraska Technical Community College Lincoln campus. He stepped into the $23,000 post in mid-August.

Changes Planned

Not satisfied with maintaining the status quo, Buettner is laying groundwork only for careful change. He's more interested in how his actions will prepare students for life roles, and how to get more Lincolnites into the college's community service and adult programs.

The soft-spoken St. Louis area native, 29, exudes confidence and ideas built on diverse experience.

After earning a bachelors degree in industrial technology from Southern Illinois University, Buettner said he "was somehow attracted to teaching." He was a vocational instructor for three years while he worked on a masters in vocational education and guidance at Illinois University.

As he was completing the degree, Buettner was lured to the Center for Vocational and Technical Education, a national research operation attached to Ohio State University. He dug deep into a career education project from 1971 to 1973, when he also won a Ph.D. in vocational education administration.

Worked As Consultant

Then he launched into a top-down, bottom-up look at career education as a consultant for the state education department in Michigan, where he helped build statewide school programs.

Coincidentally, Buettner "a few years back" did a career education consulting project for the Lincoln Public Schools, and he "considered coming here to work."

With his wife Pamela, a former second-grade teacher, and 22-month-old son Aaron, Buettner said he's "fascinated by Lincoln, its prosperity and apparent future."

Long-Range Goals

Now that his leadership is part of that future, Buettner said first he must learn the Lincoln campus operation and traditions. Next he'll "address long-range goals of the campus" and how they fit with those for the Fairbury and Milford campuses, to serve the 15-county area.

"Then, I'll look intently at our facilitites," trying first to "relieve overcrowding" in classes and training offered at 21 leased sites.

The Lincoln campus has "a bit of an image problem," Buettner said, stressing it't not a spread-out form.

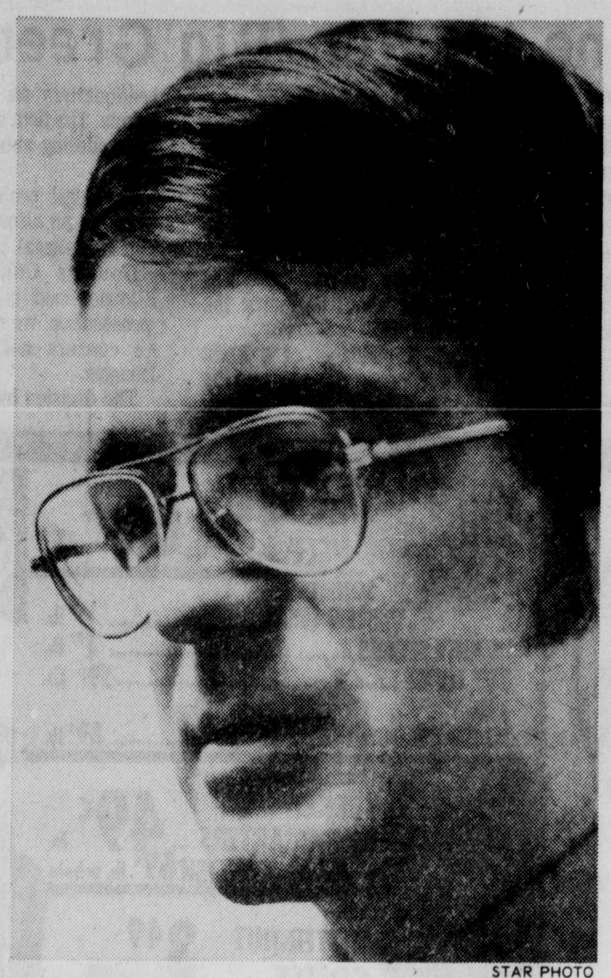

"We have a presence. People know we exist. They just wonder, 'Where is it?' "

Because enrollments are "expanding rapidly," he said, "there's no question we have to do something in the next year to two years to resolve the facilitites crisis."

Campus Endorsed

The Southeast Community College area board has endorsed building a consolidated Lincoln campus, while about $1.4 million will be generated next year from a new area building construction levy.

Part of attracting full-time students "is based on an image and pride in the school," Buettner said. "Certainly, centralized facilitites are an important part of that." But he's not assuming a new campus is the only answer.

Another "vital part of the college" is community service, he said. "The whole community college concept is built around that kind of approach."

Because adult programs "are going to grow" and he noted that "We're not coming anywhere near meeting all" local needs, Buettner submitted there's "a sound argument for conducting those classes (dispersed) out in the community."

But he declared he's "not satisfied with the quality of (present) facilities," besides finding limited or no space at all to conduct proposed programs.

'No End To Ideas'

"There's just no end to the ideas that people bring to us," he said. "Our charge is to move toward those needs," but in a "controlled, deliberate way" rather than sporadically.

However, Buettner worried aloud, "Here we have kids coming to us, and adults, with a specialty in mind,' to learn a trade or pursue a vocational interest.

"I would suspect that many of our students reached their decision, to enroll in a specific program, on inadequate information and deliberation."

Process 'Neglected'

Buettner doesn't accuse them of being "careless"; instead, "the process of making career decisions" is largely "neglected," he said.

Buettner defined career education as "preparation for the life roles that individuals carve out for themselves as they grow." That includes an occupation and whatever is "central to personal development" — not limited only to vocational or occupational education.

"Eventually, I'd like to begin working with (education) institutions" to increase students' capabilities in making career decisions and post-high school choice, Buettner said.

But that also requires "time and initiative" from schools, he said, favoring a cooperative approach, with the community college.

Don't Head For Alaska

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Looking in St. Paul," who wanted to know where she and a friend could find eligible men.

PLEASE, don't steer them to Alaska. True, there are many men up here, but they are either itinerant military, or summer job seekers who are living off welfare, or itinerant workers who come here to make a fast buck and take it back to their families.

The number of unemployed men in Alaska is staggering.

Abby, please give your readers the following message: If you don't have a job and a place to live in Alaska, don't come.

The company I worked for transferred me to Alaska 18 years ago. I've remained because I like it, but the changes that have taken place here because of the oil boom are disheartening.

Crime is rampant because so many are jobless. The schools are crowded, and too few people care about the environment.

We Alaskans welcome people to our state who have something to offer and will be good citizens. But we don't want people who bleed the land, destroy our wildlife, rip off our neighbors and make money here to spend elsewhere.

ALASKAN

DEAR ALASKAN: All right, that settles it. I'll amend my advice to women preparing to go on a man-hunt: Forget Alaska!

DEAR ABBY: In the four years I have lived in Florida, I have seen only one person wearing a Phi Beta Kappa key who has actually earned it himself. However, on other occasions, I have seen women wearing Phi Beta Kappa keys on charm bracelets.

On inquiry, I learned that the keys belonged to their husbands. The women did not seem the slightest bit embarrassed to be wearing a symbol of academic achievement that they themselves did not earn.

Now that Phi Beta Kappa is approaching its 200th birthday, I wish you would state your opinion of this practice.

NOT CLEAR IN CLEARWATER, FLA.

DEAR NOT: Wearing ANY unearned symbol of achievement is dishonest, whether it's a Phi Beta Kappa key, a purple heart or a bronze star.

DEAR ABBY: May I give FLAT a little advice?

If you envy all those big-busted girls because the boys look at them, you'd better be glad they're looking at THEM and not you!

I'm 15 and also flat, but I consider myself lucky because when a boy looks at me, I know it's not because I'm big-busted.

So consider yourself lucky, because when the right guy comes along, he'll love you for what you are, not for what you have!

Need For Contact Outweighs Risks

. . . Presidential Aide Says

By DON WALTON
Star Staff Writer

Omaha — The need for continued presidential contact with Americans outside the White House outweighs the risks involved, a presidential assistant said Tuesday.

President Ford "cannot and will not let a tiny minority hold him hostage in the White House," William Baroody Jr., assistant to the President for public liaison, declared in an Omaha interview.

"I believe deeply in our country and in our system. Central to that process, particularly now, with all the recent skepticism and the breakdown in confidence in public officials, is the need to engage in a dialogue with the people."

Expected to Appear

Despite Monday's assassination attempt on Ford in San Francisco, Baroody expects the President will participate in a White House Conference in Omaha Oct. 1.

"I am reasonably sure he will make it," Baroody noted. "There is a good likelihood."

If the President is unable to attend, he said, "I am sure it will not be because of that incident."

A final decision is due in "the next few days," Baroody said.

Other Participants

Confirmed as participants in the Omaha conference were Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare David Mathews, Secretary of Transportation William Coleman, Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb, Environmental Protection Administrator Russell Train and L. William Seidman, assistant to the President for economic affairs.

Some 800 invited guests are expected to attend the session at the Hilton Hotel.

Public and educational television stations in Iowa, South Dakota and Nebraska are planning to telecast live coverage of the event.

Seventeen Nebraska and Iowa organizations, including education, business, farm and labor associations, are co-sponsoring the conference.

'Made It Clear'

Baroody said Ford has "made it clear that he feels strongly that in an open society, the President has to have contact with the people.

"Naturally, I am concerned (for his safety) both as a member of his staff, who has known him for 15 years, and as an American citizen."

But the White House conferences (the Omaha event is the 10th thus far) are "very important" in terms of presidential contact with Americans, he said.

And the Secret Service is always "reviewing its practices as a precautionary measure," Baroody said.

'Cross Sections'

With the help of sponsoring organizations, the Omaha conference will attract "an audience which is a true cross section of the people in this area," Baroody noted.

The conferences and other presidential contact sessions often lead to "an interesting new idea or a persuasive argument" which may affect public policy, he said.

A White House session with construction and housing industry representatives led to a change in policy (on housing insurance bill) within 48 hours, Baroody said.

The president of a local longshoremen's union directed a question to the President in Milwaukee a few weeks ago which led to a review of a federal policy banning the transportation of military cargo on the Great Lakes.

Unemployment programs are also being reviewed as a result of a question directed to a cabinet-level officer in Cincinnati, Baroody said.

"We get a good exchange and sometimes we get a good new idea," he said.

Ford Cautioned To Travel Less By McCollister

Washington (AP) — Rep. John Y. McCollister, R-Neb., said Tuesday President Ford should abandon his practice of attending meetings around the country and find other ways to present his case to the public.

McCollister said to be consistent he had to include a tentative Oct. 1 visit to Omaha as one of the trips the President should cancel.

"It's a crying shame when a handful of idiots can threaten the security of not just the President, but the whole nation," McCollister said.

McCollister's comments came one day after the second attempt in recent weeks to assassinate President Ford.

Nicotine Gum Addictive, Too

New York (UPI) — Swedish researchers who have used chewing gum containing nicotine to wean smokers off cigarettes, report that some of the smokers become addicted to the gum.

"We have had people take one or two years to get off the gum, but as a rule it's easier to come off the gum than cigarettes," said Dr. Lars Wilhelmse of Goteborg.

Omahans Line Up For 'Big Green' Lottery Tickets

Omaha (AP) — "Big Green" may be facing legal problems, but there was no shortage of demand Tuesday morning at one downtown location for chances at prizes ranging up to $50,000 as the first tickets for the lottery went on sale.

Sidney Coren opened Myers News in downtown Omaha at 5:30 a.m. Tuesday and by the time he had picked up a supply of tickets at 8 a.m., had close to 100 requests for them.

Interest in the lottery?

"You ain't kidding," said Bill James, manager of a local service station.

The Ranch Bowl on South 72nd Street had persons waiting when the owner arrived at 8:15 a.m.

"They've been asking when they're going to start and if they're going to start," said I. B. Ziegman.

Some businesses, though, were less than enthusiastic about beginning the sales of the tickets.

Tom Mitchell, manager of a Kwik Shop in northwest Omaha, said he was waiting for word from headquarters on whether to pick up tickets. The firm's managenent, he said, is wondering about the legality of the lottery.

The legal problems for the lottery hinge on an attorney general's opinion that it is illegal.

Douglas County Atty. Donald Knowles said a decision on possible prosecution won't be made until after he confers with Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas.

The decision by Knowles may decide whether the lottery faces further problems. The opinion from the attorney general had been requested by him.

Meanwhile, City Betterment, Corp., the lottery operator, has set a goal of 250,000 tickets for the first week's sale. However, 400,000 were printed.

The first drawing is set for Oct. 2 and the chances of coming up with the $50,000 big prize are set at one million to one.

KSC Enrollment Climbs 5%

Kearney (UPI) — Kearney State College officials said preliminary figures show enrollment has increased more than 5% from last year. Enrollment was pegged at 5,322 students for the first semester, an increase of 250 students over last year. Students registered on a fulltime basis were up 7%. School officials said they hoped moderate increases would continue, although the primary goal for the next two to four years is a stabilization of student population.

Trip Through 200 Years Is Speedy

By TOM COOK
Outstate Nebraska Bureau

Omaha — "I wish they could slow it down" was heard as often as the "Oohs and Aahs" from passengers on the moving walkway that passes through 200 years of American history.

Indeed, one should be prepared for the 20-25 minute trip through the American Freedom Train, which will be at Omaha's Union Station through Sunday.

"It's a kaleidoscope," Freedom Train Foundation President Petr Spurney said. "They should relax and try to take in the whole experience. Let your mind concentrate and you'll be surprised how much you remember."

Each of the 10 display cars on the 25-car train has a theme that is noted at its entrance. Keeping the theme in mind helps one absorb the collage of material presented.

Car one is titled "The Beginning" and contains the founding documents of the nation, including George Washington's copy of the Constitution.

"Exploration and Expansion" in the next car is highlighted by American Indian relics and the steady push toward the reservation by the first Americans.

Continually flipping sketches portray the "Growth of a Nation" in the third car.

The Great Melting Pot is the subject of "Origins" in car four. The effect of talking mannequins is striking in this display.

Thomas Edison's discovery of the incandescent lamp to computer circuitry helps portray the "Innovations" that have helped shape America.

Judy Garland's dress from the classic "Wizard of Oz" and Frederic Remington's 1895 statue "Bronco Buster" are among the priceless and exciting exhibits.

Fittingly, "Conflict and Resolution" is the final car in the display. It is emotional and portrays the spirit of America that has kept democracy free through many trying times.

Each visitor will remember different things from his trip through the train. The grandness of Union Station and the sights and smells of a railway station afford an opportunity for visitors to discuss and savor the experience and touch another segment of American history.

Remove Roast Pig 'When Eyes Pop'

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Wymore — Comes now one priceless hint from the 1800's as to when that whole roast pig will be ready for serving: "When his eyes pop out."

Understandably, that particular gem is among the anonymous contributions to a bicentennial cook book being produced by the Wymore Community Improvement Council. But it is the exception.

Much of the book will read like a Who's Who in America's kitchen.

The unusual project, headed by Mrs. Forrest Roberts, will borrow heavily from some of the nation's best-known names. Even President Ford's recipe for baked turkey casserole will be printed.

But another of his favorites got the editor's axe right along with his turkey.

Chinese Steak?

"Naturally, we're stressing Americanism throughout the book, but our first response from the President was for, of all things, Chinese steak," said the chairman. "When we wrote the White House office that this didn't quite match our theme, back came the turkey recipe. It will be on Page 1."

Scheduled for publishing Jan. 1, the copyrighted spiral-bound book probably will be about half from celebrities and half from "good ordinary citizens." Six months' work has netted some 200 recipes so far — including favorites from the governors of 41 states.

Gov. J. James Exon naturally leads the list with — take your pick — either chicken roulades or rice and broccoli casserole. Orange sweet potatoes was the tasty contribution of Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

Other VIP's sharing specialties range from Dr. Norman Vincent Peale (bean salad) to hockey player Gordy Howe (spaghetti sauce) to Ann Landers and her oft-publicized met loaf.

Although Jackie Onassis and Mamie Eisenhower are still holdouts, other former first ladies sent along several dishes proved in high places. It was braised steaks from Pat Nixon, spoon bread from Lady Bird Johnson and Ozark pudding from Bess Truman.

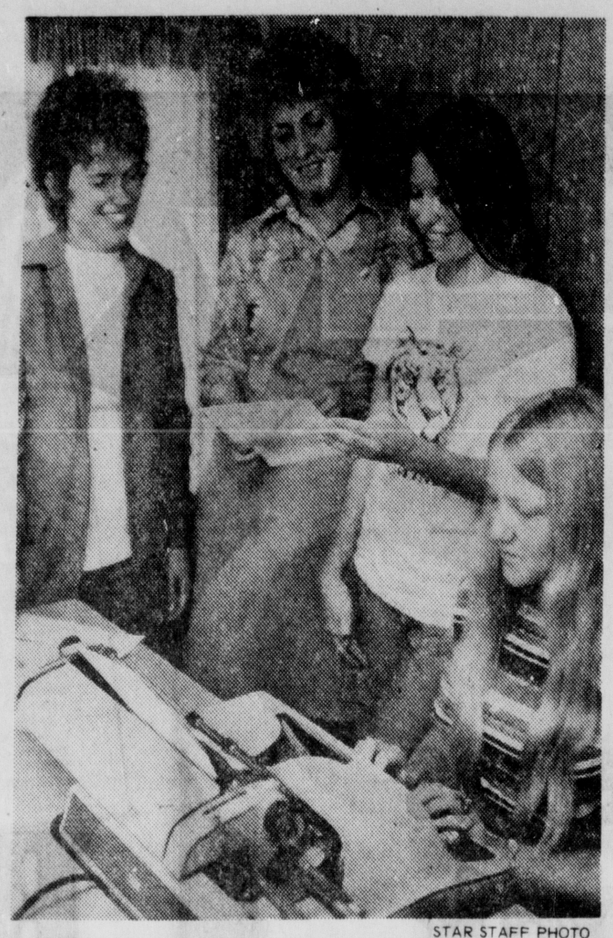

And A Little Rum

"A little rum adds to the taste," was closing advice for the latter.

Hoping to fatten the book considerably prior to a Sept. 30 copy deadline, the committee will accept "just any good recipe from any good American." A good many already received have been handed down from several generations back.

Proceeds from the venture have been designated for a new community center. Other committee members are Mrs. Len Spargur, Mrs. Roger Borgman, Mrs. Stan Hays, Mrs. Mary Funk and Mrs. Jim Vickers.

Helping in the mountains of correspondence and other preparation for the book are teacher Cathy Luebe and her Wymore Southern typing students.

Ford's Favorite

Here is the recipe for President Ford's favorite:

Baked Turkey Casserole

4 Tbsp. butter or margarine
2 medium green peppers (cut in julienne strips)
6 Tbsp. flour
3 cups hot chicken stock
1 lb. cooked turkey (cut in julienne strips)
¼ lb. smoked Virginia ham (cut in julienne strips)
1 Tbsp. chopped parsley
½ Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
salt to taste
¼ tsp. ground white pepper
1 cup milk
10 oz. thin noodles
2 Tbsp. grated cheese
6 saltine crackers, crushed

Melt butter or margarine in 3-qt. saucepan. Add green pepper and simmer covered for 5 minutes. Add flour and stir well. Add chicken stock and bring sauce to boil.

Cook sauce for 5 minutes or until smooth. Add turkey, ham, parsley, Worcestershire sauce, salt and white pepper. Bring to a second boil and add milk gradually while gently stirring. Simmer 5 minutes.

Cook noodles 7 minutes and drain. Place in a greased shallow casserole. Top with turkey mixture. Sprinkle with cheese and cracker crumbs. Bake in 375-degree over for 20 minutes or until lightly browned.

State Will Get $73,000 For Alcohol Info System

Nebraska will receive $73,000 for a one-year program to develop a proposed alcoholism information system.

Dr. William Ford, director of the state Division on Alcoholism, said Nebraska was one of three states to receive full funding for such programs.

The program will be coordinated through the Department of Institutions Data Systems Division, with Ford acting as project director.

Ford said 20 states applied to the Council of State and Territorial Alcoholism Authorities, but only Nebraska, Colorado and Oklahoma won full grants. Seven other states won partial grants and 10 were rejected.

The proposed information system will monitor local program performance, keep records on the number of people served, who serves them, and protect the anonymity of alcoholics.

Pathologist Taught Ronda To Speak With Her Eyes

Omaha (AP) — Ronda Parr, 10, who suffers from cerebral palsy and cannot speak many words, has been trained to talk with her eyes.

Her listener is Faith Carlson, a speech pathologist at the Meyer Children's Rehabilitation Institute.

She has taught eye language to Ronda, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Parr of Scribner.

Ms. Carlson uses one of the new techniques in communicating with persons who have little or no speaking ability.

The system, developed by C. K. Bliss of Australia, uses an array of symbols based on the meaning rather than the sound of words.

A wavy line, for instance, stands for water and a square with a line down the middle means a book.

The user can combine two or more symbols to expand the vocabulary. Ronda puts together the symbols of book and house and that makes library.

Working with physical therapists, Ms. Carlson tried to have Ronda point to symbols but she didn't have enough muscle control.

Nor were her legs able to activate a pointing lever devised for her.

Under the eye language system, Ronda is placed in a wheel chair and her eyes pick out symbols that are grouped on a plexiglass board and color coded.

Family members also have learned to "listen" to the girl.

Ronda attends the Dr. J. P. Lord School. Other youngsters also are being taught the eye language system at the school.

$22.4 Million OKd For Special Ed

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The State Board of Education Tuesday approved a $22.4 million budget for the current school year to educate 26,218 handicapped children.

The budget represents an increase of $1.2 million in state funds over what the State Department of Education had estimated the schools would need for 1975-76. In addition, it is $3.8 million in excess of $10.4 million in state funds budgeted for 1974-75.

The handicapped students reside in 668 school districts. Another 306 school districts reported they had no handicapped children, while another 260 school districts have not responded to state inquiries.

Lincoln Public Schools reported it has 2,249 students with physical or mental handicaps. The total Lincoln special education program will cost $2.2 million, $1.3 million of which will be provided by the state.

The state board also approved Waverly's $108,000 special education program for 88 children and Malcolm's $17,000 program for 16 students.

Department officials said the state will pay up to $8,800 for each child assigned to mental retardation programs. However, they noted often that will not cover all the expenses.

Board member Willard Waldo of DeWitt expressed concern about the cost of special education, saying, "After you've done nothing for many years in a field like this, there's a tendency to go to the other extreme."

The board also approved pilot programs in Alliance and Wayne to help identify handicapped youngsters at the pre-school age.

City Hall Seeking To Fill 3 Job Vacancies

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Steps are under way to fill three vacancies at City Hall.

Twenty people have applied so far for the directorship of the new Urban Development Department.

Five people have put their names in for the manager of the Lincoln Transportation System (LTS), while another 11 people are vying to be the new administrative director for the mayor, Personnel Director Walt Mitchell said Tuesday.

Mitchell said the cutoff dates for the applications will be Nov. 1.

Mayor Helen Boosalis said Tuesday that filling the urban development director's job is her "top priority."

"It is critical to get that department going," she said.

Although more people are expected to apply for that job, Mrs. Boosalis says she expects to review the applications herself and not set up a selection committee.

The mayor named two such committees to help her screen applications for the police chief job. The mayor and City Council have named George Hansen from Sunnyvale, Calif., to fill that position. More than 80 people applied for the police chief's job.

Last month the council revamped the Community Development Department. That agency has been without a manager since May when Leo Scherer resigned.

The new director, who will be paid between $21,424 and $27,372 a year, will oversee a community development division and a division of economic development division. The traffic engineering office also will be moved to the department from Public Works.

Advertisements for the LTS manager's position were just published, Mitchell said.

That position became open effective Monday when Dick Frank resigned to become director of bus operations in Honolulu.

The LTS job will pay between $17,243 and $21,964 a year.

The mayor's administrative director will earn between $19,448 and $24,835 annually, depending on the person's qualifications.

Mrs. Boosalis said she wants a "city manager caliber" type of person to help her keep track of 13 city departments. The administrator will have the same standing as other department heads.

Remove Roast Pig 'When Eyes Pop'

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Wymore — Comes now one priceless hint from the 1800's as to when that whole roast pig will be ready for serving: "When his eyes pop out."

Understandably, that particular gem is among the anonymous contributions to a bicentennial cook book being produced by the Wymore Community Improvement Council. But it is the exception.

Much of the book will read like a Who's Who in America's kitchen.

The unusual project, headed by Mrs. Forrest Roberts, will borrow heavily from some of the nation's best-known names. Even President Ford's recipe for baked turkey casserole will be printed.

But another of his favorites got the editor's axe right along with his turkey.

Chinese Steak?

"Naturally, we're stressing Americanism throughout the book, but our first response from the President was for, of all things, Chinese steak," said the chairman. "When we wrote the White House office that this didn't quite match our theme, back came the turkey recipe. It will be on Page 1."

Scheduled for publishing Jan. 1, the copyrighted spiral-bound book probably will be about half from celebrities and half from "good ordinary citizens." Six months' work has netted some 200 recipes so far — including favorites from the governors of 41 states.

Gov. J. James Exon naturally leads the list with — take your pick — either chicken roulades or rice and broccoli casserole. Orange sweet potatoes was the tasty contribution of Gov. George Wallace of Alabama.

Other VIP's sharing specialties range from Dr. Norman Vincent Peale (bean salad) to hockey player Gordy Howe (spaghetti sauce) to Ann Landers and her oft-publicized met loaf.

Although Jackie Onassis and Mamie Eisenhower are still holdouts, other former first ladies sent along several dishes proved in high places. It was braised steaks from Pat Nixon, spoon bread from Lady Bird Johnson and Ozark pudding from Bess Truman.

And A Little Rum

"A little rum adds to the taste," was closing advice for the latter.

Hoping to fatten the book considerably prior to a Sept. 30 copy deadline, the committee will accept "just any good recipe from any good American." A good many already received have been handed down from several generations back.

Proceeds from the venture have been designated for a new community center. Other committee members are Mrs. Len Spargur, Mrs. Roger Borgman, Mrs. Stan Hays, Mrs. Mary Funk and Mrs. Jim Vickers.

Helping in the mountains of correspondence and other preparation for the book are teacher Cathy Luebe and her Wymore Southern typing students.

Ford's Favorite

Here is the recipe for President Ford's favorite:

Baked Turkey Casserole

4 Tbsp. butter or margarine
2 medium green peppers (cut in julienne strips)
6 Tbsp. flour
3 cups hot chicken stock
1 lb. cooked turkey (cut in julienne strips)
¼ lb. smoked Virginia ham (cut in julienne strips)
1 Tbsp. chopped parsley
½ Tbsp. Worcestershire sauce
salt to taste
¼ tsp. ground white pepper
1 cup milk
10 oz. thin noodles
2 Tbsp. grated cheese
6 saltine crackers, crushed

Melt butter or margarine in 3-qt. saucepan. Add green pepper and simmer covered for 5 minutes. Add flour and stir well. Add chicken stock and bring sauce to boil.

Cook sauce for 5 minutes or until smooth. Add turkey, ham, parsley, Worcestershire sauce, salt and white pepper. Bring to a second boil and add milk gradually while gently stirring. Simmer 5 minutes.

Cook noodles 7 minutes and drain. Place in a greased shallow casserole. Top with turkey mixture. Sprinkle with cheese and cracker crumbs. Bake in 375-degree over for 20 minutes or until lightly browned.

State Will Get $73,000 For Alcohol Info System

Nebraska will receive $73,000 for a one-year program to develop a proposed alcoholism information system.

Dr. William Ford, director of the state Division on Alcoholism, said Nebraska was one of three states to receive full funding for such programs.

The program will be coordinated through the Department of Institutions Data Systems Division, with Ford acting as project director.

Ford said 20 states applied to the Council of State and Territorial Alcoholism Authorities, but only Nebraska, Colorado and Oklahoma won full grants. Seven other states won partial grants and 10 were rejected.

The proposed information system will monitor local program performance, keep records on the number of people served, who serves them, and protect the anonymity of alcoholics.

Jane Fonda Returns

Pathologist Taught Ronda To Speak With Her Eyes

Omaha (AP) — Ronda Parr, 10, who suffers from cerebral palsy and cannot speak many words, has been trained to talk with her eyes.

Her listener is Faith Carlson, a speech pathologist at the Meyer Children's Rehabilitation Institute.

She has taught eye language to Ronda, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Parr of Scribner.

Ms. Carlson uses one of the new techniques in communicating with persons who have little or no speaking ability.

The system, developed by C. K. Bliss of Australia, uses an array of symbols based on the meaning rather than the sound of words.

A wavy line, for instance, stands for water and a square with a line down the middle means a book.

The user can combine two or more symbols to expand the vocabulary. Ronda puts together the symbols of book and house and that makes library.

Working with physical therapists, Ms. Carlson tried to have Ronda point to symbols but she didn't have enough muscle control.

Nor were her legs able to activate a pointing lever devised for her.

Under the eye language system, Ronda is placed in a wheel chair and her eyes pick out symbols that are grouped on a plexiglass board and color coded.

Family members also have learned to "listen" to the girl.

Ronda attends the Dr. J. P. Lord School. Other youngsters also are being taught the eye language system at the school.

Sadat City Planned

He Listens To Music Of Engines

SISTERSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — Dan Henthorn wandered up to the engine exhibit at the West Virginia Oil and Gas Festival and listened raptly to the cacophonic symphony.

Other visitors soon backed away from the deafening sounds created by the dozens of ancient engines, but Henthorn hardly moved. For while others may have merely heard a discordant uproar, the pale and frail septuagenarian was lost in the music to which he has danced for nearly 50 years.

A resident of nearby Middlebourne, Henthorn spent most of his life drilling for oil and gas in West Virginia. He's a retired wildcatter, a dying breed.

"I still have a few wells that I pump," he shouted above the burping, belching engines, the same type that have been used for years in the process of drawing oil and gas from the earth. "But I don't drill anymore."

Henthorn was born just a couple of years after the advent of the Sistersville boom, which began shortly before the turn of the century and made West Virginia the nation's premier oil and gas-producing state until nearly 1920.

Horse-drawn wagons were used to pull the steam and natural gas powered drilling gear over the state's dirt roads to the well sites in those days. It was a hard, dangerous life but one filled with reward and excitement for the hardy breed of men who came to be known as wildcatters.

"I guess I've brought in two dozen wells in my time," Henthorn said as he surveyed the sparkling, renovated engines all about him. "I grew up during the boom and went to Texas in 1919 to work in the fields down there," he said. "Then I came back to West Virginia and got my own steam drilling rig in 1928."

A drilling venture cost about $8,000 in those days, compared with $45,000 in 1975.

"I raised the money by stocking out wells," he said. "An eighth went for $1,000 and so on. If you didn't hit anything, you lost. I really never hit much. All my wells would start at 40 or 50 barrels a day and go down to three or four barrels a day.

"But there were some good wells in this area," he said, pointing to a spot in the Sistersville city park, some 75 yards away. "There was a well right over there that brought in 1,600 barrels a day. There were rigs all around here back in those days.

"My father was in the business, too. He got started in 1902 and helped put in the first gasoline plant in this area, up at Polecat Hollow just north of town. They made raw gasoline out of the oil and sold it for 10 cents a gallon.

"There weren't any gasoline stations in those days and merchants would keep it in 55-gallon drums and would siphon it out with a hose whenever anybody wanted some. The first gas stations opened up around here when I was a little boy, in 1910."

$22.4 Million OKd For Special Ed

By BOB GUENTHER
Star Staff Writer

The State Board of Education Tuesday approved a $22.4 million budget for the current school year to educate 26,218 handicapped children.

The budget represents an increase of $1.2 million in state funds over what the State Department of Education had estimated the schools would need for 1975-76. In addition, it is $3.6 million in excess of $10.4 million in state funds budgeted for 1974-75.

The handicapped students reside in 668 school districts. Another 306 school districts reported they had no handicapped children, while another 260 school districts have not responded to state inquiries.

Lincoln Public Schools reported it has 2,249 students with physical or mental handicaps. The total Lincoln special education program will cost $2.2 million, $1.3 million of which will be provided by the state.

The state board also approved Waverly's $108,000 special education program for 88 children and Malcolm's $17,000 program for 16 students.

Department officials said the state will pay up to $8,800 for each child assigned to mental retardation programs. However, they noted often that will not cover all the expenses.

Board member Willard Waldo of DeWitt expressed concern about the cost of special education, saying, "After you've done nothing for many years in a field like this, there's a tendency to go to the other extreme."

The board also approved pilot programs in Alliance and Wayne to help identify handicapped youngsters at the pre-school age.

City Hall Seeking To Fill 3 Job Vacancies

By LYNN ZERSCHLING
Star Staff Writer

Steps are under way to fill three vacancies at City Hall.

Twenty people have applied so far for the directorship of the new Urban Development Department.

Five people have put their names in for the manager of the Lincoln Transportation System (LTS), while another 11 people are vying to be the new administrative director for the mayor, Personnel Director Walt Mitchell said Tuesday.

Mitchell said the cutoff dates for the applications will be Nov. 1.

Mayor Helen Boosalis said Tuesday that filling the urban development director's job is her "top priority."

"It is critical to get that department going," she said.

Although more people are expected to apply for that job, Mrs. Boosalis says she expects to review the applications herself and not set up a selection committee.

The mayor named two such committees to help her screen applications for the police chief job. The mayor and City Council have named George Hansen from Sunnyvale, Calif., to fill that position. More than 80 people applied for the police chief's job.

Last month the council revamped the Community Development Department. That agency has been without a manager since May when Leo Scherer resigned.

The new director, who will be paid between $21,424 and $27,372 a year, will oversee a community development division and a division of economic development division. The traffic engineering office also will be moved to the department from Public Works.

Advertisements for the LTS manager's position were just published, Mitchell said.

That position became open effective Monday when Dick Frank resigned to become director of bus operations in Honolulu.

The LTS job will pay between $17,243 and $21,964 a year.

The mayor's administrative director will earn between $19,448 and $24,835 annually, depending on the person's qualifications.

Mrs. Boosalis said she wants a "city manager caliber" type of person to help her keep track of 13 city departments. The administrator will have the same standing as other department heads.

Thyroid Puzzle Solved

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor says I have an extremely underactive thyroid gland and has me on thyroid medication. I also have a friend going to the same doctor and he prescribes the same pills for her, but she has an overactive thyroid.

Can you explain the same medication being used for underactive and overactive thyroid? Also, she had surgery on her thyroid. — Mrs. S.A.D.

I'm glad you mentioned the fact, in passing, that your friend had thyroid surgery. Without that bit of information, I would have been as puzzled as you are.

Your thyroid medication is a supplement to provide the necessary hormones your thyroid is not producing. Without it you would probably be sluggish, tend toward obesity. The thyroid gland governs other glandular activity and generally regulates body metabolism.

In your friend's case, the opposite was true. Her thyroid was overactive. A surgeon removed a part of it, in that way reducing the amount of hormones secreted. After such surgery an underproduction of thyroid hormone can occur. For her, thyroid supplement helps stabilize matters.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am 45 years old and I'm considering plastic surgery on my large nose. I understand that no incisions are made on the outside, and that the removal of the bump is all done from the inside.

The question I have is this. If a nose is made smaller, logically there should be an excess of flesh that once covered a larger structure. Could I expect sagging skin? — Mrs. N.O.

You are correct in that the incisions are made from within the nostrils. The surgeon then proceeds to remove some of the cartilage, cutting it down to the desired shape. He will also adjust the excess nasal tissue to the new shape. You won't have to worry about sagging skin.

You can expect some narrowing of the air passages, however.

Your surgeon will have studied the anatomy of your present nose thoroughly before the operation, and he will not proceed until he knows precisely how he is going to engineer your new nose shape.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any diet you can go by to prevent getting arthritis? I am 78, and as yet I have had no signs of it. Knowing so many people who have become afflicted is beginning to frighten me. — Mrs. S.E.

Stop worrying. Arthritis affects about 7 million persons in the U.S., so you have, at 78, beaten some heavy odds already. The chances are very good you will continue to do so for the rest of your life.

But, in answer to your question, no, there is no diet to prevent or cure arthritis.

HEALTH TIP

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

What causes headaches?

The Nebraska Medical Association reports that headaches are the commonest complaint of twentieth century man. Most headaches are caused by over-tiredness, a stuffy room, eating or drinking too much, colds, or frustration.

The occasional headache is usually cured by rest in a quiet, darkened room, an aspirin tablet or two, a nap or a good night's sleep.

However, headaches can be more severe, return again and again, and may be accompanied by other symptoms such as nausea or vomiting, eye symptoms and other abnormal experiences. These headaches may be symptomatic of something more severe and should not be endured. The severe headache sufferer should see a physician.

He Listens To Music Of Engines

SISTERSVILLE, W Va. (AP) — Dan Henthorn wandered up to the engine exhibit at the West Virginia Oil and Gas Festival and listened raptly to the cacophonic symphony

Other visitors soon backed away from the deafening sounds created by the dozens of ancient engines, but Henthorn hardly moved. For while others may have merely heard a discordant uproar, the pale and frail septuagenarian was lost in the music to which he has danced for nearly 50 years

A resident of nearby Middlebourne, Henthorn spent most of his life drilling for oil and gas in West Virginia He's a retired wildcatter, a dying breed

"I still have a few wells that I pump," he shouted above the burping, belching engines, the same type that have been used for years in the process of drawing oil and gas from the earth "But I don't drill anymore "

Henthorn was born just a couple of years after the advent of the Sistersville boom, which began shortly before the turn of the century and made West Virginia the nation's premier oil and gas-producing state until nearly 1920

Horse-drawn wagons were used to pull the steam and natural gas powered drilling gear over the state's dirt roads to the well sites in those days It was a hard, dangerous life but one filled with reward and excitement for the hardy breed of men who came to be known as wildcatters

"I guess I've brought in two dozen wells in my time,' Henthorn said as he surveyed the sparkling, renovated engines all about him "I grew up during the boom and went to Texas in 1919 to work in the fields down there," he said "Then I came back to West Virginia and got my own steam drilling rig in 1928 "

A drilling venture cost about $8,000 in those days, compared with $45,000 in 1975

"I raised the money by stocking out wells," he said "An eighth went for $1,000 and so on If you didn't hit anything, you lost I really never hit much All my wells would start at 40 or 50 barrels a day and go down to three or four barrels a day

"But there were some good wells in this area," he said, pointing to a spot in the Sistersville city park, some 75 yards away "There was a well right over there that brought in 1,600 barrels a day There were rigs all around here back in those days

"My father was in the business, too He got started in 1902 and helped put in the first gasoline plant in this area, up at Polecat Hollow just north of town They made raw gasoline out of the oil and sold it for 10 cents a gallon

"There weren't any gasoline stations in those days and merchants would keep it in 55-gallon drums and would siphon it out with a hose whenever anybody wanted some The first gas stations opened up around here when I was a little boy, in 1910 '

ACTION LINE

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81669, Lincoln, NE 68501

Can you find out why the city hasn't repaired the only access road to the Van Dorn Branch Library? It is only a short stretch of road, but it is in deplorable condition and has been ever since the library was built. This has been called to the attention of the city many times but no action.

—G.H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The road you refer to is a 75-foot section of High Street just west of 9th Street. An ordinance to set up a paving district to repair the road was defeated by the City Council June 2, but was reconsidered and passed with amendments June 23. City Engineer Dick Erixson said last week that the traffic engineer's office and the Parks and Recreation Dept. were unaware that the ordinance had passed, so no action has been taken for two and one-half months. The city owns the property north of the road, but a private party owns the property on the south. Until the private property owner offers to pay a portion of the paving cost and files a petition with the city clerk, the road won't be repaired.

I would like to know why the park located at 16th and Lake has been torn up all summer by the Parks and Recreation Dept. and not put back together yet. The parents around here are really getting angry about it.

—B.M., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: According to Parks Superintendent Dick Hilligus, construction of a new playground at Rudge Memorial Park at 16th and Lake began about a month ago. Cement work and the preparation of a sand base were completed last week. New playground equipment is scheduled to arrive this week. All work on the park should be complete by next week, Hilligus said.

I am writing in regard to the tractor pull rip-off at the State Fair. Can you tell me why after being sent home with a rain check Sept. 3 to return to the tractor pull the following evening, which was again canceled because of weather, we can't get our $3 admission tickets refunded? The State Fair office could give me no information.

—Jim Flagherty, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: State Fair Manager Henry Brandt said last week that it is the fair's policy that no refunds are made for any event that is at least half over when the event is halted for any reason. When the Sept. 3 tractor pull was halted by rain, 38 of 52 scheduled tractors had pulled, so the event was more than half over. Rain checks good for the next day's afternoon and evening contests were issued only as a courtesy, Brandt said. The Sept. 4 afternoon pull was held as planned. Persons who had tickets (not rain checks) specifically for the Sept. 4 evening pull, which was also canceled because of rain, got their money back.

I would like to know how the University of Nebraska processes orders for football game tickets. I have just found out that it doesn't pay to get your order in on the designated day because they select the orders by a lottery. I think the public should be aware of this so you do not have to hurry and get your money in on a designated date.

—Mrs. C.W., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: There are several times as many ticket orders received each year as there are available tickets, according to Jim Pittenger, University of Nebraska-Lincoln athletic ticket manager. After certain priority orders are filled, a random drawing is conducted among the other orders for the remaining tickets. Only orders that arrive by the designated date (June 15 for this year) are eligible for the drawing. If you didn't "hurry and get your money in on a designated date," you wouldn't even be eligible for the lottery.

On March 14, 1975, I sent a $7 check to the American Kennel Club in New York City to receive registration papers for my son's pedigreed Labrador. We have not received the papers or the canceled check and do not understand the delay.

—Mrs. Marilyn Davis, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Mrs. Debra Woodard, head of the inquiries section of the registration department of the American Kennel Club (51 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10010) said the first thing that is done when an order is received is that the check or money order is cashed and a registration number is assigned. She said that if you haven't received your canceled check, then your order was never received by the club. She suggested that you stop payment on your original check and send them another check and a new application.

Ak-Sar-Ben Honors Four

Omaha (AP) — Four Nebraskans have been selected as recipients of the 18th annual Ak-Sar-Ben Agricultural Achievement Award for outstanding service to Agriculture, according to John D. Diesing, chairman of Ak-Sar-Ben's Livestock Show and Rodeo Committee.

Named to receive the awards were:

— W. Eugene Flynn of Blair, for his leadership in Nebraska's dairy industry and as an outstanding dairyman.

— Leland Herman of Wayne, for his contributions to the livestock industry as an outstanding Polled Hereford cattleman.

— John R. Jirdon of Morrill, for his 60 years of leadership and dedication to agriculture and agribusiness.

— Harold Ledinghan of Mitchell, for his contributions to soil and water conservation and his outstanding efforts as a farmer and lamb feeder.

The four men received their awards during a special dinner Monday evening.

Thyroid Puzzle Solved

By George C. Thosteson, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My doctor says I have an extremely underactive thyroid gland and has me on thyroid medication. I also have a friend going to the same doctor and he prescribes the same pills for her, but she has an overactive thyroid.

Can you explain the same medication being used for underactive and overactive thyroid? Also, she had surgery on her thyroid. — Mrs. S.A.D.

I'm glad you mentioned the fact, in passing, that your friend had thyroid surgery Without that bit of information, I would have been as puzzled as you are.

Your thyroid medication is a supplement to provide the necessary hormones your thyroid is not producing Without it you would probably be sluggish, tend toward obesity The thyroid gland governs other glandular activity and generally regulates body metabolism

In your friend's case, the opposite was true Her thyroid was overactive A surgeon removed a part of it, in that way reducing the amount of hormones secreted After such surgery an underproduction of thyroid hormone can occur For her, thyroid supplement helps stabilize matters

Dear Dr Thosteson: I am 45 years old and I'm considering plastic surgery on my large nose. I understand that no incisions are made on the outside, and that the removal of the bump is all done from the inside.

The question I have is this. If a nose is made smaller, logically there should be an excess of flesh that once covered a larger structure. Could I expect sagging skin? — Mrs. N.O.

You are correct in that the incisions are made from within the nostrils The surgeon then proceeds to remove some of the cartilage, cutting it down to the desired shape He will also adjust the excess nasal tissue to the new shape You won't have to worry about sagging skin.

You can expect some narrowing of the air passages, however

Your surgeon will have studied the anatomy of your present nose thoroughly before the operation, and he will not proceed until he knows precisely how he is going to engineer your new nose shape

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is there any diet you can go by to prevent getting arthritis? I am 78, and as yet I have had no signs of it. Knowing so many people who have become afflicted is beginning to frighten me. — Mrs. S.E.

Stop worrying Arthritis affects about 7 million persons in the U S , so you have, at 78, beaten some heavy odds already The chances are very good you will continue to do so for the rest of your life.

But, in answer to your question, no, there is no diet to prevent or cure arthritis.

FROM THE NEBRASKA MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

What causes headaches?

The Nebraska Medical Association reports that headaches are the commonest complaint of twentieth century man Most headaches are caused by over-tiredness, a stuffy room, eating or drinking too much, colds, or frustration.

The occasional headache is usually cured by rest in a quiet, darkened room, an aspirin tablet or two, a nap or a good night's sleep.

However, headaches can be more severe, return again and again, and may be accompanied by other symptoms such as nausea or vomiting, eye symptoms and other abnormal experiences. These headaches may be symptomatic of something more severe and should not be endured. The severe headache sufferer should see a physician.

Headaches caused by tension and emotion are most common and can happen to anyone. A considerable time may elapse between the worry and anxiety and a headache. Sometimes, the headache lingers long after the emotional upheaval. The chronic wear-and-tear of everyday living is enough to produce a headache.

Board To Try Council's Room

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

The Lancaster County Board will be spending some time in the City Council chambers in the near future.

The board decided Tuesday morning to use the larger council chambers for four weeks, just to get the feel of it — to decide if they want to give up their own hearing room forever.

Commissioner Bruce Hamilton, who doesn't like to see studies, paid for with tax dollars, just sit on the shelf and gather dust, raised the hearing room issue.

The conversion of the board's hearing room into a second county court room was one recommendation which came out of a recently released $15,000 space study of the County-City Building.

The transformation of hearing room into court room was one recommendation which could be implemented within the next two years, the report stated.

And Hamilton felt that the County Board ought to show leadership in following the study recommendations to help convince other departments not to drag their feet.

The other two commissioners agreed to look into the proposal, to try out the City Council chambers for a month, and to begin working with the county court on changing the hearing room into a joint court room and hearing room which could be used by both commissioners and county judges for a few years.

Even Commissioner Bob Colin, who once said the hearing room would become a court room, "over my dead body" agreed to the trial run.

The space study shows that within 10 years the County Board offices should move from the second to the first floor and the county will then share the council chambers with the City Council permanently.

County Considers Snowmobile Rules

Snowmobiles will be allowed on county roads this winter under a resolution which will come before the County Board within the next month.

After checking with other Nebraska counties, Commissioner Bob Colin suggested that the resulution follow the state rules for snowmobile operations.

Under these rules a snowmobile must be registered with the county clerk and is subject to all traffic control signs. The snowmobile must be operated by a licensed driver.

The rules allow for snowmobile operation on a street or highway only under these conditions:

—On the right-hand side of the roadway and in the same direction of traffic.

—During daylight hours only.

—The snowmobile must be equipped with at least one head light, one tail light and reflector tape on each side.

—It must be equipped with a muffler.

—The snowmobile may make a direct crossing of a street or highway at any hour of the day if done at 90 degrees to the direction of traffic and only after a complete stop.

Other rules include obtaining permission from a property owner before driving on private property.

Misdemeanor Penalty

The snowmobile rules will probably carry a misdemeanor penalty, and persons found guilty of violating the rules will be subject to a fine of not more than $100 or not more than 90 days in jail.

In other action, the County Board agreed to pay up to $50,000 in revenue sharing funds for the operation of two day care centers and more than 30 day care homes run through the Family Service Assnociation.

The $50,000 is the expected deficit for nine months beginning Oct. 1 and is caused by a reduction in welfare funds available for day care.

The County Board also agreed to put pressure on the City Council to help pay this $50,000. A state law must be changed to enable the city to spend revenue sharing funds for day care, according to an opinion by City Atty. Charles Humble.

Merry-Go-Round Debate

County Engineer Marv Nuernberger continued his merry-go-round debate with County Board Chairman Jan Gauger during the Tuesday board staff meeting.

Instead of the historic right-of-way debate, the confrontation centered around an addition error in the engineer's annual budget and a public hearing on the county one- and six-year road plans.

Nuernberger wanted the budget error corrected by raising his expenditures by $37,000.

"We're looking for every penny we can find," said Nuernberger, who has been battling budget cuts for several months. The $37,000 could fix eight to 10 deficient bridges or buy 25,000 tons of crushed rock, he said.

However, the board decided to correct the error without increasing the amount of money Nuernberger can spend during the year.

The public hearing question was not resolved. Nuernberger wants to hold an informational public hearing where the public can make suggestions for roads and bridges to be included in the one and six-year road plans.

Chairman Gauger prefers the traditional hearing, where a plan is laid out and the public simply reacts to the improvements suggested in the plan.

Highway Accident Toll Increased By 3 To 264

By The Associated Press

Three more names have been added to Nebraska's 1975 highway death toll, raising the count to 264, compared with 287 at this time last year.

The latest reported victim is a St. Francis, S.D. man, William Hairy Shirt, 62.

Hairy Shirt died Sunday in a Valentine hospital of injuries sustained last Friday when he was struck by a car as he walked across a Valentine street.

The driver of the car was identified as James Welch, of Valentine.

Police said no charges will be filed in connection with the mishap.

A two-motorcycle collision took one life in a collision early Tuesday about 1¼ miles east of Wayne on Highway 35.

The State Patrol identified the victim as Bernard J. Bonenberger, 28, of Atkinson.

The patrol said Bonenberger was operating a motorcycle that apparently went out of control and struck the rear of another eastbound vehicle.

The victim was thrown from the vehicle and struck a bridge.

Officers said the second motorcyclist, Douglas C. Mau, 23, of Wayne, was hospitalized at Wayne.

The patrol said Mary Quinlan, 47, of Dawson was killed Monday night in a two-car collision at the intersection of Highways 50 and 62 in southern Johnson County.

Officers said she was a passenger in a car driven by Mark Quinlan, 15, of Dawson. Troopers said the other vehicle was driven by Gordon L. Scott, 31, of Pawnee City.

200 Expected To Seek UNL Chancellorship

About 200 applications are expected for the position of chancellor at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

The post will be made vacant by the resignation of James Zumberge who has been named president of Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

A search committee has met with Zumberge and established guidelines to be used in recommending six of the applicants to the Board of Regents in December.

Dr. Richard Gilbert of Lincoln, chairman of the search committee, said the persons recommended must have a strong academic record successful university administrative experience.

Omaha Police Quiz 2 Women In Man's Death

Omaha (AP) — Omaha police said Tuesday they were questioning two women in connection with the fatal shooting of James M. Nunn, 26.

Officers said Nunn was found in a car in North Omaha Monday night with a bullet wound in the head.

Officers said the body apparently had been dragged to the auto after the shooting.

DIAL 477-2121

Or Write P.O. Box 81669, Lincoln, NE 68501

Can you find out why the city hasn't repaired the only access road to the Van Dorn Branch Library? It is only a short stretch of road, but it is in deplorable condition and has been ever since the library was built. This has been called to the attention of the city many times but no action.

—G.H., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: The road you refer to is a 75-foot section of High Street just west of 9th Street. An ordinance to set up a paving district to repair the road was defeated by the City Council June 2, but was reconsidered and passed with amendments June 23. City Engineer Dick Erixson said last week that the traffic engineer's office and the Parks and Recreation Dept. were unaware that the ordinance had passed, so no action has been taken for two and one-half months. The city owns the property north of the road, but a private party owns the property on the south. Until the private property owner offers to pay a portion of the paving cost and files a petition with the city clerk, the road won't be repaired.

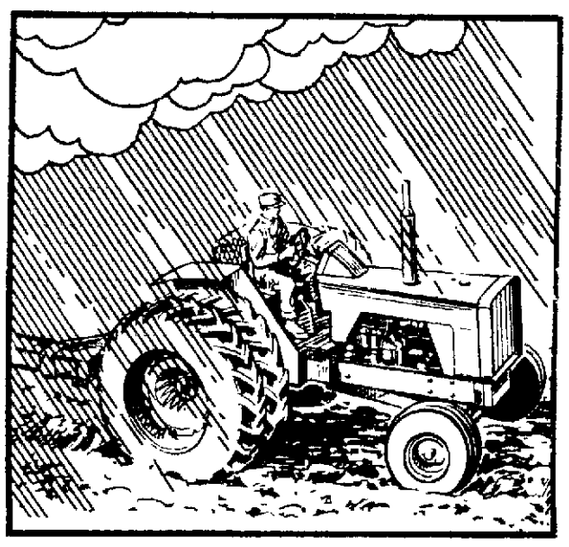

I would like to know why the park located at 16th and Lake has been torn up all summer by the Parks and Recreation Dept. and not put back together yet. The parents around here are really getting angry about it.

—B.M., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: According to Parks Superintendent Dick Hilligus, construction of a new playground at Rudge Memorial Park at 16th and Lake began about a month ago. Cement work and the preparation of a sand base were completed last week. New playground equipment is scheduled to arrive this week. All work on the park should be complete by next week, Hilligus said.

I am writing in regard to the tractor pull rip-off at the State Fair. Can you tell me why after being sent home with a rain check Sept. 3 to return to the tractor pull the following evening, which was again canceled because of weather, we can't get our $3 admission tickets refunded? The State Fair office could give me no information.

—Jim Flagherty, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: State Fair Manager Henry Brandt said last week that it is the fair's policy that no refunds are made for any event that is at least half over when the event is halted for any reason. When the Sept. 3 tractor pull was halted by rain, 38 of 52 scheduled tractors had pulled, so the event was more than half over. Rain checks good for the next day's afternoon and evening contests were issued only as a courtesy, Brandt said. The Sept. 4 afternoon pull was held as planned. Persons who had tickets (not rain checks) specifically for the Sept. 4 evening pull, which was also canceled because of rain, got their money back.

I would like to know how the University of Nebraska processes orders for football game tickets. I have just found out that it doesn't pay to get your order in on the designated day because they select the orders by a lottery. I think the public should be aware of this so you do not have to hurry and get your money in on a designated date.

—Mrs. C.W., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: There are several times as many ticket orders received each year as there are available tickets, according to Jim Pittenger, University of Nebraska-Lincoln athletic ticket manager. After certain priority orders are filled, a random drawing is conducted among the other orders for the remaining tickets. Only orders that arrive by the designated date (June 15 for this year) are eligible for the drawing. If you didn't "hurry and get your money in on a designated date," you wouldn't even be eligible for the lottery.

On March 14, 1975, I sent a $7 check to the American Kennel Club in New York City to receive registration papers for my son's pedigreed Labrador. We have not received the papers or the canceled check and do not understand the delay.

—Mrs. Marilyn Davis, Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Mrs. Debra Woodard, head of the inquiries section of the registration department of the American Kennel Club (51 Madison Ave., New York, N.Y. 10010) said the first thing that is done when an order is received is that the check or money order is cashed and a registration number is assigned. She said that if you haven't received your canceled check, then your order was never received by the club. She suggested that you stop payment on your original check and send them another check and a new application.

Ak-Sar-Ben Honors Four

Omaha (AP) — Four Nebraskans have been selected as recipients of the 18th annual Ak-Sar-Ben Agricultural Achievement Award for outstanding service to Agriculture, according to John D. Diesing, chairman of Ak-Sar-Ben's Livestock Show and Rodeo Committee.

Named to receive the awards were:

— W. Eugene Flynn of Blair, for his leadership in Nebraska's dairy industry and as an outstanding dairyman.

— Leland Herman of Wayne, for his contributions to the livestock industry as an outstanding Polled Hereford cattleman.

— John R. Jirdon of Morrill, for his 60 years of leadership and dedication to agriculture and agribusiness.

— Harold Ledinghan of Mitchell, for his contributions to soil and water conservation and his outstanding efforts as a farmer and lamb feeder.

The four men received their awards during a special dinner Monday evening.

25% Of Bridges In State Deficient

By United Press International

A study of Nebraska's 18,000 bridges indicates 25% of the bridges are deficient by federal engineering standards.

A total of 4,500 of the state's bridges are too old and weak to handle the maximum vehicle weights or traffic volume on connecting roads, the study indicated.

The study, which was conducted by the Road Information Program, a research and information agency headquartered at Washington, D.C., also said another 4,428 bridges are adequate to handle all traffic for now, but need substantial repair to prevent serious deterioration.

The study emphasized there is little danger of collapse because bridges weakened by age and use are posted for maximum safe loads. The study covered bridges on the interstate system, state highways and local roads and streets.

Robert B. Crosby, of Lincoln, secretary and counsel of the Hetter Nebraska Association, said, "It's absurd to have one construction worker in every six unemployed in Nebraska when one bridge in every four needs major work."

He said the State Roads Department is doing a commendable job in an efforts to upgrade the 3,200 bridges on the state system when the department is hampered by insufficient funds.

The report said the posting of low-weight limits on old, weak bridges as a safety precaution often requires farm trucks, school buses and other heavy vehicles to go miles out of the way to use other bridges. The result is time and fuel wasted and higher vehicle operating costs, the report said.

The agency estimated it would cost $1.5 billion to restore the 4,500 deficient bridges, based on the 1974 national average bridge replacement costs.

The report said a $1.5 billion bridge modernization effort would create an estimated 4,226 jobs a year for the next 15 years. The resulting $51.3 million payroll would generate $8.9 million a year in federal and state income taxes, the report said, an corporate spending would amount to $45.6 million.

Crosby said the state, counties and cities could not raise the funds needed for bridge modernization without borrowing or increasing motor-fuel taxes. As additional funding, he urged the federal aid program for helping the state upgrade deficient bridges be expanded.

State Employe Pay, Names Remain Open

By United Press International

Stan Matzke, director of the Nebraska Administrative Services Department, Tuesday said the names and salaries of state employes will remain a matter of public record through his department.

Matzke, who met earlier in the day with Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas, also said state agency expenditures for the purchase of all goods and services would remain open to the public. He said the expenditures are paid through the state computer system, but the documentation remains in the original of photocopy form.

Matzke, Douglas and their staffs met to clarify the application of the new state law that requires the state's computer files to be kept confidential. When the new law went into effect this year, questions were raised over the amount of state information that would be classified confidential.

Matzke said the essential criterion for application of the new law is that the information must be in the computer.

Material that will remain confidential, unless an employe or agency waives the secrecy, is other personal information on state workers, such as payroll deductions, social security numbers, addresses and educational and welfare information, he said.

Matzke said such information was kept confidential prior to the passage of the new law by the State Legislature.

He also said the governor cannot automatically obtain information on such subjects as handicapped children and welfare caseloads.

State Official Claims Pay Figures 'Unfair'

State Personnel Department officials said Tuesday a labor group has distorted and misinterpreted the state's wage survey.

State Personnel Director Roy Gardner said he resents insinuations by the executive secretary of the Nebraska Association of Public Employes (NAPE) that political pressure colored the survey, which compared state employes' wages with other public and private wage levels.

Gardner said Roger Schulz's claim that he understated salaries in other states is "grossly unfair," as evidenced by Schulz' own example.

Schulz compared the wages of highway maintenance workers in Nebraska and Colorado. Schulz found the Colorado pay plan lists the salary for that job at $727 per month, not the $469 per month that Garnder's survey indicated.

"In reality," Gardner said, "Schulz's comparison is incorrect because the salary survey compared job duties, not titles."

Colorado officials told Gardner that a maintenance worker in Nebraska was comparable to a "utility worker" there in job duties. That job starts at $469 per month.

In addition, he said, Schulz failed to note that as of July 1 a utility worker in Colorado receives $525 per month, while his Nebraska counterpart now earns $531.

John Russell, the department's labor expert, said he pointed out to Schulz that job duties, not titles, were compared in the survey.

Schulz's figures indicating how low a Nebraska state worker is paid, Gardner said, are "a classic example of utilizing figures in such a way that they show a desired picture."

The figures, he said, were not weighted according to how many employes there are in each class. So, for instance, the fact that the state has only three plumbers and pays them considerably less than privately employed plumbers distorted the small variations between other classes of employes having greater numbers.

Gardner said, "We know that some (wages) are low, some are high. But, we need more time before we're willing to recommend changes (in the pay scale)."

Unicam Panel May Sue To End Grain Squeeze

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Loran Schmit said Tuesday there was an excellent chance a suit would be filed to force the Ford administration to use the Norris-LaGuardia Act to end the longshoremen's threat to Russian grain exports.

Schmit is chairman of the Legislature's Agriculture Committee, which voted Tuesday to direct its staff to look into the possibility of filing a suit. Grain is now being loaded under an order from a U.S. District Court, but Schmit said the continued threat of a longshoremen's strike is keeping grain prices at least 35 cents per bushel below their fair market value.

Schmidt said there would eventually be further sales to the Soviet Union, but only after farmers were forced to sell their crops at lower prices.

Committee Vice Chairman John DeCamp said the threat of a strike by the longshoremen forced President Ford to extend his moratorium on grain sales until October.

Schmit said the financial obligations of many farmers would force them to sell before the moratorium ends.

DeCamp said the administration could use the Norris-LaGuardia Act to force the longshoremen to load grain or order them not to interfere with others loading grain.

Schmit said the U.S. Department of Agriculture was aware that the administration could use the act, but it wasn't willing to get involved in a head-tohead court battle with the unions.

Board To Try Council's Room

By NANCY HICKS
Star Staff Writer

The Lancaster County Board will be spending some time in the City Council chambers in the near future.

The board decided Tuesday morning to use the larger council chambers for four weeks, just to get the feel of it — to decide if they want to give up their own hearing room forever.

Commissioner Bruce Hamilton, who doesn't like to see studies, paid for with tax dollars, just sit on the shelf and gather dust, raised the hearing room issue.

The conversion of the board's hearing room into a second county court room was one recommendation which came out of a recently released $15,000 space study of the County-City Building.

The transformation of hearing room into court room was one recommendation which could be implemented within the next two years, the report stated.

And Hamilton felt that the County Board ought to show leadership in following the study recommendations to help convince other departments not to drag their feet.

The other two commissioners agreed to look into the proposal, to try out the City Council chambers for a month, and to begin working with the county court on changing the hearing room into a joint court room and hearing room which could be used by both commissioners and county judges for a few years.

Even Commissioner Bob Colin, who once said the hearing room would become a court room, "over my dead body" agreed to the trial run.

The space study shows that within 10 years the County Board offices should move from the second to the first floor and the county will then share the council chambers with the City Council permanently.

County Considers Snowmobile Rules

Snowmobiles will be allowed on county roads this winter under a resolution which will come before the County Board within the next month.

After checking with other Nebraska counties, Commissioner Bob Colin suggested that the resulution follow the state rules for snowmobile operations.

Under these rules a snowmobile must be registered with the county clerk and is subject to all traffic control signs. The snowmobile must be operated by a licensed driver.

The rules allow for snowmobile operation on a street or highway only under these conditions

—On the right-hand side of the roadway and in the same direction of traffic

—During daylight hours only.

—The snowmobile must be equipped with at least one head light, one tail light and reflector tape on each side.

—It must be equipped with a muffler.

—The snowmobile may make a direct crossing of a street or highway at any hour of the day if done at 90 degrees to the direction of traffic and only after a complete stop.

Other rules include obtaining permission from a property owner before driving on private property.

Misdemeanor Penalty

The snowmobile rules will probably carry a misdemeanor penalty, and persons found guilty of violating the rules will be subject to a fine of not more than $100 or not more than 90 days in jail.

In other action, the County Board agreed to pay up to $50,000 in revenue sharing funds for the operation of two day care centers and more than 30 day care homes run through the Family Service Assnociation.

The $50,000 is the expected deficit for nine months beginning Oct. 1 and is caused by a reduction in welfare funds available for day care.

The County Board also agreed to put pressure on the City Council to help pay this $50,000. A state law must be changed to enable the city to spend revenue sharing funds for day care, according to an opinion by City Atty. Charles Humble

Merry-Go-Round Debate

County Engineer Marv Nuernberger continued his merry-go-round debate with County Board Chairman Jan Gauger during the Tuesday board staff meeting.

Instead of the historic right-of-way debate, the confrontation centered around an addition error in the engineer's annual budget and a public hearing on the county one- and six-year road plans.

Nuernberger wanted the budget error corrected by raising his expenditures by $37,000.

"We're looking for every penny we can find," said Nuernberger, who has been battling budget cuts for several months. The $37,000 could fix eight to 10 deficient bridges or buy 25,000 tons of crushed rock, he said

However, the board decided to correct the error without increasing the amount of money Nuernberger can spend during the year.

The public hearing question was not resolved. Nuernberger wants to hold an informational public hearing where the public can make suggestions for roads and bridges to be included in the one and six-year road plans.

Chairman Gauger prefers the traditional hearing, where a plan is laid out and the public simply reacts to the improvements suggested in the plan.

Highway Accident Toll Increased By 3 To 264

By The Associated Press

Three more names have been added to Nebraska's 1975 highway death toll, raising the count to 264, compared with 287 at this time last year.

The latest reported victim is a St. Francis, S.D. man, William Hairy Shirt, 62.

Hairy Shirt died Sunday in a Valentine hospital of injuries sustained last Friday when he was struck by a car as he walked across a Valentine street.

The driver of the car was identified as James Welch, of Valentine.

Police said no charges will be filed in connection with the mishap.

A two-motorcycle collision took one life in a collision early Tuesday about 1¼ miles east of Wayne on Highway 35.

The State Patrol identified the victim as Bernard J. Bonenberger, 28, of Atkinson.

The patrol said Bonenberger was operating a motorcycle that apparently went out of control and struck the rear of another eastbound vehicle.

The victim was thrown from the vehicle and struck a bridge.

Officers said the second motorcyclist, Douglas C. Mau, 23, of Wayne, was hospitalized at Wayne.

The patrol said Mary Quinlan, 47, of Dawson was killed Monday night in a two-car collision at the intersection of Highways 50 and 62 in southern Johnson County.

Officers said she was a passenger in a car driven by Mark Quinlan, 15, of Dawson. Troopers said the other vehicle was driven by Gordon L. Scott, 31, of Pawnee City.

200 Expected To Seek UNL Chancellorship

About 200 applications are expected for the position of chancellor at the University of Nebraska at Lincoln.

The post will be made vacant by the resignation of James Zumberge who has been named president of Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

A search committee has met with Zumberge and established guidelines to be used in recommending six of the applicants to the Board of Regents in December.

Dr. Richard Gilbert of Lincoln, chairman of the search committee, said the persons recommended must have a strong academic record successful university administrative experience.

Omaha Police Quiz 2 Women In Man's Death

Omaha (AP) — Omaha police said Tuesday they were questioning two women in connection with the fatal shooting of James M. Nunn, 26.

Officers said Nunn was found in a car in North Omaha Monday night with a bullet wound in the head.

Officers said the body apparently had been dragged to the auto after the shooting.

Fromme To Be Own Co-Counsel

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, accused of attempting to assassinate President Ford, was declared mentally competent Tuesday to stand trial and act as her own co-counsel.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas J. MacBride, who has scheduled the trial to start Nov. 4, said he agreed with the court-appointed psychiatrist that Miss Fromme understood the charge against her and could "knowingly and willingly" waive her right to an attorney.

Miss Fromme, a 26-year-old disciple of convicted murderer Charles Manson, was arrested Sept. 5 after a Secret Service agent said he wrested a gun from her hand two feet from the President. The gun was not fired and Ford was unhurt.

She sat quietly, wearing a hooded, red dress as usual, when Dr. James Richmond told the court his opinion "is that she is competent to understand the proceedings against her and cooperate in her defense."

MacBride appointed Miss Fromme's public defender, E. Richard Walker, to serve as co-counsel, and warned: "I will not have Mr. Walker and then Miss Fromme jumping up and down like the pistons of an engine."

He said only one lawyer would be allowed to make an opening statement and only one lawyer per witness could ask questions or enter objections.

The psychiatrist's report, based on a one-hour, 40-minute examination, was ordered sealed by the judge at least until after a jury is selected.

Walker later declined comment when asked if Miss Fromme had any reaction to Monday's incident in San Francisco in which a shot was fired at Ford. A woman, Sara Moore, 45, was arrested and charged with the same offense as Miss Fromme.

Walker said he was not aware of any investigator questioning Miss Fromme about Monday's case. She is held in county jail in lieu of $350,000 bail. Walker said he will continue trying to reduce the bail.

Asked whether Miss Fromme would give the opening statement and be the primary questioner of witnesses, he said: "I guess Miss Fromme is senior counsel. You'll have to ask her about that.

"It's not the happiest position for a lawyer to be in, to have a layman for a co-counsel," the bearded public defender told reporters. But he said Miss Fromme was pleased with the decision.

MacBride told Miss Fromme he would not permit her to use the courtroom as a forum for "political statements on the nature of the ecology or how bad the conditions of the trees. They are not an issue in this case."

Miss Fromme, at an earlier hearing, was interrupted by the judge when she called for a halt in the cutting of redwoods and warned that "the gun is pointed; whether it goes off is up to you all."

Intelligence Agencies Ignored Nixon Order

. . . According To Sen. Church

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence agencies ignored a presidential order revoking a plan authorizing illegal domestic spying, Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Frank Church said on Tuesday.

"The decision of the President seemed to matter very little," said Church, D-Idaho.

He noted that the CIA had illegally opened mail before the so-called Huston plan was approved by then-President Richard Nixon. The Huston plan authorized what Church said were illegal wiretaps, mail openings and burglaries.

But five days later Nixon yielded to objections from then-FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and then-Atty. Gen. John Mitchell and revoked the plan. However, the burglaries and mail openings continued, said Church.

White House aide Tom Charles Huston testified the intelligence agencies — not the White House — drew up the plan which is generally referred to by his last name.

Huston said he endorsed the plan because he thought it was needed to curb rising domestic violence.

Such violence still exists, Huston said, pointing to the two apparent attempts in recent days to kill President Ford. But he said the disclosures of the Watergate period have convinced him that although it involves a serious risk, intelligence activities inside the United States must remain within the limits of the law.

Huston has testified he was also under the impression that neither Nixon nor President Lyndon B. Johnson knew of the CIA's Operation Chaos nor the FBI's Operation Conintelpro which were aimed against dissident groups.

"The big mistake I made was that I assumed the integrity of the people involved in these operations was such ... that these types of enormous powers would be only be used in very limited, narrow circumstances," Huston said.

"It was my opinion the Fourth Amendment of the Constitution (which forbids illegal search and seizure) did not apply in matters of internal security" because of the inherent right of the President to insure domestic security, Huston said.

He said it is "totally untrue" that the Huston Plan was a precursor to the creation of the White House "Plumbers" to investigate new leaks or to the Watergate break-in.

He described the Plumbers as a "group of vigilantes operating for essentially political purposes."

In a related development, Sen. Richard Schweiker R-Pa., announced that Church and committee vice chairman John Tower, R-Tex., have authorized the committee to study the CIA's and FBI's cooperation with the Warren Commission's investigation into the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

Schweiker said he and Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., will seek to determine "the kind of material that was supplied (to the commission) and the kind of material that wasn't."

Schweiker referred to recent disclosures that the FBI destroyed a threatening note delivered by Lee Harvey Oswald to FBI offices in Dallas several days before the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination and that the CIA apparently never told the Warren Commission about plots to kill Cuba's Fidel Castro.

Frenchwoman Reprieved

PARIS (AP) — The French government said Tuesday it has won at least a temporary reprieve for a French woman archeologist threatened with death by her African rebel captors unless France gives them military supplies and money.

President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's spokesman announced two hours after the rebel ultimatum expired Tuesday morning that 48 hours of nonstop negotiations by radio with the rebels had led to the reprieve for 38-year-old Mrs. Francoise Claustre.

Further talks would be held this week, he said.

Mrs. Claustre was captured 17 months ago in a raid on the Bardai oasis in the rugged Tibesti Desert region of northern Chad, where she had been studying Iron Age relics.

The rebel Toubou tribesmen threatened to kill Mrs. Claustre unless France gave them 80 tons of military equipment — not including arms — and $890,000 in cash.

The supplies — jeeps, radios, uniforms, boots, medicine, binoculars and other military materiel — have reportedly been ready for delivery at a French base since July.

But Chad's president Gen. Felix Malloum, whose troops have battled the rebels — with French assistance — for years, has strongly opposed giving any supplies to the Toubous.

Support Loan Interest Rate To Be Raised

Washington (UPI) — Interest rates on the Agriculture Department's commodity price support loans will be raised from the current 6.125% to 7.5% effective Oct. 1, department officials announced.

The increase also will apply to loans for crop storage facilities and drying equipment. It was ordered because of the increased cost of borrowing money used for relending to farmers, officials said.

Spokesmen said the higher rate will apply to all outstanding loans on which applications were received on or after Oct. 1, 1974. It will also apply to new loans disbursed on or after Oct. 1, 1975.

25% Of Bridges In State Deficient

By United Press International

A study of Nebraska's 18,000 bridges indicates 25% of the bridges are deficient by federal engineering standards.

A total of 4,500 of the state's bridges are too old and weak to handle the maximum vehicle weights or traffic volume on connecting roads, the study indicated.

The study, which was conducted by the Road Information Program, a research and information agency headquartered at Washington, D.C., also said another 4,428 bridges are adequate to handle all traffic for now, but need substantial repair to prevent serious deterioration.

The study emphasized there is little danger of collapse because bridges weakened by age and use are posted for maximum safe loads. The study covered bridges on the interstate system, state highways and local roads and streets.

Robert B. Crosby, of Lincoln, secretary and counsel of the Hetter Nebraska Association, said, "It's absurd to have one construction worker in every six unemployed in Nebraska when one bridge in every four needs major work."

He said the State Roads Department is doing a commendable job in an efforts to upgrade the 3,200 bridges on the state system when the department is hampered by insufficient funds.

The report said the posting of low-weight limits on old, weak bridges as a safety precaution often requires farm trucks, school buses and other heavy vehicles to go miles out of the way to use other bridges. The result is time and fuel wasted and higher vehicle operating costs, the report said.

The agency estimated it would cost $1.5 billion to restore the 4,500 deficient bridges, based on the 1974 national average bridge replacement costs.

The report said a $1.5 billion bridge modernization effort would create an estimated 4,226 jobs a year for the next 15 years. The resulting $51.3 million payroll would generate $8.9 million a year in federal and state income taxes, the report said, an corporate spending would amount to $45.6 million.

Crosby said the state, counties and cities could not raise the funds needed for bridge modernization without borrowing or increasing motor-fuel taxes. As additional funding, he urged the federal aid program for helping the state upgrade deficient bridges be expanded.

State Employe Pay, Names Remain Open

By United Press International

Stan Matzke, director of the Nebraska Administrative Services Department, Tuesday said the names and salaries of state employes will remain a matter of public record through his department

Matzke, who met earlier in the day with Atty. Gen. Paul Douglas, also said state agency expenditures for the purchase of all goods and services would remain open to the public He said the expenditures are paid through the state computer system, but the documentation remains in the original of photocopy form.

Matzke, Douglas and their staffs met to clarify the application of the new state law that requires the state's computer files to be kept confidential. When the new law went into effect this year, questions were raised over the amount of state information that would be classified confidential.

Matzke said the essential criterion for application of the new law is that the information must be in the computer.

Material that will remain confidential, unless an employe or agency waives the secrecy, is other personal information on state workers, such as payroll deductions, social security numbers, addresses and educational and welfare information, he said

Matzke said such information was kept confidential prior to the passage of the new law by the State Legislature.

He also said the governor cannot automatically obtain information on such subjects as handicapped children and welfare caseloads.

State Official Claims Pay Figures 'Unfair'

State Personnel Department officials said Tuesday a labor group has distorted and misinterpreted the state's wage survey

State Personnel Director Roy Gardner said he resents insinuations by the executive secretary of the Nebraska Association of Public Employes (NAPE) that political pressure colored the survey, which compared state employes' wages with other public and private wage levels.

Gardner said Roger Schulz's claim that he understated salaries in other states is "grossly unfair," as evidenced by Schulz' own example.

Schulz compared the wages of highway maintenance workers in Nebraska and Colorado. Schulz found the Colorado pay plan lists the salary for that job at $727 per month, not the $469 per month that Garnder's survey indicated.

"In reality," Gardner said, "Schulz's comparison is incorrect because the salary survey compared job duties, not titles."

Colorado officials told Gardner that a maintenance worker in Nebraska was comparable to a "utility worker" there in job duties. That job starts at $469 per month.

In addition, he said, Schulz failed to note that as of July 1 a utility worker in Colorado receives $525 per month, while his Nebraska counterpart now earns $531

John Russell, the department's labor expert, said he pointed out to Schulz that job duties, not titles, were compared in the survey.

Schulz's figures indicating how low a Nebraska state worker is paid, Gardner said, are "a classic example of utilizing figures in such a way that they show a desired picture."

The figures, he said, were not weighted according to how many employes there are in each class So, for instance, the fact that the state has only three plumbers and pays them considerably less than privately employed plumbers distorted the small variations between other classes of employes having greater numbers.

Gardner said, "We know that some (wages) are low, some are high. But, we need more time before we're willing to recommend changes (in the pay scale)."

Unicam Panel May Sue To End Grain Squeeze

By The Associated Press

State Sen. Loran Schmit said Tuesday there was an excellent chance a suit would be filed to force the Ford administration to use the Norris-LaGuardia Act to end the longshoremen's threat to Russian grain exports.

Schmit is chairman of the Legislature's Agriculture Committee, which voted Tuesday to direct its staff to look into the possibility of filing a suit. Grain is now being loaded under an order from a U.S. District Court, but Schmit said the continued threat of a longshoremen's strike is keeping grain prices at least 35 cents per bushel below their fair market value.

Schmidt said there would eventually be further sales to the Soviet Union, but only after farmers were forced to sell their crops at lower prices.

Committee Vice Chairman John DeCamp said the threat of a strike by the longshoremen forced President Ford to extend his moratorium on grain sales until October.

Schmit said the financial obligations of many farmers would force them to sell before the moratorium ends.

DeCamp said the administration could use the Norris-LaGuardia Act to force the longshoremen to load grain or order them not to interfere with others loading grain.

Schmit said the U.S. Department of Agriculture was aware that the administration could use the act, but it wasn't willing to get involved in a head-tohead court battle with the unions.

Police Warned Secret Service

San Francisco (AP) — Police here warned the Secret Service last Saturday that the woman who fired a shot at President Ford was a potential assassin who threatened to "test the system" at a presidential appearance the day before the shooting.

Chief of Inspectors Charles Barca quoted Secret Service officials as saying that Sara Jane Moore could be released from jail on a minor weapons charge Sunday because the federal authorities would handle her.

"This gal could be another Squeaky Fromme," Police Inspector Jack O'Shea said he told the Secret Service on Saturday, after a call from the 45-year-old Mrs. Moore.

"She said she might go down to Stanford and test the system," O'Shea said. "She never clarified or explained it."

Miss Fromme, a follower of Charles Manson, is charged with pointing a loaded pistol at Ford on Sept. 5 in Sacramento, 90 miles east of San Francisco.

The Secret Service had no immediate comment on the report.

The report of the failure of the Secret Service to follow Mrs. Moore more closely sparked a controversy in Washington, with Treasury Secretary William Simon and various U.S. senators and congressmen calling for a new look at presidential protection.

When Ford spoke at Stanford University on Sunday, the Santa Clara County sheriff's department was told to look for Mrs. Moore.

But she had been arrested by San Francisco police on a misdemeanor charge of carrying a gun. A .44-caliber weapon was seized.

Sara Jane Moore UPI

"We thought we better pick her up," Barca said.

Mrs. Moore was then released Sunday afternoon about the time Ford was speaking in Stanford, 35 miles south.

"Police Lt. Raymond White called the Secret Service and mentioned did they want her held . . .(They said) it won't be necessary, we'll go talk to her," Barca said.

He added that the Secret Service picked her up that night, questioned and then released her.

"As a result of the interview, the Secret Service assessed that she was not of sufficient protection interest to warrant surveillance during the President's visit," said Secret Service spokesman Kenneth Lynch in Washington.

O'Shea said that he knew that Mrs. Moore had been an informer for various federal agencies in the past, including the FBI.

Blue Blood Became A Converted Radical

Los Angeles (UPI) — Sara Moore was a blue blood Southerner with a country club "do-gooder" background who went from volunteer work on the patty Hearst food ransom to FBI informant to converted radical and eventual arrest as a would-be presidential assassin.

When she allegedly fired a pistol at President Ford Monday, she was still trying to get back in the good graces of radicals who had ostracized her as a "security risk" when she admitted to them her role as FBI informant.

Mrs. Moore's transformation from suburban housewife to gun wielder was related in the Los Angeles Times Tuesday by reporter Ellen Hume who interviewed her three months ago and kept track of her involvement with San Francisco Bay area radical circles.

Mrs. Moore "was perfect for the job," the Times said. "She was a 46-year-old accountant from a wealthy West Virginia family, a woman who had outgrown her old dreams of a stage career by 50 pounds, 20 years and a Hollywood divorce.

"A blue blood Southerner and country club do-gooder," she was making $50,000 a year as an accountant and getting child support payments for her 8-year-old son from her ex-husband, when she volunteered to work in the $2 million food giveaway that was part of the Symbionese Liberation Army ransom for Miss Hearst.

She was asked by the FBI to befriend the radicals she met.

"I was really nervous but I was intrigued by the whole thing. It was like a Grade B movie," she said.

Her assignment was "Tom," a suspected SLA sympathizer.

"I was introduced to this murky world of drugs, of wholesale screwing, of filthy language. Frequently I was the only person at parties who did not openly use drugs, she said."

She worked her way into serious radical circles that eschewed drugs, the Times said, and eventually made contact with a "secret Marxist-Leninist study group and the terrorist fringe."

She began to side with the radicals and described her target, "Tom," as "so nice, such a good dedicated person. He wasn't at all as they had pictured him — evil incarnate, a dupe, a spy in the pay of Red China or Russia."

She deliberately exposed herself as an informer, talking openly on radio and television about her role and denouncing the FBI.

The radicals no longer trusted her. She bought a gun and learned to use it, she said, because of threats on her life by radicals, but hoped to be valuable to "the cause" again.

FBI Says Mrs. Moore Flunked Informant Test

Washington (UPI) — Sara Jane Moore, charged with attempted assassination of President Ford, tried out as an FBI informant but flunked out three months ago because she didn't keep quiet about it, the bureau said Tuesday.

"She was paid mostly for expenses," an FBI spokesman said. "Whether she was paid for information, I don't know."

In a statement, the FBI said Mrs. Moore, 45, a divorced mother, "was contacted as a potential security informant from approximately June 1974 until June, 1975, at which time her status as a potential security informant was terminated due to her public disclosure that she had been furnishing information to the FBI."

A spokesman said "potential security informants" are persons who have not established their reliability to the FBI's satisfaction.

"She had been on kind of a probationary status to determine how reliable her information was," the spokesman explained. "But that was terminated when she spoke out."

The Secret Service said Tuesday Mrs. Moore was a gun-trafficking informant for the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, as well as working with the FBI.

The Los Angeles Times quoted Mrs. Moore as saying an agent told her, after she had publicly disclosed her connections with the FBI: "Get the hell back — it's time for you to return to the square life.' "

Fromme To Be Own Co-Counsel

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme, accused of attempting to assassinate President Ford, was declared mentally competent Tuesday to stand trial and act as her own co-counsel.

U.S. District Court Judge Thomas J. MacBride, who has scheduled the trial to start Nov. 4, said he agreed with the court-appointed psychiatrist that Miss Fromme understood the charge against her and could "knowingly and willingly" waive her right to an attorney.

Miss Fromme, a 26-year-old disciple of convicted murderer Charles Manson, was arrested Sept. 5 after a Secret Service agent said he wrested a gun from her hand two feet from the President. The gun was not fired and Ford was unhurt.

She sat quietly, wearing a hooded, red dress as usual, when Dr. James Richmond told the court his opinion "is that she is competent to understand the proceedings against her and cooperate in her defense."

MacBride appointed Miss Fromme's public defender, E. Richard Walker, to serve as co-counsel, and warned: "I will not have Mr. Walker and then Miss Fromme jumping up and down like the pistons of an engine."

He said only one lawyer would be allowed to make an opening statement and only one lawyer per witness could ask questions or enter objections.

The psychiatrist's report, based on a one-hour, 40-minute examination, was ordered sealed by the judge at least until after a jury is selected.

Walker later declined comment when asked if Miss Fromme had any reaction to Monday's incident in San Francisco in which a shot was fired at Ford. A woman, Sara Moore, 45, was arrested and charged with the same offense as Miss Fromme.

Walker said he was not aware of any investigator questioning Miss Fromme about Monday's case. She is held in county jail in lieu of $350,000 bail. Walker said he will continue trying to reduce the bail.

Asked whether Miss Fromme would give the opening statement and be the primary questioner of witnesses, he said: "I guess Miss Fromme is senior counsel. You'll have to ask her about that.

"It's not the happiest position for a lawyer to be in, to have a layman for a co-counsel," the bearded public defender told reporters. But he said Miss Fromme was pleased with the decision.

MacBride told Miss Fromme he would not permit her to use the courtroom as a forum for "political statements on the nature of the ecology or how bad the conditions of the trees. They are not an issue in this case."

Miss Fromme, at an earlier hearing, was interrupted by the judge when she called for a halt in the cutting of redwoods and warned that "the gun is pointed; whether it goes off is up to you all."

Intelligence Agencies Ignored Nixon Order

. . . According To Sen. Church

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. intelligence agencies ignored a presidential order revoking a plan authorizing illegal domestic spying, Senate Intelligence Committee Chairman Frank Church said on Tuesday.

"The decision of the President seemed to matter very little," said Church, D-Idaho.

He noted that the CIA had illegally opened mail before the so-called Huston plan was approved by then-President Richard Nixon. The Huston plan authorized what Church said were illegal wiretaps, mail openings and burglaries.

Schweiker said he and Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., will seek to determine "the kind of material that was supplied (to the commission) and the kind of material that wasn't."

Schweiker referred to recent disclosures that the FBI destroyed a threatening note delivered by Lee Harvey Oswald to FBI offices in Dallas several days before the Nov. 22, 1963, assassination and that the CIA apparently never told the Warren Commission about plots to kill Cuba's Fidel Castro.

The supplies — jeeps, radios, uniforms, boots, medicine, binoculars and other military materiel — have reportedly been ready for delivery at a French base since July.

But Chad's president Gen. Felix Malloum, whose troops have battled the rebels — with French assistance — for years, has strongly opposed giving any supplies to the Toubous.

Support Loan Interest Rate To Be Raised

Washington (UPI) — Interest rates on the Agriculture Department's commodity price support loans will be raised from the current 6.125% to 7.5% effective Oct. 1, department officials announced.

The increase also will apply to loans for crop storage facilities and drying equipment. It was ordered because of the increased cost of borrowing money used for relending to farmers, officials said.

Spokesmen said the higher rate will apply to all outstanding loans on which applications were received on or after Oct. 1, 1974. It will also apply to new loans disbursed on or after Oct. 1, 1975.

Moore To Have Mental Testing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sara Jane Moore, accused of trying to kill President Ford with a pistol shot, was ordered by a magistrate Tuesday to undergo a psychiatric examination.

U.S. Magistrate Owen Woodruff directed that Mrs. Moore be taken to the San Diego Metropolitan Correctional Center for the mental tests. Woodruff said findings would be reported to him by Nov. 18.

Mrs. Moore, seized moments after she fired a gun at Ford on Monday, smiled as she stepped into the crowded courtroom wearing a light blue pants suit and a pair of brown boots.

She sat down with feet crossed and hands clasped and spoke to her attorney occasionally during the proceedings.

Mrs. Moore a middle-aged mother wih radical leanings, is being held on $500,000 bail.

Woodruff denied a request by public defender James Hewitt that he and a psychiatrist of his choosing be allowed to accompany Mrs. Moore to San Diego.

Woodruff delayed action until 4 p.m. Friday to give Hewitt a chance to appeal. Hewitt said he had not decided whether he would but said another reason for the stay was to give Mrs. Moore time to make arrangements for her 9-year-old son, currently in the Youth Guidance Center.

"She's a mother and she naturally is concerned about her child," Hewitt said.

The 45-year-old divorcee is accused of firing a .38-caliber bullet in the direction of President Ford as he walked from the St. Francis hotel to his presidential limousine. If convicted, she faces possible life imprisonment.

Outside of court, U.S. Atty. James L. Browning said his request for sanity tests was based partly on "certain information from federal officials about Mrs. Moore." He declined to specify what that information was.

"I don't know whether she is competent to stand trial," Browning said.

Hewitt said in response to reporters' questions that Mrs. Moore's state of mind was "vague," and that she was "cloudy" about details of the incident Monday. He also said she was "not particularly" happy about all the publicity she was getting.

Woodruff also granted a request by Hewitt that Mrs. Moore have counsel present whenever a law enforcement officer speaks to her about the case.

Mrs. Moore told authorities that she had debated whether to shoot at President Ford and that if he had come into view 10 minutes later she would have been gone because she wanted to pick up her son from school.

While answering questions Monday night to determine her eligibility for a court-appointed attorney, Mrs. Moore, standing quietly and answering in a small voice, said she had been unemployed since May, pays $190 on a Mission district apartment and owns a 1972 compact car.

She is accused of firing a chrome-plated revolver at Ford. A quick-moving ex-Marine deflected the shot, however, and the President was rushed into a car without injury.

Police said Mrs. Moore was connected with a number of leftist groups in the Bay Area, and the FBI disclosed Monday night that she had been a paid informer until she began describing the arrangement in public.

Congressmen Ask Stiff Gun Control

Washington (UPI) — Members of Congress, while expressing relief that President Ford came unharmed through two assassination attempts, Tuesday proposed safeguards ranging from reduced presidential travel to stiff controls over handguns.

There also were calls for investigation to determine the adequacy of Secret Service protection. But House Speaker Carl Ablert, among others, expressed reservations about all three proposals.

Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., chairman of a House subcommittee on crime, introduced a bill that would outlaw all private ownership of handguns, and carry penalties of up to five years in prison and $5,000 in fines.

"I hope the President, after these two attempts, will give close consideration to a measure that will make this country a safer and saner place," Conyers said.

Mandatory Registration

Conyers' measure added to a growing list of gun control proposals, and Rep. John Murphy, D-N.Y., announced Tuesday he will offer another calling for mandatory federal registration of handguns.

Albert, cautioning against any rush to get new gun controls on the books, said: "I don't think anybody with a gun, crazy enough to try to kill the President, would go and register the gun."

The National Rifle Association decried what it called "the tidal wave of hysterical outcries for additional gun controls," calling instead for tough, mandatory prison sentences for anyone using a firearm in committing a crime.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., said Ford had "taken a courageous stand in saying that he will not become a hostage to threats from a few unbalanced people . . ."

Kennedy, who is sponsoring a bill to require gun licensing and registration, said, "The overriding lesson of these recent and nearly tragic events is that, if America cares about the safety of its leaders, it can no longer ignore the shocking absence of responsible gun control."

Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen, said the President's position on illegal use of guns was unchanged: "Certain prison sentences for those who use guns in the commission of a crime."

Rep. Bill Goodling, R-Pa., introduced a bill carrying the death penalty for attempted assassination of a President, for which the present maximum penalty is life imprisonment.

Curtailed Travel

Some members of Congress in both parties suggested Ford curtail his travel and exposure to crowds.

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott said the President should "put some limit on random handshaking . . . until we can see whether this madness is temporary."

Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, said: "It would appear the President probably would have to cut back on the number of public appearances involving movement into the crowds."

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who spent months recovering from gunshot wounds sustained during a robbery, also called for less presidential contact with the public, saying: "I think we've taken as much as we can along that line."

Albert, commenting on that score, said he did not think the President should cut down on traveling but "I think he should be less exposed to large crowds for any length of time."

Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., and House Republican leader John Rhodes suggested Congress have a look at the performance of the Secret Service protection detail.

Hollings said there are "real dedicated agents" in the Secret Service but "I would think it needs a good old shaking up over there."

Again demurring, Albert said: "There is no more conscientious department in government. They are very conscientious, very capable."

Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., the assistant Democratic leader, said he thought all potential 1976 presidential candidates should begin receiving Secret Service protection.

Reagan Still Opposes Tightening Of Gun Control

ROBINSON, Ill. (AP) — Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan says he was very disturbed over the attempt on President Ford's life in his home state Monday but still does not believe gun-control should be tightened.

Speaking Monday night in this southern Illinois stopover of his national tour, Reagan said of the attempted assassination in San Francisco: "It's very disturbing . . . I hope that we can come out of this and into an era where we don't have this sort of thing happening."

On gun control, he said, "I never believed you can control criminals by taking guns away from law-abiding citizens."

Police Warned Secret Service

Sara Jane Moore UPI

San Francisco (AP) — Police here warned the Secret Service last Saturday that the woman who fired a shot at President Ford was a potential assassin who threatened to "test the system" at a presidential appearance the day before the shooting.

Chief of Inspectors Charles Barca quoted Secret Service officials as saying that Sara Jane Moore could be released from jail on a minor weapons charge Sunday because the federal authorities would handle her.

"This gal could be another Squeaky Fromme," Police Inspector Jack O'Shea said he told the Secret Service on Saturday, after a call from the 45-year-old Mrs. Moore.

"She said she might go down to Stanford and test the system," O'Shea said. "She never clarified or explained it."

Miss Fromme, a follower of Charles Manson, is charged with pointing a loaded pistol at Ford on Sept. 5 in Sacramento, 90 miles east of San Francisco.

The Secret Service had no immediate comment on the report.

The report of the failure of the Secret Service to follow Mrs. Moore more closely sparked a controversy in Washington, with Treasury Secretary William Simon and various U.S. senators and congressmen calling for a new look at presidential protection.

When Ford spoke at Stanford University on Sunday, the Santa Clara County sheriff's department was told to look for Mrs. Moore.

But she had been arrested by San Francisco police on a misdemeanor charge of carrying a gun. A .44-caliber weapon was seized.

"We thought we better pick her up," Barca said.

Mrs. Moore was then released Sunday afternoon about the time Ford was speaking in Stanford, 35 miles south.

"Police Lt. Raymond White called the Secret Service and mentioned did they want her held . . .(They said) it won't be necessary, we'll go talk to her," Barca said.

He added that the Secret Service picked her up that night, questioned and then released her.

"As a result of the interview, the Secret Service assessed that she was not of sufficient protection interest to warrant surveillance during the President's visit," said Secret Service spokesman Kenneth Lynch in Washington.

O'Shea said that he knew that Mrs. Moore had been an informer for various federal agencies in the past, including the FBI.

Blue Blood Became A Converted Radical

Los Angeles (UPI) — Sara Moore was a blue blood Southerner with a country club "do-gooder" background who went from volunteer work on the patty Hearst food ransom to FBI informant to converted radical and eventual arrest as a would-be presidential assassin.

When she allegedly fired a pistol at President Ford Monday, she was still trying to get back in the good graces of radicals who had ostracized her as a "security risk" when she admitted to them her role as FBI informant.

Mrs. Moore's transformation from suburban housewife to gun wielder was related in the Los Angeles Times Tuesday by reporter Ellen Hume who interviewed her three months ago and kept track of her involvement with San Francisco Bay area radical circles.

Mrs. Moore "was perfect for the job," the Times said. "She was a 46-year-old accountant from a wealthy West Virginia family, a woman who had outgrown her old dreams of a stage career by 50 pounds, 20 years and a Hollywood divorce.

"A blue blood Southerner and country club do-gooder," she was making $50,000 a year as an accountant and getting child support payments for her 8-year-old son from her ex-husband, when she volunteered to work in the $2 million food giveaway that was part of the Symbionese Liberation Army ransom for Miss Hearst.

She was asked by the FBI to befriend the radicals she met.

"I was really nervous but I was intrigued by the whole thing. It was like a Grade B movie," she said.

Her assignment was "Tom," a suspected SLA sympathizer.

"I was introduced to this murky world of drugs, of wholesale screwing, of filthy language. Frequently I was the only person at parties who did not openly use drugs, she said."

She worked her way into serious radical circles that eschewed drugs, the Times said, and eventually made contact with a "secret Marxist-Leninist study group and the terrorist fringe."

She began to side with the radicals and described her target, "Tom," as "so nice, such a good dedicated person. He wasn't at all as they had pictured him — evil incarnate, a dupe, a spy in the pay of Red China or Russia."

She deliberately exposed herself as an informer, talking openly on radio and television about her role and denouncing the FBI.

The radicals no longer trusted her. She bought a gun and learned to use it, she said, because of threats on her life by radicals, but hoped to be valuable to "the cause" again.

FBI Says Mrs. Moore Flunked Informant Test

Washington (UPI) — Sara Jane Moore, charged with attempted assassination of President Ford, tried out as an FBI informant but flunked out three months ago because she didn't keep quiet about it, the bureau said Tuesday.

"She was paid mostly for expenses," an FBI spokesman said. "Whether she was paid for information, I don't know."

In a statement, the FBI said Mrs. Moore, 45, a divorced mother, "was contacted as a potential security informant from approximately June 1974 until June, 1975, at which time her status as a potential security informant was terminated due to her public disclosure that she had been furnishing information to the FBI."

A spokesman said "potential security informants" are persons who have not established their reliability to the FBI's satisfaction.

"She had been on kind of a probationary status to determine how reliable her information was," the spokesman explained. "But that was terminated when she spoke out."

The Secret Service said Tuesday Mrs. Moore was a gun-trafficking informant for the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, as well as working with the FBI.

The Los Angeles Times quoted Mrs. Moore as saying an agent told her, after she had publicly disclosed her connections with the FBI: "Get the hell back — it's time for you to return to the square life.' "

Turfgrass Panel Backs Research

The Nebraska Turfgrass Council has provided $1,250 to help support the turfgrass research project at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln, according to NU Extension turfgrass specialist Robert Shearman.

"The donated funds will be used to help develop turfgrass putting greens for management studies at the NU Field Lab near Mead," Shearman explained.

Mrs Moore a middle-aged mother with radical leanings, is being held on $500,000 bail

Woodruff denied a request by public defender James Hewitt that he and a psychiatrist of his choosing be allowed to accompany Mrs Moore to San Diego

Woodruff delayed action until 4 p m Friday to give Hewitt a chance to appeal Hewitt said he had not decided whether he would but said another reason for the stay was to give Mrs Moore time to make arrangements for her 9-year-old son, currently in the Youth Guidance Center

"She s a mother and she naturally is concerned about her child ' Hewitt said

The 45-year-old divorcee is accused of firing a 38-caliber bullet in the direction of President Ford as he walked from the St Francis hotel to his presidential limousine If convicted she faces possible life imprisonment

Outside of court U S Atty James L Browning said his request for sanity tests was based partly on "certain information from federal officials about Mrs Moore " He declined to specify what that information was

"I don't know whether she is competent to stand trial," Browning said

Hewitt said in response to reporters' questions that Mrs Moore's state of mind was "vague," and that she was 'cloudy" about details of the incident Monday He also said she was "not particularly happy about all the publicity she was getting

Woodruff also granted a request by Hewitt that Mrs Moore have counsel present whenever a law enforcement officer speaks to her about the case

Mrs Moore told authorities that she had debated whether to shoot at President Ford and that if he had come into view 10 minutes later she would have been gone because she wanted to pick up her son from school

While answering questions Monday night to determine her eligibility for a court-appointed attorney Mrs Moore standing quietly and answering in a small voice, said she had been unemployed since May pays $190 on a Mission district apartment and owns a 1972 compact car

She is accused of firing a chrome-plated revolver at Ford A quick-moving ex-Marine deflected the shot however and the President was rushed into a car without injury

Police said Mrs Moore was connected with a number of leftist groups in the Bay Area and the FBI disclosed Monday night that she had been a paid informer until she began describing the arrangement in public

Congressmen Ask Stiff Gun Control

Washington (UPI) — Members of Congress while expressing relief that President Ford came unharmed through two assassination attempts Tuesday proposed safeguards ranging from reduced presidential travel to stiff controls over handguns

There also were calls for investigation to determine the adequacy of Secret Service protection But House Speaker Carl Albert among others expressed reservations about all three proposals

Rep John Conyers Jr D-Mich chairman of a House subcommittee on crime introduced a bill that would outlaw all private ownership of handguns and carry penalties of up to five years in prison and $5 000 in fines

I hope the President after these two attempts will give close consideration to a measure that will make this country a safer and saner place Conyers said

Mandatory Registration

Conyers measure added to a growing list of gun control proposals and Rep John Murphy D N Y announced Tuesday he will offer another calling for mandatory federal registration of handguns

Albert cautioning against any rush to get new gun controls on the books said "I don't think anybody with a gun, crazy enough to try to kill the President, would go and register the gun "

The National Rifle Association decried what it called "the tidal wave of hysterical outcries for additional gun controls," calling instead for tough, mandatory prison sentences for anyone using a firearm in committing a crime

Sen Edward M Kennedy, D-Mass said Ford had "taken a courageous stand in saying that he will not become a hostage to threats from a few unbalanced people "

Kennedy, who is sponsoring a bill to require gun licensing and registration, said, "The overriding lesson of these recent and nearly tragic events is that, if America cares about the safety of its leaders, it can no longer ignore the shocking absence of responsible gun control "

Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen said the President's position on illegal use of guns was unchanged Certain prison sentences for those who use guns in the commission of a crime

Rep Bill Goodling R-Pa introduced a bill carrying the death penalty for attempted assassination of a President for which the present maximum penalty is life imprisonment

Curtailed Travel

Some members of Congress in both parties suggested Ford curtail his travel and exposure to crowds

Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott said the President should put some limit on random handshaking until we can see whether this madness is temporary

Sen Henry M Jackson D-Wash a candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination said It would appear the President probably would have to cut back on the number of public appearances involving movement into the crowds

Sen John Stennis D-Miss who spent months recovering from gunshot wounds sustained during a robbery also called for less presidential contact with the public saying "I think we've taken as much as we can along that line

Albert, commenting on that score, said he did not think the President should cut down on traveling but "I think he should be less exposed to large crowds for any length of time

Sen Ernest F Hollings, D-S C and House Republican leader John Rhodes suggested Congress have a look at the performance of the Secret Service protection detail

Hollings said there are "real dedicated agents" in the Secret Service but "I would think it needs a good old shaking up over there "

Again demurring, Albert said 'There is no more conscientious department in government They are very conscientious, very capable "

Sen Robert C Byrd, D-W Va , the assistant Democratic leader, said he thought all potential 1976 presidential candidates should begin receiving Secret Service protection.

Reagan Still Opposes Tightening Of Gun Control

ROBINSON, Ill (AP) — Former California Gov. Ronald Reagan says he was very disturbed over the attempt on President Ford's life in his home state Monday but still does not believe gun-control should be tightened.

Speaking Monday night in this southern Illinois stopover of his national tour, Reagan said of the attempted assassination in San Francisco "It's very disturbing . I hope that we can come out of this and into an era where we don't have this sort of thing happening."

On gun control, he said, "I never believed you can control criminals by taking guns away from law-abiding citizens "

Ruthless Divorce Lawyer Can Hurt Client's Cause

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — A "bomber" is a divorce lawyer who will do anything to win. He'll encourage perjury, bug apartments, conceal income, lure people into compromising situations, file harassing motions, and try to starve or blackmail the opponent into submission.

Jane Bryant Quinn

Some people, when they want a divorce, seek out a bomber. They may think he'll do better for them than a lawyer who's less mean-spirited. Or they've grown so bitter over the years that the thought of starving or blackmailing their spouses fills them with nasty pleasure.

Other people stumble upon a bomber by accident, and let him lead them down a far more punitive path than they might have chosen themselves.

Whatever your motives, hiring a bomber can often hurt your cause more than help it. If his perjuries are exposed, it will go hard with your side. And even if they're not, the poison he spreads will blight your relationship with your children and your ex-spouse for years to come.

The Matrimonial Section of the New York State Trial Lawyers Assn. recently drew up a code of professional responsibility for matrimonial lawyers, in hopes of isolating the dirty tactics. Their goal is to follow it up with a peer review board, where angry lawyers could bring complaints against those in their profession who violated the code.

NYSTLA hopes the code will spread to other states. Here are some of the practices it deplores, according to Elaine Sheps, cochairman of the Matrimonial Section, and Bernard Selkowe, chairman of its ethics committee:

1 — Bombers lead you to believe they can get you more than what's reasonable, by such statements as "we'll let her hang," or "we'll push him to the wall." You then may resent the final settlement when you have no call to do so.

2 — They advise husbands to pay a wife nothing, not even for the children. If she has no funds of her own, this tactic can force her onto welfare or starve her into submission. They advise wives to run up bills, and blackmail husbands by denying them access to the children. They may file a child custody suit for the sole purpose of terrifying the wife. Tactics like these can destroy any hope of an amicable relationship in the future.

3 — If a wife has no ready cash of her own, a bomber may deny her effective counsel. He does it by challenging the size of the fee her lawyer asks (if the husband is to pay it), then filing a blizzard of motions that will cost the lawyer more than his reduced fee will cover. This reduces his incentive to pursue the case. Where the wife pays the fee, the bomber will stir up enough work to exhaust her money. She then may be forced to accept an unfair settlement.

4 — He encourages or even procures false testimony, to prove the husband a bounder, the wife a tart, or either a monster to the children. And whereas it's simple to make charges, it's an expensive and complex matter to prove them untrue in court.

5 — He won't permit a client to take a forgiving attitude. After all, if he can't whip up a contested situation, he won't get as large a fee. Many divorced people say that they had a fairly good understanding with their spouses until the lawyer entered

If you find yourself in the hands of a bomber, the smartest thing you can do is change lawyers.

Stocks Slip In Sluggish, Erratic Trade

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks declined unevenly in a sluggish, erratic session Tuesday while investors waited out a pricing decision from the oil exporting countries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 7 points at its midafternoon low, came back near the close to trim its loss to .55 at 819.85.

Losers held an 801-to-505 edge on gainers among the 1,776 issues changing hands on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 12.80 million shares, down from 14.75 million on Monday.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .08 to 45.06, and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was off .13 at 84.94.

Brokers aaid the market was still suffering from a letdown following the quick dissipation of last week's energetic buying in early activity Monday.

Eldon A. Grimm at Birr, Wilson & Co. attributed the late upturn to short covering—the repurchase of borrowed shares sold earlier by investors expecting prices to decline.

"The selling, which had been light, just dried up and some shorts began to cover," Grimm said.

The day's economic news produced little to stir the market either way. Many investors seemed to have settled back to await the opening Wednesday of a meeting called by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to set new prices.

Wall Street speculation on the potential results of the meeting ranged from price increases to 5 to 10 or 15 per cent to a possible deferral of action by the oil nations.

Among international oil stocks, Exxon was up 2¼ at 91½; Mobil gained ⅝ to 43¾; Standard Oil of California added ⅛ to 30, and Texaco was unchanged at 23¾.

Eli Lilly fell 2⅜ to 51⅝ after a 7½-point slide Monday on the company's projection of flat earnings this year.

The pressure on Lilly shares appeared to spread to some other drug issues as well, with Merck falling 2⅛ to 66 and Schering-Plough losing 1⅝ to 50⅛, both in active trading.

Fisher Foods, which said it expected to report lower quarterly earnings, dropped 1⅝ to 9¾.

Avery Products fell 1⅝ to 21 on lower third quarter profits.

Natomas gained 1½ to 25½. The company reported a successful delineation well at an offshore Indonesian oil field.

Federal National Mortgage topped the Big Board's most-active list, off ¼ at 12⅞. A 200,000-share block of the stock changed hands at 12¾.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .46 to 84.14.

Highway Session Draws Requests

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Auburn — A two-hour informational session on the highway needs of 14 southeast Nebraska counties elicited numerous requests, but hardly a spark of controversy here Tuesday.

The first of seven district meetings scheduled over the state, the session brought out 124 persons from District 1. More than 25 had requests or questions.

Most of these, however, concerned the timetable on relatively small projects within the State Highway Commission's one- and five-year plans.

Among the good news announced by chairman Joe Lipton of Omaha was that all 126 miles of state gravel roads within the district are scheduled for surfacing in the five-year plan. There are only 412 such miles remaining in the entire state now.

Perhaps drawing the most comment was the proposed surfacing of a segment of Hwy. 103 from Crete north to the Pleasant Dale Interstate 80 interchange. Several persons urged preliminary work on the 10-mile segment now in the five-year plan be expedited.

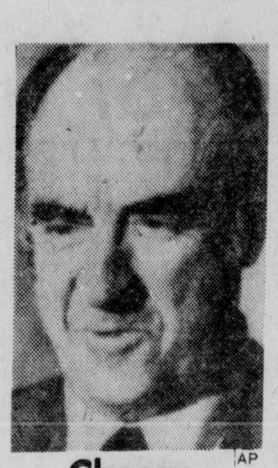

I was explained that the road will be carrying heavy truck traffic this fall when the Farmland Foods pork processing plant opens.

The evening session, surprisingly harmonious, even brought several compliments to the Highway Commission.

Bill Peterson, chairman of the streets and highways committee of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, praised the commission for "spending your funds very wisely." But he cited the need for more revenue and suggested an increase in the state gasoline tax.

Charles F. Nutter, deputy state engineer of engineering services, said following the meeting he was especially pleased at its smoothness. Several representatives were present to provide on-the-spot answers to the queries of town and county officials.

"We are really trying to provide the public with honest and sincere information," he noted, "even though it isn't always what they'd like to hear."

Softball Players Killed By Train

Gardner, Ill. (UPI) — A softball game which went into extra innings inadvertently led to the death of five girl players and their school principal whose car was demolished by a passenger train on their way home.

The train, an Amtrak Turboliner, bound from Chicago to St. Louis at 70 miles an hour, smashed into the car at an unguarded rural crossing at dusk, tumbling the 1973 Ford sedan before it for nearly a half mile. The car was reduced to half its size, authorities said.

The crash 70 miles southwest of Chicago killed Antonette Tweedt, 53, principal of the Goodfarm Elementary School, four 6th-graders constituting all the girls in the class, and one 8th-grader.

The girls were identified by their clothing as Carol Holm, 11, Becky Gebhard, 11, Tonya Kincaid, 14, Barbara Gschwerndter, 10, and Laura Archer, 11.

"Everyone is in shock," Allen Hoffman said Tuesday. He is a member of the Goodfarm School Board whose daughter was in a car behind the one driven by Mrs. Tweedt.

Hoffman said the girls had traveled 22 miles to play a game at Bonfield, Ill. The game was tied at the end of regulation seven innings and went 10 innings before Goodfarm finally lost, 28-27.

Hoffman figures if the game had ended earlier, the girls would have been safely across the tracks which are only a few miles from their homes in the rural Goodfarm area near Gardner.

"This is really a sad thing, a terrible loss to our close-knit community," School Supt. Leroy Brandt said.

Brandt said the accident reduced the enrollment of the kindergarten-to-8th-grade school to 57 students. He said the 6th grade now has only five boys.

Mrs. Charles Pearson, who had the rest of the softball team members with her in the second car, said she saw the train and heard the whistle.

"It happend so fast, I don't know what happened," she said.

Resignation Of Episcopal Bishop Okd

Portland, Maine (UPI) — The Episcopal House of Bishops accepted the resignation of the controversial bishop of the Diocese of Nebraska, a self-acknowledged alcoholic, without debate here Tuesday.

Bishop Robert P. Varley had submitted his letter of resignation to presiding Bishop John Allin Aug. 18, after the four largest parishes in his diocese had refused to appropriate money for the diocesan budget in protest of his liberal views.

Varley called his relationship with the Diocese of Nebraska "a bad marriage," and said, "My resignation is not what I want, but it's what's best for the diocese."

The 51-year-old bishop expressed gratitude to the House of Bishops for its understanding and said he hoped his experience would not keep others from seeking help for similar problems.

The controversy came to a head early this year while he was in Minnesota undergoing treatment for alcoholism and drug dependency. The bishop supports the ordination of women and reform of the Book of Common Prayer and worked on a task force on homosexuals in the church.

His views were unpopular with the 16,000 Episcopalians in conservative Nebraska and prompted the split between him and his diocese.

Several of the bishops earlier had expressed hopes that they could prevent his resignation out of concern for his long career with the church, but no opposition to accepting his resignation was raised Tuesday.

Governors Hike Tuition At Wesleyan

Tuition at Nebraska Wesleyan University for the 1976-77 academic year has been raised to $1,050 per semester, from $950.

Columbus Dump Officially Closed

The City of Columbus has officially ciosed its old landfill, thus ending a dispute with the State Department of Environmental Control (DEC).

As of Sept. 8, all refuse from Columbus will be disposed at a new sanitary landfill near Duncan.

The city attempted through a lawsuit to block the DEC from closing its old landfill on Aug. 1. The court rejected the suit; later city officials agreed to close the landfill.

—Staying Ahead—

Ruthless Divorce Lawyer Can Hurt Client's Cause

By JANE BRYANT QUINN

New York — A "bomber" is a divorce lawyer who will do anything to win. He'll encourage perjury, bug apartments, conceal income, lure people into compromising situations, file harassing motions, and try to starve or blackmail the opponent into submission.

Jane Bryant Quinn

Some people, when they want a divorce, seek out a bomber. They may think he'll do better for them than a lawyer who's less mean-spirited. Or they've grown so bitter over the years that the thought of starving or blackmailing their spouses fills them with nasty pleasure.

Other people stumble upon a bomber by accident, and let him lead them down a far more punitive path than they might have chosen themselves.

Whatever your motives, hiring a bomber can often hurt your cause more than help it. If his perjuries are exposed, it will go hard with your side. And even if they're not, the poison he spreads will blight your relationship with your children and your ex-spouse for years to come.

The Matrimonial Section of the New York State Trial Lawyers Assn. recently drew up a code of professional responsibility for matrimonial lawyers, in hopes of isolating the dirty tactics. Their goal is to follow it up with a peer review board, where angry lawyers could bring complaints against those in their profession who violated the code.

NYSTLA hopes the code will spread to other states. Here are some of the practices it deplores, according to Elaine Sheps, cochairman of the Matrimonial Section, and Bernard Selkowe, chairman of its ethics committee:

1 — Bombers lead you to believe they can get you more than what's reasonable, by such statements as "we'll let her hang," or "we'll push him to the wall." You then may resent the final settlement when you have no call to do so.

2 — They advise husbands to pay a wife nothing, not even for the children. If she has no funds of her own, this tactic can force her onto welfare or starve her into submission. They advise wives to run up bills, and blackmail husbands by denying them access to the children. They may file a child custody suit for the sole purpose of terrifying the wife. Tactics like these can destroy any hope of an amicable relationship in the future.

3 — If a wife has no ready cash of her own, a bomber may deny her effective counsel. He does it by challenging the size of the fee her lawyer asks (if the husband is to pay it), then filing a blizzard of motions that will cost the lawyer more than his reduced fee will cover. This reduces his incentive to pursue the case. Where the wife pays the fee, the bomber will stir up enough work to exhaust her money. She then may be forced to accept an unfair settlement.

4 — He encourages or even procures false testimony, to prove the husband a bounder, the wife a tart, or either a monster to the children. And whereas it's simple to make charges, it's an expensive and complex matter to prove them untrue in court.

5 — He won't permit a client to take a forgiving attitude. After all, if he can't whip up a contested situation, he won't get as large a fee. Many divorced people say that they had a fairly good understanding with their spouses until the lawyer entered.

If you find yourself in the hands of a bomber, the smartest thing you can do is change lawyers.

Stocks Slip In Sluggish, Erratic Trade

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks declined unevenly in a sluggish, erratic session Tuesday while investors waited out a pricing decision from the oil exporting countries.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down more than 7 points at its midafternoon low, came back near the close to trim its loss to .55 at 819.85.

Losers held an 801-to-505 edge on gainers among the 1,776 issues changing hands on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 12.80 million shares, down from 14.75 million on Monday.

The NYSE's composite index slipped .08 to 45.06, and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index was off .13 at 84.94.

Brokers aaid the market was still suffering from a letdown following the quick dissipation of last week's energetic buying in early activity Monday.

Eldon A. Grimm at Birr, Wilson & Co. attributed the late upturn to short covering—the repurchase of borrowed shares sold earlier by investors expecting prices to decline.

"The selling, which had been light, just dried up and some shorts began to cover," Grimm said.

The day's economic news produced little to stir the market either way. Many investors seemed to have settled back to await the opening Wednesday of a meeting called by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to set new prices.

Wall Street speculation on the potential results of the meeting ranged from price increases to 5 to 10 or 15 per cent to a possible deferral of action by the oil nations.

Among international oil stocks, Exxon was up 2¼ at 91½; Mobil gained ⅝ to 43¾; Standard Oil of California added ⅛ to 30, and Texaco was unchanged at 23¾.

Eli Lilly fell 2⅜ to 51⅝ after a 7½-point slide Monday on the company's projection of flat earnings this year.

The pressure on Lilly shares appeared to spread to some other drug issues as well, with Merck falling 2⅛ to 66 and Schering-Plough losing 1⅝ to 50⅛, both in active trading.

Fisher Foods, which said it expected to report lower quarterly earnings, dropped 1⅝ to 9¾.

Avery Products fell 1⅝ to 21 on lower third quarter profits.

Natomas gained 1½ to 25½. The company reported a successful delineation well at an offshore Indonesian oil field.

Federal National Mortgage topped the Big Board's most-active list, off ¾ at 12⅞. A 200,000-share block of the stock changed hands at 12¾.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .46 to 84.14.

Marketing Called Key To Pro Bowling Success

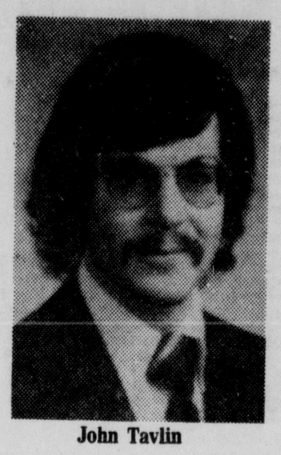

THE LINCOLN STAR
Sports
Wednesday, September 24, 1975 35

By BOB MOYER

With the formal announcement Tuesday at the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, World Championship Bowling (WCB) has become a reality.

The WCB, to be headquartered in Lincoln, will be run by four Lincolnites, president John Tavlin, players' association executive director Mike Tavlin, assistant marketing director Charles Kuba and tournament director Max Jensen.

In addition, the group claims two nationally-known promoters in vice-president Gary Davidson and director of marketing Max Muhleman, who collaborated on the World Football League, World Hockey Association and International Track Association.

John Tavlin

The big question, now, is whether the WCB can remain in existence.

"It (the WCB) has all the ingredients to be a successful venture," noted Davidson, who added that he was always on the lookout for good sports investments.

"I've been approached to participate in just about every sport you can mention from kung fu to ping pong," said Davidson. "We (Davidson and Muhleman) were amazed with the potential bowling has."

One of the bright factors in favor of the WCB's success is that, unlike other sports, it already has a strong following.

"In most sports the pros pull the amateurs," said Davidson. "In bowling, they're over 60 million amateurs already."

In addition, Muhleman noted the television ratings for the current PBA are startling.

"The Nielsen rating for weekly bowling is twice as high as baseball, four times as high as hockey," Muhleman noted. In fact, the 1974 Nielsen for bowling was 9.0 compared to a 5.1 for the U.S. Open golf tournament and 5.6 for the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Nevertheless, all agreed the key to success for the WCB would be marketing. Within that broad category four areas are critical — organization, TV contract, player participation and sponsorship.

"We are very happy to be here," said Davidson, "because we feel we're part of a very good team.

"Max and I had independently been looking at the possibilities of bowling but had not run into any group which had the expertise in the sport until we ran into John and his group," Davidson added.

Jensen, on the other hand, noted "I've been very selective throughout the years, unwilling to join something unless I'm pretty well convinced it will work. I've joined the WCB."

Muhleman, who will be responsible for getting TV contracts and sponsors, sees no major problems in that area.

"We haven't been prepared until today (Tuesday) to make formal inquiries to the networks and syndicators, such as TVS," said Muhleman.

"However, I've made some informal contacts and everybody seemed to be favorable."

Likewise, Muhleman thinks the large viewing audience of women for bowling (nearly half the viewers are females) will be helpful in arranging sponsors.

"It really means a lot that women watch," Muhleman said. "Companies selling soft goods or foods know the people who buy their product are women. When we try to get them to give us sponsorship we have a much better chance, because they know the viewers are people who buy their product."

The female audience should also be enhanced, both Muhleman and Jensen feel, because the WCB is open to women to compete in the pro division.

"You wouldn't believe how good some women bowlers are," said Jensen. "Yes, I definitely think they can successfully compete against the men."

"It's the only sport that has ever offered that chance to women," Muhleman added. "Look at tennis. Sure, Billie Jean King can beat Bobby Riggs, but she'd have a heckuva time beating Jimmy Connors — in bowling the comparable thing could happen."

Getting the players Davidson characterized as "one of our least critical problems."

"We will be offering better purses and give the players the kind of control they've been seeking," said Jensen. "There's no doublt the majority will be interested."

Generating the bigger purses will be accomplished by better marketing," said Davidson. "We don't have a hidden cache of money to pour in. We just feel better marketing will produce the money by itself."

"Right now, pro bowling is a stifled sport," said Tavlin. "Although it has a good audience, its prestige and prize money have not kept pace with other sports. With the WCB, we hope to solve that problem."

Holy Name Faces Tests

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

If Omaha Holy Name qualifies for this year's first state high school football playoffs, it deserves a medal of honor in addition to a trophy.

Right now, Holy Name is on top of the Class C-1 football world with two wins over Class B teams and an impressive win over highly rated Fremont Bergan.

If you're not familiar with classifications, that adds up to five more Class B opponents (including the top-rated team in Pius X) and Scribner, the No. 1 Class C-2 outfit.

Holy Name obviously geared its schedule to fit Class B playoff purposes, but last week dropped to Class C status, based on most recent enrolment figures.

Mustang Coach

The Omaha school puts a lot of faith in its coaching staff to meet the upcoming challenges. Fleming is the former Omaha Mustang semi-pro head coach, who returned to the high school ranks four years ago at Nebraska City Lourdes.

While Holy Name braces for its challenge against Class B's fourth-ranked Scotus Friday night, statewide Class B attention will focus on the Ogallala-Lexington game.

Centennial is another Class C-1 school facing rugged Class B competitoin. So far, it's 2-1 against Class B teams, defeating Ashland and Seward after dropping the season opener to Waverly.

Here's what coach Rod Boss and the Utica school will challenge the rest of the season — Aurora, Wahoo, Norris, Grand Island Northwest and Platteview.

"We're keeping track of what everyone does," Centennial coach Rod Boss says. "We sort of anticipated dropping to Class C last summer.

'Positive Approach'

"We're taking the positive approach to the whole thing," he adds. "Each and every time we win, we get more points than teams staying within the class and when we lose, we don't suffer as much point-wise."

Nevertheless, the name of the game is win and Boss, an assistant coach for the South Shrine Bowl team this summer, realizes his team must rise to the challenge to qualify for the playoffs.

Centennial is ranked fifth in this week's C-1 ratings after the Broncos overtook Seward, 18-14, when quarterback Doug Gloystein hit sophomore Kevin Sullivan with a 24-yard touchdown pass with 1:21 remaining.

Bergan is a third former Class B team lodged high in the Class C-1 ratings. The Fremont school drops from first to third after a 14-0 loss to Holy Name last week.

There were few changes in the three lower division ratings. Scribner held its Class C-2 lead. Lawrence and Wheatland also retained No. 1 honors in Class D and eight-man ratings, respectively.

Better Play Husker Goal

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Nebraska has been installed as a 37-point favorite to make Texas Christian University its third consecutive victim Saturday afternoon in Memorial Stadium and that's a situation that always worries the favored coach.

"Everybody's (the fans) laughing and giggling right now," Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne said after Tuesday's practice. "But if we don't play well, we'll have our hands full."

The Huskers, ranked fourth in both wire service polls, could easily be lulled into complacency by both the oddsmakers and the pollsters, but the coaching staff will be trying all week to avoid overconfidence.

"I'm hoping we play better than we have the last two weeks," Osborne said. "That's the thing we're shooting for and I hope the players are thinking that way. We're not going to get any help in terms of incentive. The psychological factors are all in favor of TCU."

The Horned Frogs are expected to test Nebraska's pass defense which ranks tops in the Big Eight Conference and which last week limited the 1974 Big Ten Conference passing champion, Terry Jones of Indiana, to just five completions in 15 attempts for a meager 23 yards.

The Huskers have had 14 of 30 passes completed against them for 106 yards and have intercepted two. In what might be considered normal passing situations (third down), Husker foes have converted only three of them into first downs in 26 opportunities.

By comparison, Nebraska has had third or fourth down situations 35 times and converted 21 of them into first downs. Quarterback Terry Luck's record is 17 of 29. Against Indiana, Vince Ferragamo and Earl Everett each converted two of three.

"They throw pretty well," Osborne said of TCU's quarterbacks Lee Cook and Jimmy Dan Elzner. In two games, the Frogs have hit 34 of 80 tries for a .425 completion average. Their yardage through the air comes to 391, which figures out to 195 yards a game. Top average by a Big Eight team is Kansas State's 127.5 a game.

Defensively, Osborne said TCU has been in mostly an "even" alignment in contrast to the 5-2 defense used by all Big Eight teams. "It's a 4-3 or pro type defense and our guards are going to be covered unless TCU goes away from it," Osborne said.

In preparation for the Louisiana State opener, the Huskers worked 60 per cent of the time for a 4-3 defense, but saw it only twice. The Tigers went to the 5-2 after getting "burned" on those two plays. Indiana played what is called a "Tennessee 5-2" with the middle linebacker playing off the ball.

"We had five or six plays we worked on a lot for LSU's 4-3, but we didn't use them," Osborne said. They're being polished again this week.

"We're going to see much 5-2 down the road and we're continuing to work against that this week while also working against TCU's 4-3," Osborne said. "If TCU comes up with a brand new defense it will mean they will have had to work on it against all our plays with only three days of practice to get it ready. As the season progresses, it gets progressively tougher to make major changes."

The Huskers appear to be in pretty good shape physically for the game. Center Rik Bonness has a pulled hamstring, but Osborne says he hopes he'll be ready to play Saturday.

Indians Rehire Manager Robinson

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Frank Robinson, the only man in baseball to win an MVP award in both leagues, was rehired as Cleveland Indians manager on a one-year contract Tuesday, but left his future as a player in doubt.

Robinson, the first black manager in the major leagues, will receive an estimated $50,000 to $75,000 to serve only as manager next season compared to the estimated $175,000 he received as player-skipper this year.

"I've said all along that this is the last year," said Robinson, who next week completes 20 years as a player.

"There's always the chance I may change my mind. The human mind is a funny thing," said Robinson, who'll have an operation after the World Series to correct a shoulder injury.

But he insisted the outcome of the operation would not affect his decision.

"I'm not having it to get a good arm and play next year," he said. "I'm having it because Dr. Earl Brightman said I should to live a normal life with no pain."

Robinson signed a one-year contract as a manager only and he and General Manager Phil Seghi said if he decided to play, it would be renegotiated.

Five Big Eight Teams Ranked

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the past few years, the Big Eight Conference—once the best in the land—has come in for criticism, and even been referred to as "Oklahoma and the Seven Dwarfs." This week their critics are silent.

Oh, Oklahoma is still powerful, all right. But the others aren't that far behind. For some, it brings back to mind 1971, when for a while Oklahoma, Nebraska and Colorado were 1-2-3, all finished in the top 10, and Iowa State, Oklahoma State and Missouri were also ranked at one time or another.

Last weekend was a prime example of why all the conference members are powers to be reckoned with. Each and every one of the Big Eight teams won—a feat never before accomplished — and, in this week's ratings by the UPI Board of Coaches, three of them are in the top five and five in the top 20.

Oklahoma thrashed then-15th ranked Pittsburgh 46-10 to easily maintain its No. 1 spot, pulling 35 of a possible 42 first place votes for 408 points; Nebraska, on the strength of its 45-0 pasting of Indiana, climbed two notches to fourth; and Missouri remained fifth, coming back from a 20-0 deficit at Illinois to emerge a 30-20 winner.

Oklahoma State and Colorado, both with 2-0 records, also moved into the top 20, in 13th and tied for 17th, respectively.

Ohio State, which beat Penn State 17-9, held second place, garnering six first place nods and 377 points; Southern California, last year's champion thanks to a hectic bowl season, moved up one notch to third, defeating Oregon State Friday night, 24-7, and received the remaining No. 1 vote and 333 points.

Texas A&M, UCLA Gain

Oklahoma, the preseason leader, held onto the top spot by trouncing Pitt 46-10. The Sooners received 56 first-place votes and 1,192 of a possible 1,200 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Nebraska jumped from sixth to fourth following a 45-0 rout of Indiana while Missouri retained fifth place by defeating Illinois 30-20.

Geneva's Adkisson Brothers Share Award

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

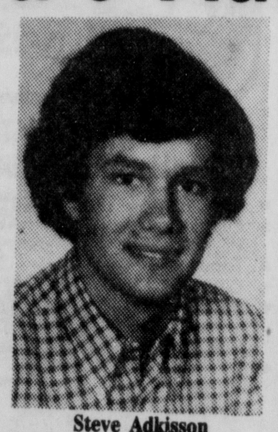

When Geneva junior quarterback Steve Adkisson surveys the secondary for a receiver, he can't miss.

First, his split end is a 6-6 pass target and therefore easy to spot.

Second, it's his brother, senior Ken Adkisson. As many years as he's been pitching the football to him, the patterns should be familiar.

Last week, the brother passing combination clicked as well as ever in a surprisingly lopsided 45-8 Geneva win over previously unbeaten Tri-County.

For their efforts, Steve and Ken Adkisson share the Sunday

Steve Adkisson

Journal and Star's prep Player of the Week award.

Steve connected on 15 of 23 passes for 200 yards and five touchdowns. He rushed for 84 yards on eight carries and scored once himself.

Ken caught five passes for 103 yards and two touchdowns. Two other touchdown passes were called back, but he accounted for a third TD by blocking a punt and a teammate recovered in the end zone.

Ken also finished with nine tackles from his defensive end position.

Others who'll receive Player of the Week cards include:

Brad Oltman, Beatrice — Senior tackle's defensive play sparked 6-3 win over Columbus.

Kevin Sullivan, Centennial — Sophomore's 24-yard touchdown catch with 1:21 remaining gave Class C school an 18-14 victory over Class B Seward.

Morris Stover, Kearney — Junior's 15-yard touchdown run in the first quarter gave Bearcats 7-0 upset win over West Big 10 power North Platte. He also was credited with seven solo tackles, five assists and a pass interception.

Todd Hendrickson, Kimball — His three touchdowns, one on a 74-yard pass and another on a 60-yard pass, burned previously unbeaten Alliance, 20-14.

Greg Prochaska, Lincoln Southeast — Fullback's 103 yards rushing helped Knights break out of severe offensive slump in 13-7 upset over two-time winner Ralston.

Rick Woods, Nebraska City — His 27-yard field goal with 27 seconds left gave Pioneers a 15-14 Twin Rivers Conference win over Auburn.

Dennis Dehm, Pleasanton — In team's three wins, he's rushed for 450 yards, scored seven touchdowns and added six conversions.

Kim Johnson, Wausa — Senior, making first start at quarterback, hit 3 of 8 passes for 120 yards and rushed for 40 yards on eight carries. He scored all 10 points in 10-0 upset win over Osmond on a 10-yard run, PAT and 20-yard field goal. He also led team in tackles with seven solos and three assists.

Bob Janda, St. Edward — Ran for touchdowns of 4 and 29 yards and passed 19 yards for another as team defeated Polk, 27-8.

Kent Taubenhiem, Amherst — Fullback rushed for 108 yards, scored all 16 points in shutout win over Axtell and was credited with six unassisted and four assisted tackles.

Doug Diltz, Elmwood -- Junior I-back rushed for 167 yards and scored a touchdown in 15-0 win over Weeping Water. He also recovered three fumbles and led team with 11 unassisted and six assisted tackles.

Pat Cottman, Sandhills — Halfback-linebacker rushed for 153 yards, intercepted a pass and made 14 tackles (seven unassisted) in team's 12-12 tie against unbeaten Thedford.

Jeff Misegadis, Lodgepole — Senior fullback had touchdown runs of 20 and 53 yards, 13 tackles and two fumble recoveries in unbeaten team's 26-6 win over Lyman.

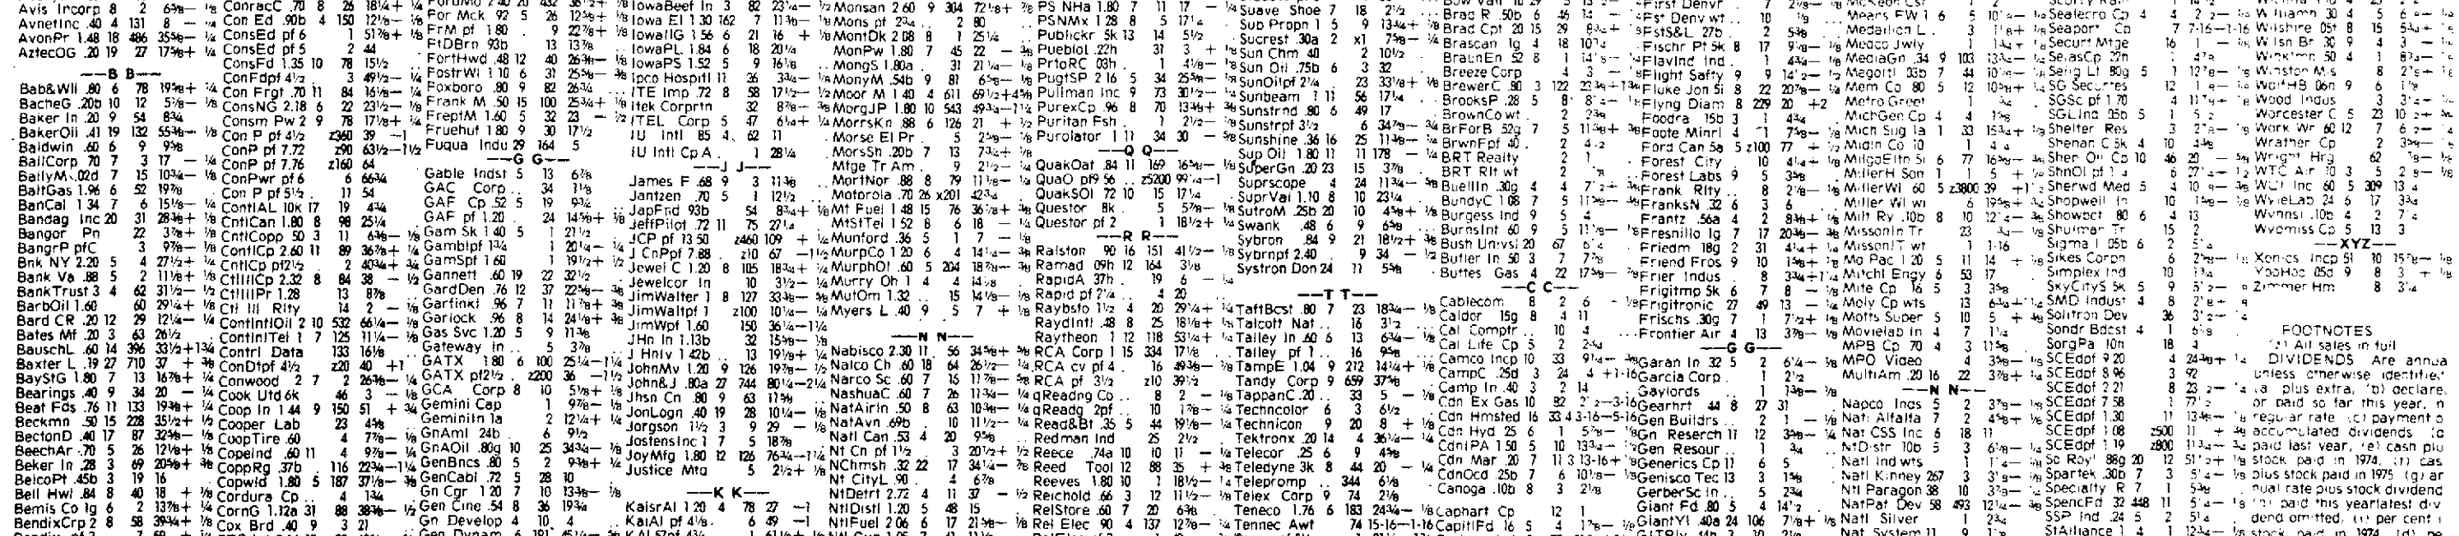

Joe Karn, Stapleton — Senior quarterback threw touchdown passes of 15, 26, 27, 60 and 63 yards and ran for two more touchdowns in 54-30 win over Mullen. He finished 11 of 16 passing for 295 yards.

Charlie Dickinson, Barneston — He rushed for 157 yards and scored on runs of 16, 19 and 24 yards in win over Filley. He also intercepted three passes.

Big Eight Averages 50,938

Big Eight Conference football teams have won 14 of 16 games in two weeks of non-league battling, but even more important are the crowd figures.

Attendance has totalled 815,010 during the two Saturdays for an average of 50,938. That's a record clip, topping last year's all-time mark of 48,931.

It will be difficult to sustain that average, but it's a great start. The first round of games averaged 48,551 while last Saturday's crowds averaged 53,325.

Nebraska, as usual, is the leader with 152,281 fans for the first two games. Biggest gainer is Oklahoma with 140,547, an increase of over 9,000 over last year's figures. The Sooner boost is the result of the upper deck added to the west stands.

Iowa State averaged 34,400 at home games last year in Clyde Williams Stadium. In their first game in the new stadium, the Cyclones attracted 42,000 for the match against Air Force.

The Big Ten continues to be the nation's attendance leader with 848,517 for 15 games, an average of 56,568. Last week, led by Michigan's 92,304, the Big Ten drew an average crowd of 57,389. That included pathetic crowds for the Iowa at Syracuse game (19,283), Northern Illinois at Northwestern (21,000) and Western Michigan at Minnesota (23,326).

Big Ten Goes 5-4-1

The Big Ten Conference had a 5-4-1 week against outside opponents last week after spending the opening week of the season battling each other.

In order to do that well, that once-powerful conference had to go out and score victories over South Dakota, Western Michigan, Northern Illinois and Miami of Ohio. Only the latter might be considered a legitimate football power.

Michigan was embarrassed by Stanford in a 19-19 tie. Stanford had opened with a 34-14 loss to Penn State. Syracuse, a 24-17 winner over Villanova in its opener, nipped Iowa 10-7 while Purdue fell to intra-state rival Notre Dame 17-0. The Big Eight's Nebraska and Missouri took care of Indiana and Illinois.

The Southwest Conference had a 7-1 record going into last Saturday's battles and came out 3-3-1 for an overall 10-4-1 non-league record.

You have to go back 35 years to find as good a SWC start. Back in 1971 when there were only seven league members, the Southwest opened with a 7-0 mark. The 7-1 mark also was the best winning percentage since a 6-0-1 record was achieved in 1957. Last year, SWC teams won six and lost two in first efforts.

Unfortunately for Husker foe TCU, the only loss was suffered by the Horned Frogs on the opening round of games. TCU has a rich football tradition, but you have to go back to 1959 to find a SWC conference champion at the Fort Worth school.

The last time TCU beat Nebraska was in 1951 by a 28-7 score. The Frogs went on to win the league title and earn a Cotton Bowl invitation. Nebraska won 34-14 in 1965, 14-10 in 1966 and 29-0 in 1967 for a 3-1 series advantage.

Offense Lead To Oklahoma

MISSION, Kan. (UPI) — Usually, Oklahoma's first big football game is the shootout with Texas in Dallas. But it may be different this season.

The Sooners start Big Eight Conference play against Colorado Oct. 4, a week before the annual grudge match in Dallas. And, statistically at least, Colorado figures to give the Sooners their money's worth.

Oklahoma leads the nation again this week, according to the NCAA Statistics Service, in rushing offense (461.0 yards a game) and scoring offense (54.0 points a game). But Colorado is the new leader in total offense with 529 yards a game running and passing.

And Coach Bill Mallory's Buffaloes are second in rushing with 402.5 yards an outing.

Oklahoma will have the advantage of playing the Buffaloes in Norman, but it was Colorado which last defeated the Sooners, 20-14, in 1972.

San Diego State grabbed the national passing lead, averaging 286.7 yards through the airways in its three games.

Texas A&M stayed on top in total defense, averaging a 98.0-yard yield per game.

Husker Golfers In 3-Day Meet

By United Press International

Nebraska's golf team will be competing in the All-College Classic at Oklahoma City Wednesday through Friday.

Competing for the Huskers will be veterans Doug Smith, Craig Moyer and Todd Thorson as well as newcomers Steve Stratton, Steve Sloan and Tony Pesavento.

"I hope we do all right," said coach Larry Romjue. "Although we do have a young team, I think we'll be better than we were last year."

At the same tournament last year, NU finished 12th out of 18 teams.

Nebraska has only a two-meet fall schedule. The next outing is Oct. 9-10 at St. Charles, Mo., for the Boogie Hills Intercollegiate Golf Classic.

Injured Sooners Return

From News Wires

Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer welcomed back all-American noseguard Dewey Selmon, offensive tackle Mike Vaughan and split end Billy Brooks to the Sooner football practice Tuesday.

All had watched Monday's workout from the sideline with nagging knee injuries after the Pittsburgh game Saturday.

Oklahoma State

Sophomore Scott Burk moved from quarterback to strong safety and split end Sam Lisle resumed full scale workouts Tuesday as Oklahoma State drilled two hours in preparation for Saturday's battle with North Texas State.

"Scott realizes his chances of playing quicker are at a position other than quarterback," said coach Jim Stanley.

"We feel he can help us a great deal at strong safety."

Lisle, who missed the Arkansas game with a mild shoulder separation, "could have played, but we didn't want to take a chance," Stanley said.

Lisle appeared to be at full speed Tuesday.

Stanley also said center Gary Coubler, who missed the Wichita State contest and did not start against Arkansas, is "close to full speed again, but still needs a little rest." Choubler is expected to open against North Texas.

Kansas State

Kansas State coach Ellis Rainsberger had several worries in quarterback Joe Hatcher who is nursing bruised ribs, slotback Mike Harris and fullback Jim Couch, out with knee injuries, and fullback Regan Steiner, coming off knee surgery.

Rainsberger said tailback Roscoe Scobey would ill in at fullback if necessary.

Missouri

Missouri coach Al Onofrio said tailback Tony Galbreath worked out lightly on his own without pads Tuesday because of sore muscles.

Nose guard Bill Anderson, who had been out with a slight injury, returned to work Tuesday.

Kansas

Wide receiver Waddell Smith suffered a pinched nerve in his neck Tuesday and will be out for at least one game, Kansas coach Bud Moore said.

Freshman Walt Little or junior Jim Fender will replace Smith.

Moore said he didn't feel his Jayhawks made much progress in Tuesday's practice. He blamed himself for asking the players to learn too much in one day.

Iowa State

Freshman Ray Hardee was promoted to second unit Tuesday as Iowa State staged a rugged two-hour drill preparing for Saturday night's non-conference game with Florida State at Tallahassee.

Hardee, of Mulberry, Florida, is backing up Luther Blue and will make the trip to his home state this weekend.

Links Girls Trip Rockets

Lincoln High defeated Lincoln Northeast, 15-3, 11-15, 15-9, Tuesday night in a girls volleyball match.

Jan Rathe led the Links with 11 points, while Tami Forbes topped the Rockets with seven.

In the reserve game LHS won, 15-8, 15-12.

Highway Session Draws Requests

By DEAN TERRILL
Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Auburn — A two-hour informational session on the highway needs of 14 southeast Nebraska counties elicited numerous requests, but hardly a spark of controversy here Tuesday

The first of seven district meetings scheduled over the state, the session brought out 124 persons from District 1 More than 25 had requests or questions

Most of these, however, concerned the timetable on relatively small projects within the State Highway Commission's one- and five-year plans

Among the good news announced by chairman Joe Lipton of Omaha was that all 126 miles of state gravel roads within the district are scheduled for surfacing in the five-year plan There are only 412 such miles remaining in the entire state now

Perhaps drawing the most comment was the proposed surfacing of a segment of Hwy 103 from Crete north to the Pleasant Dale Interstate 80 interchange Several persons urged preliminary work on the 10-mile segment now in the five-year plan be expedited

I was explained that the road will be carrying heavy truck traffic this fall when the Farmland Foods pork processing plant opens

The evening session, surprisingly harmonious, even brought several compliments to the Highway Commission

Bill Peterson, chairman of the streets and highways committee of the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, praised the commission for "spending your funds very wisely." But he cited the need for more revenue and suggested an increase in the state gasoline tax

Charles F Nutter, deputy state engineer of engineering services, said following the meeting he was especially pleased at its smoothness Several representatives were present to provide on-the-spot answers to the queries of town and county officials.

"We are really trying to provide the public with honest and sincere information," he noted, "even though it isn't always what they'd like to hear "

Softball Players Killed By Train

Gardner, Ill. (UPI) — A softball game which went into extra innings inadvertently led to the death of five girl players and their school principal whose car was demolished by a passenger train on their way home.

The train, an Amtrak Turboliner, bound from Chicago to St Louis at 70 miles an hour, smashed into the car at an unguarded rural crossing at dusk, tumbling the 1973 Ford sedan before it for nearly a half mile. The car was reduced to half its size, authorities said

The crash 70 miles southwest of Chicago killed Antonette Tweedt, 53, principal of the Goodfarm Elementary School, four 6th-graders constituting all the girls in the class, and one 8th-grader.

The girls were identified by their clothing as Carol Holm, 11, Becky Gebhard, 11, Tonya Kincaid, 14, Barbara Gschwendter, 10, and Laura Archer, 11.

"Everyone is in shock," Allen Hoffman said Tuesday. He is a member of the Goodfarm School Board whose daughter was in a car behind the one driven by Mrs Tweedt.

Hoffman said the girls had traveled 22 miles to play a game at Bonfield, Ill. The game was tied at the end of regulation seven innings and went 10 innings before Goodfarm finally lost, 28-27.

Hoffman figures if the game had ended earlier, the girls would have been safely across the tracks which are only a few miles from their homes in the rural Goodfarm area near Gardner

"This is really a sad thing, a terrible loss to our close-knit community," School Supt. Leroy Brandt said

Brandt said the accident reduced the enrollment of the kindergarten-to-8th-grade school to 57 students. He said the 6th grade now has only five boys.

Mrs Charles Pearson, who had the rest of the softball team members with her in the second car, said she saw the train and heard the whistle

'It happend so fast, I don't know what happened," she said.

Resignation Of Episcopal Bishop Okd

Portland, Maine (UPI) — The Episcopal House of Bishops accepted the resignation of the controversial bishop of the Diocese of Nebraska, a self-acknowledged alcoholic, without debate here Tuesday

Bishop Robert P Varley had submitted his letter of resignation to presiding Bishop John Allin Aug 18, after the four largest parishes in his diocese had refused to appropriate money for the diocesan budget in protest of his liberal views

Varley called his relationship with the Diocese of Nebraska "a bad marriage," and said, "My resignation is not what I want, but it's what's best for the diocese '

The 51-year-old bishop expressed gratitude to the House of Bishops for its understanding and said he hoped his experience would not keep others from seeking help for similar problems

The controversy came to a head early this year while he was in Minnesota undergoing treatment for alcoholism and drug dependency The bishop supports the ordination of women and reform of the Book of Common Prayer and worked on a task force on homosexuals in the church

His views were unpopular with the 16,000 Episcopalians in conservative Nebraska and prompted the split between him and his diocese

Several of the bishops earlier had expressed hopes that they could prevent his resignation out of concern for his long career with the church but no opposition to accepting his resignation was raised Tuesday

NU Field Hockey Team Set

By DAVE SITTLER

Bully, push-in, short corner. Terms to describe a back alley brawl? No, field hockey.

Developed in England, field hockey is relatively new to the midwest.

Field hockey, women's style, will be on display Wednesday in Lincoln, when the University of Nebraska opens its season against Concordia College. The match begins at 5 p.m.

Set for the field adjacent to the women's physical education building, the Cornhuskers will try to extend their winning streak after going undefeated last season.

Undefeated

Following a year's leave of absence, Elizabeth Petrakis returns to coach the Nebraska team which swept to a 10-0 record in 1974.

Petrakis has several veterans on hand, as the Nebraska team embarks on an ambitious schedule, beefed up by acceleration of all women's athletics at Nebraska.

"It's hard to know what to expect before the first match," Petrakis said. "But the squad has been looking good in practice.

Petrakis' major problem is the lack of exposure to the sport in Nebraska. Only one Nebraska high school, Brownell-Talbot in Omaha, competes in field hockey.

"All of the girls on this team never had played the sport before they came to Nebraska," Petrakis said. "In a sense that's good because they all start at the same level.

Recruiting Next?

"But if we want to compete nationally, we have to recruit girls with experience and get the Nebraska high schools to start the sport."

A field hockey participate during her high school and college days in Wisconsin, Petrakis said the sport is popular in the east, especially in Philadelphia.

A sport that possesses many of the characteristics found in ice hockey, soccer and basketball, field hockey was started in 1968 as an intramural sport at Nebraska.

"But it is not a contact sport like hockey or soccer," Petrakis pointed out.

Played on a field the same size as a football field (100 by 60 yards), a team is comprised of 11 players, consisting of five forwards, three halfbacks, two fullbacks and a goalkeeper.

A match is played in two 35-minute halves with no substition unless for injury. A team is allowed two reserves in case of injury.

Like a Baseball

Each player uses a 36-inch long stick with a canelike curve to the striking edge. The ball is made of plastic and is the size of a baseball.

More Sports, Page 38

A goal, which counts for one point, must be scored from the striking area which is 16-yards around the front of the goal.

"The game is played only righthanded," Petrakis said. "A lefthanded person must switch to the righthanded style."

And those terms? Bully is comparable to a center jump that starts a basketball game. Push-in is similar to an out-of-bounds play and short corner is a penalty shot.

Nebraska will host the Big Eight tournament Oct. 17 and 18, and will also hold the Region XI meet in November.

Winner of the regional meet will qualify for the national finals in Virginia.

C. Prep's Wingender Boosting ISU Offense

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State's leading ground gainer is also a B-plus student and president of his fraternity — and one who Nebraska recruiters let slip through their fingers.

Fullback Jim Wingender netted 198 yards (6.2 yards per carry) against UCLA and Air Force although he has been held out of team practice for 2½ weeks with strained knee ligaments.

"I sort of grew up assuming I'd go to Nebraska," says the 6-foot-1, 204-pound senior from Omaha. "But after my senior year (at Creighton Prep) I had the opportunity to attend several schools and narrowed it down to Iowa State and Nebraska."

"I chose Iowa State because it was in the Big Eight and close enough for my parents to come to games — and also because my brother and sister were at Nebraska and it was a good chance to get away."

Wingender once scored five touchdowns for Prep and played on two state championship teams.

But his Cyclone career has taken five years to blossom.

Jim Wingender

He tore some back muscles as a sophomore and was redshirted. In the long run, that has made Wingender a better runner, he believes.

"I might not have had the opportunity to play as much if I'd run out of eligibility last year," he says.

Rugged Phil Danowsky was the regular Cyclone fullback until midway through the 1974 season when Coach Earle Bruce switched to a Power-I attack.

The new Iowa State offense doesn't rely as heavily on blocking by the fullback. "Thank God for that," says Wingender, whose effectiveness hinges more on speed than head busting.

"I used to run the 40 in 4.5 seconds, but that was when I weighed about 190. But I can still make it in 4.6 seconds."

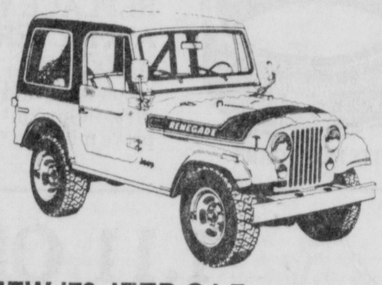

He's already rushed for more yards than in all of last year when he carried 38 times for 161 yards, caught two passes for 29 yards and returned five kick offs for 72 yards.

As a sign of things to come, he scored three touchdowns and was voted "Outstanding Player of the Game" in the final spring scrimmage this year.

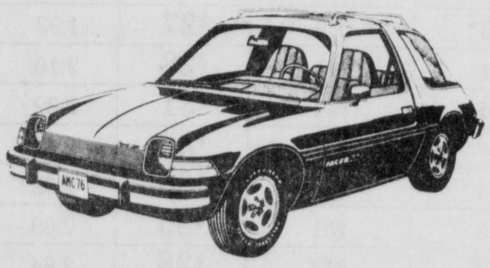

Wingender is as likely to be found behind a copy of "Comparative Economic Systems" as "Sports Illustrated." He maintains a 3.2 grade point average in his business administration-economics double major.

And should pro scouts not beat down his door with contract offers, he hopes to win an assistantship at Iowa State next year to work on a masters degree.

Marketing Called Key To Pro Bowling Success

THE LINCOLN STAR
Sports
Wednesday, September 24, 1975 35

By BOB MOYER

With the formal announcement Tuesday at the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce, World Championship Bowling (WCB) has become a reality.

The WCB, to be headquartered in Lincoln, will be run by four Lincolnites, president John Tavlin, players' association executive director Mike Tavlin, assistant marketing director Charles Kuba and tournament director Max Jensen.

In addition, the group claims two nationally-known promoters in vice-president Gary Davidson and director of marketing Max Muhleman, who collaborated on the World Football League, World Hockey Association and International Track Association.

The big question, now, is whether the WCB can remain in existence.

John Tavlin

"It (the WCB) has all the ingredients to be a successful venture," noted Davidson, who added that he was always on the lookout for good sports investments.

"I've been approached to participate in just about every sport you can mention from kung fu to ping pong," said Davidson. "We (Davidson and Muhleman) were amazed with the potential bowling has."

One of the bright factors in favor of the WCB's success is that, unlike other sports, it already has a strong following.

"In most sports the pros pull the amateurs," said Davidson. "In bowling, they're over 60 million amateurs already."

In addition, Muhleman noted the television ratings for the current PBA are startling.

"The Nielsen rating for weekly bowling is twice as high as baseball, four times as high as hockey," Muhleman noted. In fact, the 1974 Nielsen for bowling was 9.0 compared to a 5.1 for the U.S. Open golf tournament and 5.6 for the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Nevertheless, all agreed the key to success for the WCB would be marketing. Within that broad category four areas are critical — organization, TV contract, player participation and sponsorship.

"We are very happy to be here," said Davidson, "because we feel we're part of a very good team.

"Max and I had independently been looking at the possibilities of bowling but had not run into any group which had the expertise in the sport until we ran into John and his group," Davidson added.

Jensen, on the other hand, noted "I've been very selective throughout the years, unwilling to join something unless I'm pretty well convinced it will work. I've joined the WCB."

Muhleman, who will be responsible for getting TV contracts and sponsors, sees no major problems in that area.

"We haven't been prepared until today (Tuesday) to make formal inquiries to the networks and syndicators, such as TVS," said Muhleman.

"However, I've made some informal contacts and everybody seemed to be favorable."

Likewise, Muhleman thinks the large viewing audience of women for bowling (nearly half the viewers are females) will be helpful in arranging sponsors.

"It really means a lot that women watch," Muhleman said. "Companies selling soft goods or foods know the people who buy their product are women. When we try to get them to give us sponsorship we have a much better chance, because they know the viewers are people who buy their product."

The female audience should also be enhanced, both Muhleman and Jensen feel, because the WCB is open to women to compete in the pro division.

"You wouldn't believe how good some women bowlers are," said Jensen "Yes, I definitely think they can successfully compete against the men."

"It's the only sport that has ever offered that chance to women," Muhleman added. "Look at tennis. Sure, Billie Jean King can beat Bobby Riggs, but she'd have a heckuva time beating Jimmy Connors — in bowling the comparable thing could happen."

Getting the players Davidson characterized as "one of our least critical problems."

"We will be offering better purses and give the players the kind of control they've been seeking," said Jensen. "There's no doubt the majority will be interested."

Generating the bigger purses will be accomplished by better marketing," said Davidson. "We don't have a hidden cache of money to pour in. We just feel better marketing will produce the money by itself."

"Right now, pro bowling is a stifled sport," said Tavlin. "Although it has a good audience, its prestige and prize money have not kept pace with other sports. With the WCB, we hope to solve that problem."

Holy Name Faces Tests

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

If Omaha Holy Name qualifies for this year's first state high school football playoffs, it deserves a medal of honor in addition to a trophy.

Right now, Holy Name is on top of the Class C-1 football world with two wins over Class B teams and an impressive win over highly rated Fremont Bergan.

If you're not familiar with classifications, that adds up to five more Class B opponents (including the top-rated team in Pius X) and Scribner, the No. 1 Class C-2 outfit.

Holy Name obviously geared its schedule to fit Class B playoff purposes, but last week dropped to Class C status, based on most recent enrolment figures.

Mustang Coach

The Omaha school puts a lot of faith in its coaching staff to meet the upcoming challenges. Fleming is the former Omaha Mustang semi-pro head coach, who returned to the high school ranks four years ago at Nebraska City Lourdes.

While Holy Name braces for its challenge against Class B's fourth-ranked Scotus Friday night, statewide Class B attention will focus on the Ogallala-Lexington game.

Centennial is another Class C-1 school facing rugged Class B competitoin. So far, it's 2-1 against Class B teams, defeating Ashland and Seward after dropping the season opener to Waverly.

Here's what coach Rod Boss and the Utica school will challenge the rest of the season — Aurora, Wahoo, Norris, Grand Island Northwest and Platteview.

"We're keeping track of what everyone does," Centennial coach Rod Boss says. "We sort of anticipated dropping to Class C last summer.

'Positive Approach'

"We're taking the positive approach to the whole thing," he adds. "Each and every time we win, we get more points than teams staying within the class and when we lose, we don't suffer as much point-wise."

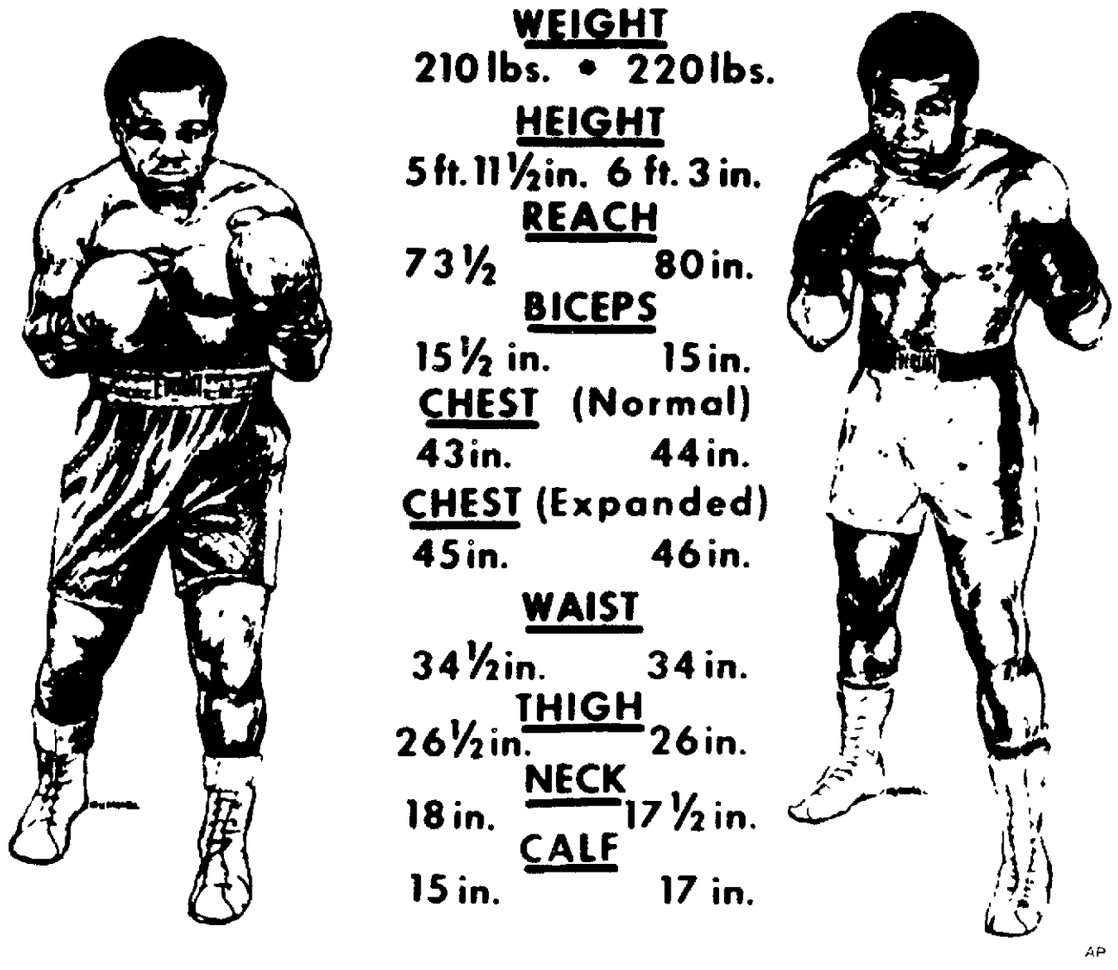

Nevertheless, the name of the game is win and Boss, an assistant coach for the South Shrine Bowl team this summer, realizes his team must rise to the challenge to qualify for the playoffs.

Centennial is ranked fifth in this week's C-1 ratings after the Broncos overtook Seward, 18-14, when quarterback Doug Gloystein hit sophomore Kevin Sullivan with a 24-yard touchdown pass with 1:21 remaining.

Bergan is a third former Class B team lodged high in the Class C-1 ratings. The Fremont school drops from first to third after a 14-0 loss to Holy Name last week.

There were few changes in the three lower division ratings. Scribner held its Class C-2 lead. Lawrence and Wheatland also retained No. 1 honors in Class D and eight-man ratings, respectively.

Better Play Husker Goal

By BOB OWENS
Star Sports Editor

Nebraska has been installed as a 37-point favorite to make Texas Christian University its third consecutive victim Saturday afternoon in Memorial Stadium and that's a situation that always worries the favored coach.

"Everybody's (the fans) laughing and giggling right now," Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne said after Tuesday's practice. "But if we don't play well, we'll have our hands full."

The Huskers, ranked fourth in both wire service polls, could easily be lulled into complacency by both the oddsmakers and the pollsters, but the coaching staff will be trying all week to avoid overconfidence.

"I'm hoping we play better than we have the last two weeks," Osborne said. "That's the thing we're shooting for and I hope the players are thinking that way. We're not going to get any help in terms of incentive. The psychological factors are all in favor of TCU."

The Horned Frogs are expected to test Nebraska's pass defense which ranks tops in the Big Eight Conference and which last week limited the 1974 Big Ten Conference passing champion, Terry Jones of Indiana, to just five completions in 15 attempts for a meager 23 yards.

The Huskers have had 14 of 30 passes completed against them for 106 yards and have intercepted two. In what might be considered normal passing situations (third down), Husker foes have converted only three of them into first downs in 26 opportunities.

By comparison, Nebraska has had third or fourth down situations 35 times and converted 21 of them into first downs. Quarterback Terry Luck's record is 17 of 29. Against Indiana, Vince Ferragamo and Earl Everett each converted two of three.

"They throw pretty well," Osborne said of TCU's quarterbacks Lee Cook and Jimmy Dan Elzner In two games, the Frogs have hit 34 of 80 tries for a 425 completion average. Their yardage through the air comes to 391, which figures out to 195 yards a game. Top average by a Big Eight team is Kansas State's 127.5 a game.

Defensively, Osborne said TCU has been in mostly an "even" alignment in contrast to the 5-2 defense used by all Big Eight teams "It's a 4-3 or pro type defense and our guards are going to be covered unless TCU goes away from it," Osborne said.

In preparation for the Louisiana State opener, the Huskers worked 60 per cent of the time for a 4-3 defense, but saw it only twice. The Tigers went to the 5-2 after getting "burned" on those two plays Indiana played what is called a "Tennessee 5-2" with the middle linebacker playing off the ball

"We had five or six plays we worked on a lot for LSU's 4-3, but we didn't use them," Osborne said They're being polished again this week.

"We're going to see much 5-2 down the road and we're continuing to work against that this week while also working against TCU's 4-3," Osborne said. "If TCU comes up with a brand new defense it will mean they will have had to work on it against all our plays with only three days of practice to get it ready. As the season progresses, it gets progressively tougher to make major changes"

The Huskers appear to be in pretty good shape physically for the game. Center Rik Bonness has a pulled hamstring, but Osborne says he hopes he'll be ready to play Saturday.

Indians Rehire Manager Robinson

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Frank Robinson, the only man in baseball to win an MVP award in both leagues, was rehired as Cleveland Indians manager on a one-year contract Tuesday, but left his future as a player in doubt.

Robinson, the first black manager in the major leagues, will receive an estimated $50,000 to $75,000 to serve only as manager next season compared to the estimated $175,000 he received as player-skipper this year.

"I've said all along that this is the last year," said Robinson, who next week completes 20 years as a player.

"There's always the chance I may change my mind. The human mind is a funny thing," said Robinson, who'll have an operation after the World Series to correct a shoulder injury.

But he insisted the outcome of the operation would not affect his decision.

"I'm not having it to get a good arm and play next year," he said. "I'm having it because Dr Earl Brightman said I should to live a normal life with no pain."

Robinson signed a one-year contract as a manager only and he and General Manager Phil Seghi said if he decided to play, it would be renegotiated.

Five Big Eight Teams Ranked

NEW YORK (UPI) — In the past few years, the Big Eight Conference—once the best in the land—has come in for criticism, and even been referred to as "Oklahoma and the Seven Dwarfs." This week their critics are silent.

Oh, Oklahoma is still powerful, all right. But the others aren't that far behind. For some, it brings back to mind 1971, when for a while Oklahoma, Nebraska and Colorado were 1-2-3, all finished in the top 10, and Iowa State, Oklahoma State and Missouri were also ranked at one time or another.

Last weekend was a prime example of why all the conference members are powers to be reckoned with. Each and every one of the Big Eight teams won—a feat never before accomplished — and, in this week's ratings by the UPI Board of Coaches, three of them are in the top five and five in the top 20.

Oklahoma thrashed then-15th ranked Pittsburgh 46-10 to easily maintain its No. 1 spot, pulling 35 of a possible 42 first place votes for 408 points; Nebraska, on the strength of its 45-0 pasting of Indiana, climbed two notches to fourth; and Missouri remained fifth, coming back from a 20-0 deficit at Illinois to emerge a 30-20 winner.

Oklahoma State and Colorado, both with 2-0 records, also moved into the top 20, in 13th and tied for 17th, respectively.

Ohio State, which beat Penn State 17-9, held second place, garnering six first place nods and 377 points; Southern California, last year's champion thanks to a hectic bowl season, moved up one notch to third, defeating Oregon State Friday night, 24-7, and received the remaining No. 1 vote and 333 points.

1	Oklahoma (2-0) (35)	408
2	Ohio State (2-0) (6)	377

Texas A&M, UCLA Gain

By Associated Press

Texas A&M and UCLA climbed into The Associated Press Top Ten college football ratings Tuesday following impressive weekend triumphs while Penn State and Tennessee dropped out.

Geneva's Adkisson Brothers Share Award

By RANDY YORK
Prep Sports Editor

When Geneva junior quarterback Steve Adkisson surveys the secondary for a receiver, he can't miss.

First, his split end is a 6-6 pass target and therefore easy to spot.

Second, it's his brother, senior Ken Adkisson. As many years as he's been pitching the football to him, the patterns should be familiar.

Last week, the brother passing combination clicked as well as ever in a surprisingly lopsided 45-8 Geneva win over previously unbeaten Tri-County.

For their efforts, Steve and Ken Adkisson share the Sunday Journal and Star's prep Player of the Week award.

Steve Adkisson

Steve connected on 15 of 23 passes for 200 yards and five touchdowns. He rushed for 84 yards on eight carries and scored once himself.

Ken caught five passes for 103 yards and two touchdowns. Two other touchdown passes were called back, but he accounted for a third TD by blocking a punt and a teammate recovered in the end zone.

Ken also finished with nine tackles from his defensive end position.

Others who'll receive Player of the Week cards include:

Brad Ollman, Beatrice — Senior tackle's defensive play sparked 6-3 win over Columbus.

Kevin Sullivan, Centennial — Sophomore's 24-yard touchdown catch with 1:21 remaining gave Class C school an 18-14 victory over Class B Seward.

Morris Stover, Kearney — Junior's 15-yard touchdown run in the first quarter gave Bearcats 7-0 upset win over West Big 10 power North Platte. He also was credited with seven solo tackles, five assists and a pass interception.

Todd Hendrickson, Kimball — His three touchdowns, one on a 74-yard pass and another on a 60-yard pass, burned previously unbeaten Alliance, 20-14.

Greg Prechaska, Lincoln Southeast — Fullback's 103 yards rushing helped Knights break out of severe offensive slump in 13-7 upset over two-time winner Ralston.

Rick Weeds, Nebraska City — His 27-yard field goal with 27 seconds left gave Pioneers a 15-14 Twin Rivers Conference win over Auburn.

Dennis Dehm, Pleasanton — In team's three wins, he's rushed for 450 yards, scored seven touchdowns and added six conversions.

Kim Johnson, Wausa — Senior, making first start at quarterback, hit 3 of 8 passes for 120 yards and rushed for 40 yards on eight carries. He scored all 10 points in 10-0 upset win over Osmond on a 10-yard run, PAT and 20-yard field goal. He also led team in tackles with seven solos and three assists.

Bob Janda, St. Edward — Ran for touchdowns of 4 and 29 yards and passed 19 yards for another as team defeated Polk, 27-8.

Kent Taubenhiem, Amherst — Fullback rushed for 108 yards, scored all 16 points in shutout win over Axtell and was credited with six unassisted and four assisted tackles.

Doug Diltz, Elmwood — Junior I-back rushed for 167 yards and scored a touchdown in 15-0 win over Weeping Water. He also recovered three fumbles and led team with 11 unassisted and six assisted tackles.

Pat Cottman, Sandhills — Halfback-linebacker rushed for 153 yards, intercepted a pass and made 14 tackles (seven unassisted) in team's 12-12 tie against unbeaten Thedford.

Jeff Misegadis, Lodgepole — Senior fullback had touchdown runs of 20 and 53 yards, 13 tackles and two fumble recoveries in unbeaten team's 26-6 win over Lyman.

Joe Karn, Stapleton — Senior quarterback threw touchdown passes of 15, 26, 27, 60 and 63 yards and ran for two more touchdowns in 54-30 win over Mullen. He finished 11 of 16 passing for 295 yards.

Charlie Dickinson, Barneston — He rushed for 157 yards and scored on runs of 16, 19 and 24 yards in win over Filley. He also intercepted three passes.

Mike Linn, Harrisburg — Senior fullback rushed for whopping 318 yards on only 10 carries and tallied four touchdowns in rout of Melbeta.

Morning Briefing

A Sports Roundup

FOOTBALL

Two Colorado players are listed among national college football leaders, according to rankings released by the NCAA Statistics Service. Quarterback David Williams ranks sixth in total offense with an average of 215.5 yards per game, while fullback Terry Kunz ranks fifth in rushing with an average of 141.5 yards per game. Mike Renfro of Texas Christian, Nebraska's opponent this Saturday, has averaged 6 pass receptions per game to rank sixth in that category.

Daryle Lamonica has left the Southern California Sun, Larry Hatfield, club president, said the former Oakland standout told him he was unhappy about lack of playing time, the way the offense was being coached and the coaches' attitude toward him.

Claude Humphrey, the Atlanta Falcons' defensive end who was lost for the season with a knee injury three weeks ago, has been back in the hospital the past week. He was readmitted Sept. 16 with blood clotting in his lungs, but the team physician said he should leave the hospital by this weekend.

Rep. Torbert H. MacDonald, D-Mass., who engineered the temporary ban on television blackouts of sold-out sporting events, said he will propose that the ban be made permanent. The ban is scheduled to expire next year.

Guard Ed Budde of the Kansas City Chiefs was scheduled to undergo knee surgery. He suffered cartilage damage in his right knee Sunday in the fourth quarter of the Chiefs' 37-33 loss to Denver.

Joe Washington of Oklahoma has been named Big Eight offensive player of the week. He rushed for 166 yards in 23 carries and scored three touchdowns in Oklahoma's 46-10 win over Pittsburgh. John O'Leary was Nebraska's nominee.

National Football League players will vote on a contract proposal which management representatives "don't believe they can turn down," it was announced Tuesday. Player representatives, charging that management has changed its position little in two days of negotiations, decided to submit the contract proposal made by management Monday for a vote of the players.

BASEBALL

Kansas City Royals' pitcher Steve Busby will miss his last two starts, manager Whitey Herzog said Tuesday. Busby, 18-12, has been bothered by soreness in his arm.

Boston Red Sox rookie left fielder Jim Rice does not require surgery for his broken left hand, but he will be lost for the rest of the season.

Relief pitcher Sparky Lyle of the New York Yankees said he wants to be traded, and if the club refuses his request, he will play without a contract next year. He said he has not been playing as often as he would like.

A Seattle group has offered $15 million for the San Francisco Giants and their real estate holdings, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported Tuesday.

The Milwaukee Brewers have fined outfielder Sixto Lezcano and suspended him for the rest of the season after he argued with Brewer manager Del Crandall.

Rico Carty, designated hitter for the Cleveland Indians, Tuesday was released from the hospital, where he was taken for X rays and observation after being beaned during a Monday night game.

BASKETBALL

The NCAA has found Clemson University guilty of illegal basketball recruiting practices and placed the school on two years probation, the Greenville Piedmont said Tuesday.

The newly formed Metro Six Athletic Conference said Tuesday it will have an automatic berth in the NCAA Midwest regional basketball tournament next March. Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Memphis State, Tulane and Georgia Tech are the six school in the conference.

Reserve guard Ron Williams Tuesday was traded by the Milwaukee Bucks to the Los Angeles Lakers for a future National Basketball Association draft choice.

Kentucky Colonel coach Hubie Brown said Tuesday he had nothing to do with the Colonels' trade of Dan Issel to the Baltimore Claws, a trade the veteran forward still refuses to accept.

OTHER SPORTS

Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina used strong ground strokes to defeat Mike Estep of Dallas, 6-1, 6-4, in the first round of the $100,000 Fireman's Fund International Tennis Tournament. Sixth-ranked Harold Solomon lost to Californian Jeff Borowiak, 6-3, 6-4.

Tony Petronelli, welterweight contender from Brockton, Mass., injured his hand in training, forcing a postponement of Saturday's scheduled title fight with World Boxing Association champion Angel Luis Espada.

New Jersey construction millionaire John J. Brunetti has offered $15 million to sportsman John Galbreath for his nearly bankrupt Hialeah race track, informed sources said.

Big Eight Averages 50,938

Big Eight Conference football teams have won 14 of 16 games in two weeks of non-league battling, but even more important are the crowd figures.

Attendance has totalled 815,010 during the two Saturdays for an average of 50,938. That's a record clip, topping last year's all-time mark of 48,931.

It will be difficult to sustain that average, but it's a great start The first round of games averaged 48,551 while last Saturday's crowds averaged 53,325.

Nebraska, as usual, is the leader with 152,281 fans for the first two games Biggest gainer is Oklahoma with 140,547, an increase of over 9,000 over last year's figures The Sooner boost is the result of the upper deck added to the west stands.

Iowa State averaged 34,400 at home games last year in Clyde Williams Stadium. In their first game in the new stadium, the Cyclones attracted 42,000 for the match against Air Force.

The Big Ten continues to be the nation's attendance leader with 848,517 for 15 games, an average of 56,568 Last week, led by Michigan's 92,304, the Big Ten drew an average crowd of 57,389 That included pathetic crowds for the Iowa at Syracuse game (19,283), Northern Illinois at Northwestern (21,000) and Western Michigan at Minnesota (23,326)

Big Ten Goes 5-4-1

The Big Ten Conference had a 5-4-1 week against outside opponents last week after spending the opening week of the season battling each other

In order to do that well, that once-powerful conference had to go out and score victories over South Dakota, Western Michigan, Northern Illinois and Miami of Ohio Only the latter might be considered a legitimate football power

Michigan was embarrassed by Stanford in a 19-19 tie Stanford had opened with a 34-14 loss to Penn State Syracuse, a 24-17 winner over Villanova in its opener, nipped Iowa 10-7 while Purdue fell to intra-state rival Notre Dame 17-0 The Big Eight's Nebraska and Missouri took care of Indiana and Illinois

The Southwest Conference had a 7-1 record going into last Saturday s battles and came out 3-3-1 for an overall 10-4-1 non-league record

You have to go back 35 years to find as good a SWC start. Back in 1971 when there were only seven league members, the Southwest opened with a 7-0 mark. The 7-1 mark also was the best winning percentage since a 6-0-1 record was achieved in 1957. Last year, SWC teams won six and lost two in first efforts.

Unfortunately for Husker foe TCU, the only loss was suffered by the Horned Frogs on the opening round of games TCU has a rich football tradition, but you have to go back to 1959 to find a SWC conference champion at the Fort Worth school

The last time TCU beat Nebraska was in 1951 by a 28-7 score The Frogs went on to win the league title and earn a Cotton Bowl invitation Nebraska won 34-14 in 1965, 14-10 in 1966 and 29-0 in 1967 for a 3-1 series advantage

Offense Lead To Oklahoma

MISSION, Kan (UPI) — Usually, Oklahoma's first big football game is the shootout with Texas in Dallas But it may be different this season

The Sooners start Big Eight Conference play against Colorado Oct 4, a week before the annual grudge match in Dallas And, statistically at least, Colorado figures to give the Sooners their money's worth

Oklahoma leads the nation again this week, according to the NCAA Statistics Service, in rushing offense (461 0 yards a game) and scoring offense (54 0 points a game) But Colorado is the new leader in total offense with 529 yards a game running and passing

And Coach Bill Mallory's Buffaloes are second in rushing with 402 5 yards an outing

Oklahoma will have the advantage of playing the Buffaloes in Norman, but it was Colorado which last defeated the Sooners, 20-14, in 1972

San Diego State grabbed the national passing lead, averaging 286 7 yards through the airways in its three games

Texas A&M stayed on top in total defense, averaging a 98.0-yard yield per game.

Husker Golfers In 3-Day Meet

By United Press International

Nebraska's golf team will be competing in the All-College Classic at Oklahoma City Wednesday through Friday

Competing for the Huskers will be veterans Doug Smith, Craig Moyer and Todd Thorson as well as newcomers Steve Stratton, Steve Sloan and Tony Pesavento

"I hope we do all right," said coach Larry Romjue "Although we do have a young team, I think we'll be better than we were last year "

At the same tournament last year, NU finished 12th out of 18 teams.

Nebraska has only a two-meet fall schedule. The next outing is Oct. 9-10 at St. Charles, Mo., for the Boogie Hills Intercollegiate Golf Classic.

Injured Sooners Return

From News Wires

Oklahoma coach Barry Switzer welcomed back all-American noseguard Dewey Selmon, offensive tackle Mike Vaughan and split end Billy Brooks to the Sooner football practice Tuesday

All had watched Monday's workout from the sideline with nagging knee injuries after the Pittsburgh game Saturday

Oklahoma State

Sophomore Scott Burk moved from quarterback to strong safety and split end Sam Lisle resumed full scale workouts Tuesday as Oklahoma State drilled two hours in preparation for Saturday's battle with North Texas State

"Scott realizes his chances of playing quicker are at a position other than quarterback," said coach Jim Stanley

"We feel he can help us a great deal at strong safety "

Lisle, who missed the Arkansas game with a mild shoulder separation, "could have played, but we didn't want to take a chance ' Stanley said

Lisle appeared to be at full speed Tuesday

Stanley also said center Gary Coubler, who missed the Wichita State contest and did not start against Arkansas, is "close to full speed again, but still needs a little rest ' Choubler is expected to open against North Texas

Kansas State

Kansas State coach Ellis Rainsberger had several worries in quarterback Joe Hatcher who is nursing bruised ribs, slotback Mike Harris and fullback Jim Couch out with knee injuries, and fullback Regan Steiner, coming off knee surgery

Rainsberger said tailback Roscoe Scobey would fill in at fullback if necessary

Missouri

Missouri coach Al Onofrio said tailback Tony Galbreath worked out lightly on his own without pads Tuesday because of sore muscles

Nose guard Bill Anderson, who had been out with a slight injury returned to work Tuesday

Kansas

Wide receiver Waddell Smith suffered a pinched nerve in his neck Tuesday and will be out for at least one game, Kansas coach Bud Moore said

Freshman Walt Little or junior Jim Fender will replace Smith

Moore said he didn t feel his Jayhawks made much progress in Tuesday's practice He blamed himself for asking the players to learn too much in one day

Iowa State

Freshman Ray Hardee was promoted to second unit Tuesday as Iowa State staged a rugged two-hour drill preparing for Saturday night's non-conference game with Florida State at Tallahassee

Hardee, of Mulberry Florida, is backing up Luther Blue and will make the trip to his home state this weekend

Links Girls Trip Rockets

Lincoln High defeated Lincoln Northeast, 15-3, 11-15, 15-9, Tuesday night in a girls volleyball match

Jan Rathe led the Links with 11 points, while Tami Forbes topped the Rockets with seven

Texas Rooters Pay $19 Extra

Austin Tex (AP) — Some Texas fans in Dallas are paying $19 for a bus ride they will never take just to get tickets to the Oklahoma-Texas football game

The Oct 11 game has been a sellout for months, as it is every year, but 50 end zone tickets allotted to the Texas Ex-Students Association for a special ticket and bus ride service were being sold Tuesday

First National again proudly presents...

First introduced a year ago, "Dress A Doll" is a program that brought special joy to more than 200 needy children in Lincoln last Christmas. Each received a beautiful new doll...one that was fully attired in a very specially created and hand-crafted outfit.

Because of the marvelous response to the program, First National is expanding "Dress A Doll" this year. The objective...to provide for fulfilling the dreams of more than 300 underprivileged youngsters this Christmas.

Here's how "Dress A Doll" works...

The dolls are supplied by First National Lincoln. The outfits are created by individuals of all ages who enjoy designing and making doll clothes and who also have a desire to bring special happiness to some needy child at Christmas.

To participate, you simply stop in at any of First National's three handy locations and pick up a doll—no cash deposit, no charge.

Take the doll home with you and fashion an outfit for it...fancy dress, casual clothes, knit and crochet, storybook character, or a colorful costume worn in some foreign land.

When you have completed the outfit you have designed and tailored for your doll, bring the costumed doll to First National—any time prior to November 5.

All dolls will be displayed in the lobby of First National's Main Bank at 13th and M from November 12 through December 19. Special awards will be made for various dress classifications and for those participants 15 years of age and under based on the decisions of a panel of judges.

The outfitted dolls will then be donated to the Salvation Army for distribution to families of needy children at Christmas.

"Dress A Doll"...it's a fun way for you to help answer some child's dream at Christmas. We invite your participation.

NU Field Hockey Team Set

By DAVE SITTLER

Bully, push-in, short corner. Terms to describe a back alley brawl? No, field hockey.

Developed in England, field hockey is relatively new to the midwest.

Field hockey, women's style, will be on display Wednesday in Lincoln, when the University of Nebraska opens its season against Concordia College. The match begins at 5 p.m.

Set for the field adjacent to the women's physical education building, the Cornhuskers will try to extend their winning streak after going undefeated last season.

Undefeated

Following a year's leave of absence, Elizabeth Petrakis returns to coach the Nebraska team which swept to a 10-0 record in 1974.

Petrakis has several veterans on hand, as the Nebraska team embarks on an ambitious schedule, beefed up by acceleration of all women's athletics at Nebraska.

"It's hard to know what to expect before the first match," Petrakis said "But the squad has been looking good in practice.

Petrakis' major problem is the lack of exposure to the sport in Nebraska Only one Nebraska high school, Brownell-Talbot in Omaha, competes in field hockey.

"All of the girls on this team never had played the sport before they came to Nebraska," Petrakis said. "In a sense that's good because they all start at the same level.

Recruiting Next?

"But if we want to compete nationally, we have to recruit girls with experience and get the Nebraska high schools to start the sport."

A field hockey participate during her high school and college days in Wisconsin, Petrakis said the sport is popular in the east, especially in Philadelphia.

A sport that possesses many of the characteristics found in ice hockey, soccer and basketball, field hockey was started in 1968 as an intramural sport at Nebraska.

"But it is not a contact sport like hockey or soccer," Petrakis pointed out.

Played on a field the same size as a football field (100 by 60 yards), a team is comprised of 11 players, consisting of five forwards, three halfbacks, two fullbacks and a goalkeeper.

A match is played in two 35-minute halves with no substition unless for injury. A team is allowed two reserves in case of injury.

Like a Baseball

More Sports, Page 38

A goal, which counts for one point, must be scored from the striking area which is 16-yards around the front of the goal.

"The game is played only righthanded," Petrakis said. "A lefthanded person must switch to the righthanded style."

And those terms? Bully is comparable to a center jump that starts a basketball game. Push-in is similar to an out-of-bounds play and short corner is a penalty shot.

Nebraska will host the Big Eight tournament Oct. 17 and 18, and will also hold the Region XI meet in November.

Winner of the regional meet will qualify for the national finals in Virginia.

C. Prep's Wingender Boosting ISU Offense

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State's leading ground gainer is also a B-plus student and president of his fraternity — and one who Nebraska recruiters let slip through their fingers.

Fullback Jim Wingender netted 198 yards (6.2 yards per carry) against UCLA and Air Force although he has been held out of team practice for 2½ weeks with strained knee ligaments.

"I sort of grew up assuming I'd go to Nebraska," says the 6-foot-1, 204-pound senior from Omaha. "But after my senior year (at Creighton Prep) I had the opportunity to attend several schools and narrowed it down to Iowa State and Nebraska."

"I chose Iowa State because it was in the Big Eight and close enough for my parents to come to games — and also because my brother and sister were at Nebraska and it was a good chance to get away."

Wingender once scored five touchdowns for Prep and played on two state championship teams.

But his Cyclone career has taken five years to blossom.

Jim Wingender

He tore some back muscles as a sophomore and was redshirted. In the long run, that has made Wingender a better runner, he believes.

"I might not have had the opportunity to play as much if I'd run out of eligibility last year," he says.

Rugged Phil Danowsky was the regular Cyclone fullback until midway through the 1974 season when Coach Earle Bruce switched to a Power-I attack.

The new Iowa State offense doesn't rely as heavily on blocking by the fullback. "Thank God for that," says Wingender, whose effectiveness hinges more on speed than head busting.

"I used to run the 40 in 4.5 seconds, but that was when I weighed about 190. But I can still make it in 4.6 seconds."

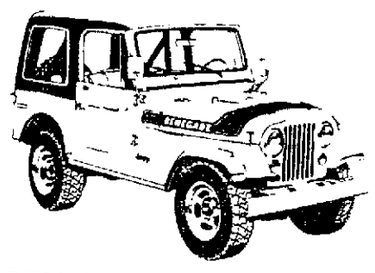

He's already rushed for more yards than in all of last year when he carried 38 times for 161 yards, caught two passes for 29 yards and returned five kick offs for 72 yards.

As a sign of things to come, he scored three touchdowns and was voted "Outstanding Player of the Game" in the final spring scrimmage this year.

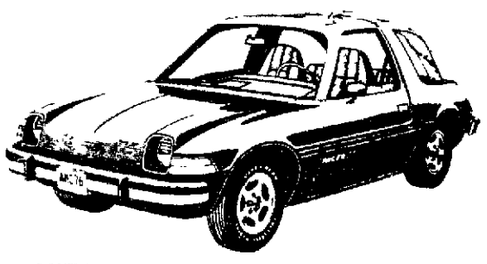

Wingender is as likely to be found behind a copy of "Comparative Economic Systems" as "Sports Illustrated." He maintains a 3.2 grade point average in his business administration-economics double major.

And should pro scouts not beat down his door with contract offers, he hopes to win an assistantship at Iowa State next year to work on a masters degree.

Grange Chief Says Ford Broke Pledge

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

"The president broke his promise to farmers when he vetoed the farm bill last spring. He said that he wouldn't impose export limits, but he did it again today by banning exports to Poland," John Scott, national master of the Grange, said Tuesday.

Scott is in Lincoln for the annual state convention of the Nebraska Grange at the Cornhusker Hotel which runs through Wednesday.

Scott cited several issues he described as "particularly hot in Congress now."

"The one that has all of Congress stirred up is the issue of the Environmental Protection Agency cancelling agricultural chemicals. Each time they ban a chemical its replacement is less effective and more expensive," he said.

Minimal Funding

Scott noted that Congress had extended the life of the EPA only one year by a minimal funding of its operations. "I think they have gotten the word that they must present better scientific evidence of their positions before banning a product," he said.

"The real problem is the Delaney amendment, which bans any trace of a residue known to cause cancer. This needs to be modified. DES is being banned by the Senate, yet it is allowed to be prescribed as a morning-after contraceptive in a dose thousands of times stronger than any possible residue in beef liver," he said.

Scott is worried about fuel supplies for farmers, but pleased about one promise President Ford did keep. "He promised that he would arrange a refund of 6 cents a gallon to farmers for fuel used for actual farming. This is a rebate on the import tax charged for imported oil," he said.

Fuel Priorities

The area of concern is for farm fuels priorities, including those used to make fertilizer. "Unless we get those reinstated, farmers could be in trouble," he warned.

John Scott

Scott said the Grange would support a bill in Congress to establish a special checkoff for beef producers to fund promotion and research on beef, but would oppose an amendment that would include consumers on such a board.

"It is ridiculous to expect consumers to serve on a board that is entirely funded by farmers. I expect they will vote on it Wednesday but I don't know how it will come out," he said.

Scott thinks farmers should give some thought to promoting meat exports. "We need to follow Japan's example by selling the finished product instead of raw materials, in this case grain," he suggested.

Ban 'Ridiculous'

Scott added that "it is ridiculous to ban exports of wheat at a time when we have about 2½ billion bushels and can use only between 600 and 700 million bushels of it."

"As long as the State Department makes agricultural export policy there isn't much a farmer can do about it. I do wish every farmer would personally write to the President and tell him how he feels abut having his export market cut off. He has given in to the unions and broken his promise to farmers," Scott said.

Scott predicted tht Congress will eventually pass a bill designed to protect farmers when a meat packing company goes broke, but added, "Unless the Office of Management and Budget or the President changes his mind there is a good chance he will veto it."

"We favor a state-federal grain inspection system which is another hot issue in Congress. You can't have a good system when it is controlled by the exporters who are supposed to be the ones inspected," he said.

Scott noted that while farm influence is waning in Congress it is likely to get worse. "Many of farmers' friends in Congress are men and women who have seniority and are powerful. When we lose them we will really be in trouble," he predicted.

Scott said the Grange is still a largely rural organization. "We have about 40% urband and 50% or 55% farm membership. City membership is made up mostly of the children of farmers who were Grange members. My own Grange now has 600 members but perhaps a half dozen are all that are active farmers. With land selling for $6,000 an acre they were forced out of agriculture," he said.

Scott said Grange membership is holding up "reasonably well when compared to rural populations."

Grain Storage Capacity Adequate

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Nebraska has enough storage on the farm and in elevators to tuck away the entire bumper crop the state's farmers expect to harvest this year.

But it may not all be in the right place.

According to Doug Murfield, head of the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics, the state at one time had storage capacity to handle 91 million bushels of government-owned grain, but that has all been sold.

Even though 85% of the storage was sold to farmers (the remainder went to grain elevators), almost all of it is still available as grain storage, according to Murfield.

"I think 900 million bushels of storage on farms today might be a safe figure," he said. "We made our last survey in 1974 with 800 million bushels, and I'm sure it has increased since then."

The farm storage and the 453-million-bushel capacity of the state's elevators make Nebraska an important reservoir of grain for the world. It claims one-sixth of U.S. storage capacity, Murfield said.

Many other states have elevators that insist on handling crops one at a time, but most of the larger elevators in Nebraska take in corn, grain sorghum and soybeans at the same time.

In addition to elevator grain-drying facilities, there are 34,000 grain dryers on Nebraska farms. All of these storage and grain-drying facilities are going into operation as the harvest of feed grains and soybeans gets under way.

Agriculture officials believe every bit of Nebraska's grain storage may be needed because transportation problems already are beginning to develop as harvest and export shipments create demands on railroads.

A spokesman for the Association of Railroads (AAR) reports there is a surplus of 13,180 cars. However, some of them are not suitable to move grain. AAR estimates that 30% of all hopper cars, and 30% of all boxcars are currently being used to move grain.

More and more cars are being tied up at ports, but AAR is moving quickly with embargoes to head off large backlogs of loaded cars there.

This week, embargoes were announced on four elevators at Superior, Wis., two at Duluth, Minn., and one each at Portland, Ore., and Seattle, Wash.

Great Lakes elevators have gone to a 24-hour workday in an effort to unplug the grain movement system in that area of the nation.

No embargoes were reported at Gulf ports. However, there was some spotty congestion at Houston as a result of labor problems.

Combines were reported to be harvesting wheat faster than elevators in the Pacific Northwest could handle it. However, this is regarded as a temporary local problem.

U.S. government records show that 522,000 metric tons of wheat were shipped to the Soviet Union between July 1 and Aug. 31.

Other data available from various sources within the industry indicate that 376,000 tons of new-crop wheat have been shipped by two large grain companies selling grain to Russia. The dates of these shipments are not available. Government statisticians say they think only 200,000 tons of it may be new wheat, but that is only an estimate.

Bankers Bullish On Cattle Business

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Country bankers attending the Nebraska Bankers Agricultural Credit Symposium in Lincoln are bullish about the future of the cattle business in Nebraska.

One banker predicted cattle would bring $60 per hundredweight in 1976.

The basis for such optimism is the rapid dissappearance of big feeder cattle and old cows from ranches in the state.

Gene Woods of the Purdum State Bank said, "The mood of the cattlemen in our area is better than it was. Our deposits are actually up a little because ranchers have cut back on spending. Loans are down but cattle prices are higher than most ranchers expected. Their losses are not as bad as anticipitated.

Complaints

"People aren't complaining so much about the price of cattle as they complain about repairs and things they have to buy to keep their ranches operating," he said.

James Tonniges of the Citizen State Bank at Clearwater said the number of yearling cattle is diminishing rapidly in the sandhills.

"There are 7,000 to 8,000 head going through the sale barns in our area every week. I am convinced that many are going to slaughter, not into the feedlot," he said.

Tonniges and Woods agree the feeder waiting to buy yearling cattle had better move quickly or the supply will be gone.

Arnold Otton of the Farmers National Bank of Pilger said there is little interest in feeding cattle in his area.

"There are a lot of weeds in the feedlots. We haven't seen any increase in hog production either, but the hog producer who stayed in business is a very happy man," he said.

All three bankers agree the hog producer could buy corn at current prices and feed hogs at a profit.

Farmers were given high marks for being better businessmen than they were several years ago by Ray Weilage of the National Bank of Commerce in Lincoln. Other bankers praised improvements in farmers' record keeping methods.

Weilage said the fear that many farmers would rush into hog production may have prevented a sharp increase in pork supplies.

Beef Prices Expected To Fall Further

Gibbon (UPI) — Retail beef prices have, in recent weeks, been on the decline and a Nebraska Beef Industry Foundation spokesman said Monday his organization fully expected that situation.

Jim Novotny of Gibbon, foundation program director, said prices at both wholesale and retail levels will generally be even a little lower in the coming months primarily because of more cattle going to market.

However, Novotny said he expects choice fed cattle prices to hold a lot better than was originally expected.

He said he and others feel that way because of a combination of things.

"First of all, there's quite a shortage of pork on the market and this is helping to pull up beef prices," he said.

Novotny said the demand for choice fed beef has remained consistently high even though prices have been high at the retail counter.

Motivation Symposium To Be UNL's Largest

The largest assemblage of psychologists in the history of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Symposium on Motivation is expected to attend this year's symposium at the Nebraska Center Oct. 6-7 and 9-10.

Dr. A. W. Landfield, NU professor of psychology and coordinator of this year's symposium, said a concept known as the personal construct theory, "which offers a way of looking at man's behavior in the context of his values and the way he views the world," will be examined at the symposium.

The symposium was first held in 1953 and has since become recognized as one of the nation's outstanding sources of information on modern thought and experimentation in psychology. Usually held in separate sessions in the fall and spring, papers presented at the symposium and summaries of discussion are published by the University of Nebraska Press.

Dr. Richard Dienstbier, chairman of the NU psychology department, said anywhere from 175 to 250 psychologists, including an unusually large number from Europe, will attend the symposium, which he said usually draws about 150 to 200 psychologists.

Because of a unifying theoretical focus and the many contributors, discussion leaders and other participants from overseas, the symposium will be held in its entirety during the week of Oct. 6, rather than in separate sessions in the fall and spring.

Psychologist To Visit NWU For Conference

A distinguished American psychologist will visit the Nebraska Wesleyan University campus Thursday for a two-day psychology conference for high school and college students.

Dr. Harry Harlow, a honorary research professor at the University of Arizona, will receive the $25,000 Kittay Scientific Foundation award this fall. The award is given to an outstanding researcher in mental health.

The Fairfield, Iowa, native has spent about 45 years studying primate learning and emotional responses. He received the American Psychological Foundation Gold Medal Award for 1973 to recognize his distinguished record of scientific and scholarly accomplishment.

Harlow will review the progress of psychology during his career at 7 p.m. Thursday, in the Callen Conference Center. He will deliver an address at 10 a.m. Friday, in O'Donnell Auditorium, entitled "The Nature of Love — 1975."

About 600 hgih school students are expected to attend the conference.

VA To Hold Open House

The Veterans Administration Regional Office will hold an open house from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sept. 24 and 25, VA Director James Smith has announced.

Smith said the public is invited to tour the office, in the Federal Building at 15th and O Sts. and view a bicentennial military display. The tours will begin in Room 111.

Trade Surplus Dips

Wiesbaden, West Germany (AP)—West Germany's balance of trade surplus for August sharply declined to $671 million from $1.42 billion in July, the Federal Statistics Office announced.

Prof. Robert Beadell

Prof. Beadell Wins Award From ASCAP

A music professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has been awarded a prize in recognition of his outstanding compositions.

Robert Beadell, professor of composition and theory in the school of music at UNL, has been selected for a 1975-76 American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers Award.

ASCAP grants these awards, Beadell said, on the basis of a composer's performed or published works.

Beadell compositions premiered in Nebraska during the past year include: "Elegy for the Duke," "Americana Suite" and "L'Envoi."

Beadell said he is currently working on a theatre piece for the Bicentennial. The work, based on a short story by Willa Cather, will be premiered by the UNL opera workshop in the summer of 1976, he said.

Warner Gets 'Legs'

Hollywood (UPI) — Warner Bros. acquired screen rights to "Legs," a new novel based on the life of gangster Jack "Legs" Diamond, by William Kennedy.

Special Ed Unit Plans Conference

The Special Education-Mainstream Advisory Council will meet Friday to discuss ways of providing teachers with the competencies needed to assist handicapped children in regular classrooms.

The advisory council includes all department chairmen in teachers colleges, representatives of the legislature, parents of handicapped children, and representatives of various agencies involved in special education for the handicapped.

The council was formed last summer under a program funded through a federal grant aimed at implementing the "mainstreaming" of handicapped youngsters into regular school classes.

Project Administrator at the University of Nebraska is Roger Bruning, associate professor of educational psychology and measurments. Judy Johnson, administrative assistant for the project, said other advisory council conferences will be held in the winter and spring.

The conference Friday will begin with a noon luncheon at which Robert Egbert, dean of the NU Teachers College, will be speaker. Others who will speak at the conference include Bruning and Dewaine A. Alcorn, associate professor of educational psychology and measurements and director of the Educational Psychology clinic.

Energy Use Falling

Washington (UPI) — Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb told President Ford the nation's energy consumption is beginning to fall "in all areas" in response to the administration's pleas for conservation and to rising prices.

Morning Briefing

FOOTBALL

Two Colorado players are listed among national college football leaders, according to rankings released by the NCAA Statistics Service. Quarterback David Williams ranks sixth in total offense with an average of 215.5 yards per game, while fullback Terry Kunz ranks fifth in rushing with an average of 141.5 yards per game. Mike Renfro of Texas Christian, Nebraska's opponent this Saturday, has averaged 6 pass receptions per game to rank sixth in that category.

Daryle Lamonica has left the Southern California Sun, Larry Hatfield, club president, said the former Oakland standout told him he was unhappy about lack of playing time, the way the offense was being coached and the coaches' attitude toward him.

Claude Humphrey, the Atlanta Falcons' defensive end who was lost for the season with a knee injury three weeks ago, has been back in the hospital the past week. He was readmitted Sept. 16 with blood clotting in his lungs, but the team physician said he should leave the hospital by this weekend.

Rep. Torbert H. MacDonald, D-Mass., who engineered the temporary ban on television blackouts of sold-out sporting events, said he will propose that the ban be made permanent. The ban is scheduled to expire next year.

Guard Ed Budde of the Kansas City Chiefs was scheduled to undergo knee surgery. He suffered cartilage damage in his right knee Sunday in the fourth quarter of the Chiefs' 37-33 loss to Denver.

Joe Washington of Oklahoma has been named Big Eight offensive player of the week. He rushed for 166 yards in 23 carries and scored three touchdowns in Oklahoma's 46-10 win over Pittsburgh. John O'Leary was Nebraska's nominee.

National Football League players will vote on a contract proposal which management representatives "don't believe they can turn down." it was announced Tuesday. Player representatives, charging that management has changed its position little in two days of negotiations, decided to submit the contract proposal made by management Monday for a vote of the players.

BASEBALL

Kansas City Royals' pitcher Steve Busby will miss his last two starts, manager Whitey Herzog said Tuesday. Busby, 18-12, has been bothered by soreness in his arm.

Boston Red Sox rookie left fielder Jim Rice does not require surgery for his broken left hand, but he will be lost for the rest of the season.

Relief pitcher Sparky Lyle of the New York Yankees said he wants to be traded, and if the club refuses his request, he will play without a contract next year. He said he has not been playing as often as he would like.

A Seattle group has offered $15 million for the San Francisco Giants and their real estate holdings, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer reported Tuesday.

The Milwaukee Brewers have fined outfielder Sixto Lezcano and suspended him for the rest of the season after he argued with Brewer manager Del Crandall.

Rico Carty, designated hitter for the Cleveland Indians, Tuesday was released from the hospital, where he was taken for X rays and observation after being beaned during a Monday night game.

BASKETBALL

The NCAA has found Clemson University guilty of illegal basketball recruiting practices and placed the school on two years probation, the Greenville Piedmont said Tuesday.

The newly formed Metro Six Athletic Conference said Tuesday it will have an automatic berth in the NCAA Midwest regional basketball tournament next March. Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis, Memphis State, Tulane and Georgia Tech are the six school in the conference.

Reserve guard Ron Williams Tuesday was traded by the Milwaukee Bucks to the Los Angeles Lakers for a future National Basketball Association draft choice.

Kentucky Colonel coach Hubie Brown said Tuesday he had nothing to do with the Colonels' trade of Dan Issel to the Baltimore Claws, a trade the veteran forward still refuses to accept.

OTHER SPORTS

Top-seeded Guillermo Vilas of Argentina used strong ground strokes to defeat Mike Estep of Dallas, 6-1, 6-4, in the first round of the $100,000 Fireman's Fund International Tennis Tournament. Sixth-ranked Harold Solomon lost to Californian Jeff Borowiak, 6-3, 6-4.

Tony Petronelli, welterweight contender from Brockton, Mass., injured his hand in training, forcing a postponement of Saturday's scheduled title fight with World Boxing Association champion Angel Luis Espada.

New Jersey construction millionaire John J. Brunetti has offered $15 million to sportsman John Galbreath for his nearly bankrupt Hialeah race track, informed sources said.

Hundreds Drown Trying To Escape

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Several hundred Meo refugees drowned while trying to cross a raging mountain river to escape a Pathet Lao shelling barrage on their jungle camp just inside northern Thailand, according to reports reaching here Tuesday.

The survivors reached Mae Charim district on Sept. 10 and told refugee officials, "People were washed away like flies as they tried to swim the river," the reports said.

More than 5,000 Meo hill tribes people — all unwanted in Thailand — fled their Ban Nam Lan location when the Communist-led troops from neighboring Laos mortared the village, reliable sources from the area said.

About 40,000 Meo walked to Thailand after the Pathet Lao began to consolidate their control in Laos in May, many of them traveling three weeks from the old Central Intelligence Agency base at Long Cheng in northern Laos. More than 100 reportedly died of hunger on the way.

But Thailand does not want the Meo for fear of retaliatory attacks from Laos. Meo once formed the bulk of the CIA's secret army against the Pathet Lao. The military disarmed them when they reached Thailand.

When the Meo fled the recent mortar attack, Thai military officials tried to force them out of Mae Charim back to Ban Nam Lan, but they ran into the hills.

105 In Memoriams

In loving memory of Alfred Dewey Brott, who passed away 35 years ago today. It broke my heart to lose you, but you did not go alone, for part of me went with you, though you felt you were alone. A million times I've longed for you, a million times I've cried, and if love could have saved you, you never would have died. In my heart your memory lingers, sweetly tender, fond and true. There is not a day, dear Daddy, that I do not think of you. Your loving daughter, Paulene. 24

First National again proudly presents...

"Dress A Doll"
...a fun way for you to help bring joy to some needy child at Christmas!

First introduced a year ago, "Dress A Doll" is a program that brought special joy to more than 200 needy children in Lincoln last Christmas. Each received a beautiful new doll...one that was fully attired in a very specially created and hand-crafted outfit.

Because of the marvelous response to the program, First National is expanding "Dress A Doll" this year. The objective...to provide for fulfilling the dreams of more than 300 underprivileged youngsters this Christmas.

Here's how "Dress A Doll" works...

The dolls are supplied by First National Lincoln. The outfits are created by individuals of all ages who enjoy designing and making doll clothes and who also have a desire to bring special happiness to some needy child at Christmas.

To participate, you simply stop in at any of First National's three handy locations and pick up a doll—no cash deposit, no charge.

Take the doll home with you and fashion an outfit for it...fancy dress, casual clothes, knit and crochet, storybook character, or a colorful costume worn in some foreign land.

When you have completed the outfit you have designed and tailored for your doll, bring the costumed doll to First National—any time prior to November 5

All dolls will be displayed in the lobby of First National's Main Bank at 13th and M from November 12 through December 19. Special awards will be made for various dress classifications and for those participants 15 years of age and under based on the decisions of a panel of judges.

The outfitted dolls will then be donated to the Salvation Army for distribution to families of needy children at Christmas.

"Dress A Doll"...it's a fun way for you to help answer some child's dream at Christmas. We invite your participation.

Grange Chief Says Ford Broke Pledge

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

"The president broke his promise to farmers when he vetoed the farm bill last spring. He said that he wouldn't impose export limits, but he did it again today by banning exports to Poland," John Scott, national master of the Grange, said Tuesday.

Scott is in Lincoln for the annual state convention of the Nebraska Grange at the Cornhusker Hotel which runs through Wednesday.

Scott cited several issues he described as "particularly hot in Congress now."

"The one that has all of Congress stirred up is the issue of the Environmental Protection Agency cancelling agricultural chemicals. Each time they ban a chemical its replacement is less effective and more expensive," he said.

Minimal Funding

Scott noted that Congress had extended the life of the EPA only one year by a minimal funding of its operations. "I think they have gotten the word that they must present better scientific evidence of their positions before banning a product," he said.

"The real problem is the Delaney amendment, which bans any trace of a residue known to cause cancer. This needs to be modified. DES is being banned by the Senate, yet it is allowed to be prescribed as a morning-after contraceptive in a dose thousands of times stronger than any possible residue in beef liver," he said.

Scott is worried about fuel supplies for farmers, but pleased about one promise President Ford did keep. "He promised that he would arrange a refund of 6 cents a gallon to farmers for fuel used for actual farming. This is a rebate on the import tax charged for imported oil," he said.

Fuel Priorities

The area of concern is for farm fuels priorities, including those used to make fertilizer. "Unless we get those reinstated, farmers could be in trouble," he warned.

John Scott

Scott said the Grange would support a bill in Congress to establish a special checkoff for beef producers to fund promotion and research on beef, but would oppose an amendment that would include consumers on such a board.

"It is ridiculous to expect consumers to serve on a board that is entirely funded by farmers. I expect they will vote on it Wednesday but I don't know how it will come out," he said.

Scott thinks farmers should give some thought to promoting meat exports. "We need to follow Japan's example by selling the finished product instead of raw materials, in this case grain," he suggested.

Ban 'Ridiculous'

Scott added that "it is ridiculous to ban exports of wheat at a time when we have about 2½ billion bushels and can use only between 600 and 700 million bushels of it."

"As long as the State Department makes agricultural export policy there isn't much a farmer can do about it. I do wish every farmer would personally write to the President and tell him how he feels abut having his export market cut off. He has given in to the unions and broken his promise to farmers," Scott said.

Scott predicted tht Congress will eventually pass a bill designed to protect farmers when a meat packing company goes broke, but added, "Unless the Office of Management and Budget or the President changes his mind there is a good chance he will veto it."

"We favor a state-federal grain inspection system which is another hot issue in Congress. You can't have a good system when it is controlled by the exporters who are supposed to be the ones inspected," he said.

Scott noted that while farm influence is waning in Congress it is likely to get worse. "Many of farmers' friends in Congress are men and women who have seniority and are powerful. When we lose them we will really be in trouble," he predicted.

Scott said the Grange is still a largely rural organization. "We have about 40% urband and 50% or 55% farm membership. City membership is made up mostly of the children of farmers who were Grange members. My own Grange now has 600 members but perhaps a half dozen are all that are active farmers. With land selling for $6,000 an acre they were forced out of agriculture," he said.

Scott said Grange membership is holding up "reasonably well when compared to rural populations."

Grain Storage Capacity Adequate

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Nebraska has enough storage on the farm and in elevators to tuck away the entire bumper crop the state's farmers expect to harvest this year.

But it may not all be in the right place.

According to Doug Murfield, head of the State-Federal Division of Agricultural Statistics, the state at one time had storage capacity to handle 91 million bushels of government-owned grain, but that has all been sold.

Even though 85% of the storage was sold to farmers (the remainder went to grain elevators), almost all of it is still available as grain storage, according to Murfield.

"I think 900 million bushels of storage on farms today might be a safe figure," he said. "We made our last survey in 1974 with 800 million bushels, and I'm sure it has increased since then."

The farm storage and the 453-million-bushel capacity of the state's elevators make Nebraska an important reservoir of grain for the world. It claims one-sixth of U.S. storage capacity, Murfield said.

Many other states have elevators that insist on handling crops one at a time, but most of the larger elevators in Nebraska take in corn, grain sorghum and soybeans at the same time.

In addition to elevator grain-drying facilities, there are 34,000 grain dryers on Nebraska farms. All of these storage and grain-drying facilities are going into operation as the harvest of feed grains and soybeans gets under way.

Agriculture officials believe every bit of Nebraska's grain storage may be needed because transportation problems already are beginning to develop as harvest and export shipments create demands on railroads.

A spokesman for the Association of Railroads (AAR) reports there is a surplus of 13,180 cars. However, some of them are not suitable to move grain. AAR estimates that 30% of all hopper cars, and 30% of all boxcars are currently being used to move grain.

More and more cars are being tied up at ports, but AAR is moving quickly with embargoes to head off large backlogs of loaded cars there.

This week, embargoes were announced on four elevators at Superior, Wis., two at Duluth, Minn., and one each at Portland, Ore., and Seattle, Wash.

Great Lakes elevators have gone to a 24-hour workday in an effort to unplug the grain movement system in that area of the nation.

No embargoes were reported at Gulf ports. However, there was some spotty congestion at Houston as a result of labor problems.

Combines were reported to be harvesting wheat faster than elevators in the Pacific Northwest could handle it. However, this is regarded as a temporary local problem.

U.S. government records show that 522,000 metric tons of wheat were shipped to the Soviet Union between July 1 and Aug. 31.

Other data available from various sources within the industry indicate that 376,000 tons of new-crop wheat have been shipped by two large grain companies selling grain to Russia. The dates of these shipments are not available. Government statisticians say they think only 200,000 tons of it may be new wheat, but that is only an estimate.

Beef Prices Expected To Fall Further

Gibbon (UPI) — Retail beef prices have, in recent weeks, been on the decline and a Nebraska Beef Industry Foundation spokesman said Monday his organization fully expected that situation.

Jim Novotny of Gibbon, foundation program director, said prices at both wholesale and retail levels will generally be even a little lower in the coming months primarily because of more cattle going to market.

However, Novotny said he expects choice fed cattle prices to hold a lot better than was originally expected.

He said he and others feel that way because of a combination of things.

"First of all, there's quite a shortage of pork on the market and this is helping to pull up beef prices," he said.

Novotny said the demand for choice fed beef has remained consistently high even though prices have been high at the retail counter.

Bankers Bullish On Cattle Business

By DOMINICK COSTELLO
Farm Editor

Country bankers attending the Nebraska Bankers Agricultural Credit Symposium in Lincoln are bullish about the future of the cattle business in Nebraska.

One banker predicted cattle would bring $60 per hundredweight in 1976.

The basis for such optimism is the rapid dissappearance of big feeder cattle and old cows from ranches in the state.

Gene Woods of the Purdum State Bank said, "The mood of the cattlemen in our area is better than it was. Our deposits are actually up a little because ranchers have cut back on spending. Loans are down but cattle prices are higher than most ranchers expected. Their losses are not as bad as anticipitated.

Complaints

"People aren't complaining so much about the price of cattle as they complain about repairs and things they have to buy to keep their ranches operating," he said.

James Tonniges of the Citizen State Bank at Clearwater said the number of yearling cattle is diminishing rapidly in the sandhills.

"There are 7,000 to 8,000 head going through the sale barns in our area every week. I am convinced that many are going to slaughter, not into the feedlot," he said.

Tonniges and Woods agree the feeder waiting to buy yearling cattle had better move quickly or the supply will be gone.

Arnold Otton of the Farmers National Bank of Pilger said there is little interest in feeding cattle in his area.

"There are a lot of weeds in the feedlots. We haven't seen any increase in hog production either, but the hog producer who stayed in business is a very happy man," he said.

All three bankers agree the hog producer could buy corn at current prices and feed hogs at a profit.

Farmers were given high marks for being better businessmen than they were several years ago by Ray Weilage of the National Bank of Commerce in Lincoln. Other bankers praised improvements in farmers' record keeping methods.

Weilage said the fear that many farmers would rush into hog production may have prevented a sharp increase in pork supplies.

Motivation Symposium To Be UNL's Largest

The largest assemblage of psychologists in the history of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln's Symposium on Motivation is expected to attend this year's symposium at the Nebraska Center Oct. 6-7 and 9-10.

Dr. A. W. Landfield, NU professor of psychology and coordinator of this year's symposium, said a concept known as the personal construct theory, "which offers a way of looking at man's behavior in the context of his values and the way he views the world," will be examined at the symposium.

The symposium was first held in 1953 and has since become recognized as one of the nation's outstanding sources of information on modern thought and experimentation in psychology. Usually held in separate sessions in the fall and spring, papers presented at the symposium and summaries of discussion are published by the University of Nebraska Press.

Dr. Richard Dienstbier, chairman of the NU psychology department, said anywhere from 175 to 250 psychologists, including an unusually large number from Europe, will attend the symposium, which he said usually draws about 150 to 200 psychologists.

Because of a unifying theoretical focus and the many contributors, discussion leaders and other participants from overseas, the symposium will be held in its entirety during the week of Oct. 6, rather than in separate sessions in the fall and spring.

Psychologist To Visit NWU For Conference

A distinguished American psychologist will visit the Nebraska Wesleyan University campus Thursday for a two-day psychology conference for high school and college students.

Dr. Harry Harlow, a honorary research professor at the University of Arizona, will receive the $25,000 Kittay Scientific Foundation award this fall. The award is given to an outstanding researcher in mental health.

The Fairfield, Iowa, native has spent about 45 years studying primate learning and emotional responses. He received the American Psychological Foundation Gold Medal Award for 1973 to recognize his distinguished record of scientific and scholarly accomplishment.

Harlow will review the progress of psychology during his career at 7 p.m. Thursday, in the Callen Conference Center. He will deliver an address at 10 a.m. Friday, in O'Donnell Auditorium, entitled "The Nature of Love — 1975."

About 600 hgih school students are expected to attend the conference.

VA To Hold Open House

The Veterans Administration Regional Office will hold an open house from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Sept. 24 and 25, VA Director James Smith has announced.

Smith said the public is invited to tour the office, in the Federal Building at 15th and O Sts. and view a bicentennial military display. The tours will begin in Room 111.

Trade Surplus Dips

Wiesbaden, West Germany (AP)—West Germany's balance of trade surplus for August sharply declined to $671 million from $1.42 billion in July, the Federal Statistics Office announced.

Prof. Robert Beadell

Prof. Beadell Wins Award From ASCAP

A music professor at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln has been awarded a prize in recognition of his outstanding compositions.

Robert Beadell, professor of composition and theory in the school of music at UNL, has been selected for a 1975-76 American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers Award.

ASCAP grants these awards, Beadell said, on the basis of a composer's performed or published works.

Beadell compositions premiered in Nebraska during the past year include: "Elegy for the Duke," "Americana Suite" and "L'Envoi."

Beadell said he is currently working on a theatre piece for the Bicentennial. The work, based on a short story by Willa Cather, will be premiered by the UNL opera workshop in the summer of 1976, he said.

Special Ed Unit Plans Conference

The Special Education-Mainstream Advisory Council will meet Friday to discuss ways of providing teachers with the competencies needed to assist handicapped children in regular classrooms.

The advisory council includes all department chairmen in teachers colleges, representatives of the legislature, parents of handicapped children, and representatives of various agencies involved in special education for the handicapped.

The council was formed last summer under a program funded through a federal grant aimed at implementing the "mainstreaming" of handicapped youngsters into regular school classes.

Project Administrator at the University of Nebraska is Roger Bruning, associate professor of educational psychology and measurments. Judy Johnson, administrative assistant for the project, said other advisory council conferences will be held in the winter and spring.

The conference Friday will begin with a noon luncheon at which Robert Egbert, dean of the NU Teachers College, will be speaker. Others who will speak at the conference include Bruning and Dewaine A. Alcorn, associate professor of educational psychology and measurements and director of the Educational Psychology clinic.

Energy Use Falling

Washington (UPI) — Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb told President Ford the nation's energy consumption is beginning to fall "in all areas" in response to the administration's pleas for conservation and to rising prices.

Hundreds Drown Trying To Escape

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Several hundred Meo refugees drowned while trying to cross a raging mountain river to escape a Pathet Lao shelling barrage on their jungle camp just inside northern Thailand, according to reports reaching here Tuesday.

The survivors reached Mae Charim district on Sept. 10 and told refugee officials, "People were washed away like flies as they tried to swim the river," the reports said.

More than 5,000 Meo hill tribes people — all unwanted in Thailand — fled their Ban Nam Lan location when the Communist-led troops from neighboring Laos mortared the village, reliable sources from the area said.

About 40,000 Meo walked to Thailand after the Pathet Lao began to consolidate their control in Laos in May, many of them traveling three weeks from the old Central Intelligence Agency base at Long Cheng in northern Laos. More than 100 reportedly died of hunger on the way.

But Thailand does not want the Meo for fear of retaliatory attacks from Laos. Meo once formed the bulk of the CIA's secret army against the Pathet Lao. The military disarmed them when they reached Thailand.

When the Meo fled the recent mortar attack, Thai military officials tried to force them out of Mae Charim back to Ban Nam Lan, but they ran into the hills.

105 In Memoriams

In loving memory of Alfred Dewey Brott, who passed away 35 years ago today. It broke my heart to lose you, but you did not go alone, for part of me went with you, though you felt you were alone. A million times I've longed for you, a million times I've cried, and if love could have saved you, you never would have died. In my heart your memory lingers, sweetly tender, fond and true. There is not a day, dear Daddy, that I do not think of you. Your loving daughter. Paulene 24

ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

☆ By SIDNEY OMARR ☆

Forecast for Wednesday

Holding the attention of the Fire signs is a feat worthy of the best teachers and entertainers. The Fire signs are Aries, Leo and Sagittarius. These persons are curious about life and people, their minds race, their ideas flow, they challenge and question and their attention span leaves a lot to be desired. Fire sign men have high foreheads; the women have "sultry" eyes. When you talk to a person belonging to this trinity, move your hands, sway your hips, draw pictures, drop a coin, anything to capture and hold the attention of this provocative man or woman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Accent on money, possessions, obtaining valid appraisals where valuables are concerned. Payments, collections also are featured. Now is time to settle family, property affair. You get true picture and could save time and money.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Cycle is such that you meet people who make you happy. There is chance to travel and experiment. Watch diet, unless weight means nothing to you. Personality shines, popularity increases. Gemini, Sagittarius persons could be involved. Trust your own judgment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some restrictions are for your own benefit. This also applies to temporary delays. Hospital visit could be on agenda. It won't be serious — could merely be for purpose of checking on a friend. You untangle puzzle and pieces fall into place.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent is on friendship, romantic interlude, good news resulting from professional endeavors. Make inquiries. Get thoughts, promises in writing. If you display interest, others will respond. Member of opposite sex makes it clear that you are important!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You gain greater perspective. Your sense of balance is enhanced. Family, home, diplomacy, ability to come to terms with what appears an intolerable situation — these areas are emphasized. Taurus, Libra are likely to be in picture.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on faraway places, foreign languages, correspondence, publishing and communications. You learn what it is you seek. Spiritual values come into focus. Your goal may now be different. You are growing — and that is all to the good.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get down to business in connection with who owns what, who pays for what, who collects, who keeps track of legal papers. Key is organization — get priorities in order. Relationship intensifies. Game-playing is a past phase. Now it is all or nothing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Emphasis on contracts, cooperative efforts, partnership, public relations and marriage. You see what's ahead — and you could be in position to do something about what you perceive. Aries, Libra are likely to be in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): New conditions arise in connection with job, everyday routine. You get chance to express yourself in a more independent manner. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Remember diet resolutions — try to avoid extremes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good Moon aspect coincides now with affairs of heart, excitement of discovery. Your creative endeavors are likely to be crowned with success. Change of scenery would be beneficial. Cancer and another Capricorn could be in picture.

AQAARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Confusion may exist in connection with future plans involving travel. Facts, figures concerning costs are available. Make inquiries — highlight versatility. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Ideas become more "solid." You get results. Short trip is on schedule. Read fine print. Don't sell yourself short. You make gains if familiar with basic material. Don't take situations or people for granted. Be trusting, not foolish.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDDAY You have melodious voice, a sweet tooth and you are capable of a fight when the cause is right. Taurus, Libra persons play important roles in your life. Project started this year will bear fruit. You are beginning to build toward greater emotional and financial security.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4 If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.
